The Convention should not involve appreciable administrative costs to the U.S. Government. The rules of the Convention apply to estates, gifts, and generation-skipping transfers which even in the absence of the Convention would be subject to U.S. statutory law, and would therefore have to be subject to return requirements, audit and collection procedures, and the like, under statutory law. The Convention only results in substitute or supplementary legal rules governing the taxation of such transfers, and as such should not result in any measurable administrative costs.

TECHNICAL EXPLANATION[1] OF THE CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE FRENCH REPUBLIC FOR THE AVOIDANCE OF DOUBLE TAXATION AND THE PREVENTION OF FISCAL EVASION WITH RESPECT TO TAXES ON ESTATES, INHERITANCES, AND GIFTS, SIGNED AT WASHINGTON ON NOVEMBER 24, 1978[2]

Introduction

The Estate and Gift Tax Convention with France is the second such Convention signed by the United States since U.S. estate and gift tax laws were substantially modified in the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. Modification included combining the separate estate and gift tax rates into a single rate schedule, substituting a unified credit for the former separate estate and gift tax exemptions, and imposing a tax on generation-skipping transfers. The Convention will replace the existing estate tax convention between the two countries, which has been in force since 1946 [1956-1 C.B. 837].

The Convention is similar to the United States Estate Tax Convention with the Netherlands [1976-1 C.B. 471], which entered into force in 1971, and to the United States Model Estate and Gift Tax Convention published by the Treasury Department on March 16, 1977. The Convention is also based, in part, on the provisions of the Model Estate Tax Convention (Draft Double Taxation Convention on Estates and Inheritances) of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), published in 1966.

The general principle underlying the Convention is that the primary right to tax the worldwide estate, gifts, or generation-skipping transfers of a decedent, donor, or deemed transferor should lie with the country of domicile. Property situated in the other State is either exempted from tax in that State or the tax levied by that State is allowed as a credit in the State of domicile. Immovable (real) property, certain business assets, and certain categories of tangible movable (personal) property are the types of property that are taxable in the State of situs. The Convention also contemplates that the United States will impose a tax on the worldwide property of its citizens, but that it will allow a credit for taxes paid to France by any person who was a domiciliary of France at the time of death, or at the time of a gift or generation-skipping transfer.

CHAPTER I
SCOPE OF THE CONVENTION

Article 1. Estates and Gifts Covered

This article describes the transfers of estates or by gift or generation-skipping transfer that are subject to the provisions of the Convention. Paragraph (1) provides that the Convention applies to estates of decedents whose domicile at death was in France, and to estates of decedents which are subject to the taxing jurisdiction of the United States by reason of the decedent's domicile in, or citizenship of, the United States at the time of death. The Convention does not apply to transfers of estates of decedents who were citizens of France at the time of their death, if they were not domiciled in France or the United States at that time. Under paragraph (1), the Convention applies to generation-skipping transfers deemed to occur at or after the death of the deemed transferor, if the deemed transferor was a citizen or domiciliary of the United States at the time of his death.

Paragraph (2) provides that the Convention applies to gifts of donors whose domicile at the time of making the gift was in France, and to gifts subject to the taxing jurisdiction of the United States by reason of the donor's domicile in, or citizenship of, the United States at the time of the gift. The Convention does not apply to gifts made by persons who were citizens of France, but not domiciled in either France or the United States, at the time of the making of the gift. Under paragraph (2), the Convention applies to transfers deemed to occur under the U.S. generation-skipping transfer tax at a time before the death of a deemed transferor, if the deemed transferor was a domiciliary or citizen of the United States at that time.

[1] It is the practice of the Treasury Department to prepare for the use of the Senate and other interested persons a Technical Explanation of the tax conventions which are submitted to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

An estate, inheritance, and gift tax convention with France was signed on November 24, 1978, and submitted by the President to the Senate on February 9, 1979. On June 6, 1979, The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations held hearings and this Technical Explanation was presented. The Senate voted its advice and consent on July 9, 1979, and instruments of ratification were exchanged on August 7, 1980.

Paragraph (3) provides that a person who is at the time of his death or the making of a gift a resident of a possession of the United States, and who acquired U.S. citizenship solely by being a citizen of such U.S. possession, or by birth or residence within such possession, is considered as being neither domiciled in, nor a citizen of, the U.S. for purposes of the Convention. Under sections 2208 and 2209 of the Internal Revenue Code, such persons are treated as nonresidents not citizens of the United States for purposes of U.S. estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer taxes, and therefore are not subject to such taxes on their worldwide property.

Article 2. Taxes Covered

Paragraph (1) identifies the taxes covered by the Convention. In the case of the United States, the Convention applies to the Federal gift tax and the Federal estate tax, including the tax on generation-skipping transfers. In the case of France, the Convention applies to the duty on gifts and the duty levied on succession. The Convention does not apply to any state, sub-Federal, or local taxes imposed in either Contracting State.

Paragraph (2) provides that the Convention also applies to any substantially similar taxes which are subsequently enacted in addition to, or in place of, the existing taxes. Under paragraph (3), the competent authorities of the Contracting States are required to notify each other of substantial changes in their respective laws relating to the taxation of estates and gifts.

Article 3. General Definitions

Paragraph (1) defines the terms "Contracting State" and "other Contracting States," "United States," "France," "enterprise," "tax," and "competent authority." The term "United States" does not include Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, or any other U.S. possession or territory. The term "France" includes the overseas departments of the French Republic.

Paragraph (2) provides that any term not otherwise defined in the Convention shall, unless the context otherwise requires, have the meaning which that term has under the tax laws of the Contracting State whose tax is being determined. If, however, the meaning of a term under the laws of one of the Contracting States is different from the meaning of the term under the laws of the other State, the two States may, in order to prevent double taxation or to further any other purpose of the Convention, establish a common meaning for purposes of the Convention.

Article 4. Fiscal Domicile

This Article sets forth rules for determining "domicile" for purposes of the Convention. The determination of a single fiscal domicile for Convention purposes is important, because the country of domicile has the primary right to tax the worldwide estate, gifts, or other transfers of a decedent, donor, or deemed transferor, with the exception of property covered by Articles 5 (Immovable (Real) Property), 6 (Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for the Performance of Professional Services), and 7 (Tangible Movable Property).

Under paragraph (1), domicile is determined in the first instance under the domestic law of the respective Contracting States. Paragraphs (2) and (3) set forth rules for resolving cases of double domicile—where each State considers a person domiciled in that State under its domestic law. Under paragraph (2) such a person is deemed domiciled in the Contracting State in which he maintained his permanent home. If he has a permanent home in both Contracting States or in neither State, he is deemed domiciled in the Contracting State with which his personal relations were closest (his center of vital interests). If his center of vital interests cannot be determined, his domicile is deemed to be in the State in which he had an habitual abode. If he had an habitual abode in both Contracting States or neither of them, his domicile is deemed to be in the State of which he was a citizen. If he was a citizen of neither Contracting State or of both, his domicile is to be determined by the competent authorities by mutual agreement.

Paragraph (3) provides special rules for cases of double domicile with respect to individuals who were citizens of only one of the Contracting States. These special rules override the general rules of paragraph (2). Paragraph (3)(a) provides that such an individual shall be deemed domiciled in the Contracting State of which he was a citizen if he had a clear intention of retaining his domicile in that State, and if he was domiciled in the other Contracting State in the aggregate less than 5 years during the 7-year period ending on the date of his death or the making of a gift. In the case of a generation-skipping transfer, the relevant 7-year period ends with the year during which the transfer is deemed made, in the case of a transfer deemed made before the death of the deemed transferor, and with the year of death, in the event a transfer is deemed made at or after the death of the deemed transferor. Paragraph (3)(b) provides that an individual with "double domicile" but "single citizenship" shall be deemed domiciled in the Contracting State of which he was a citizen, even in the absence of a clear intention of retaining his domicile in that State, if he was domiciled in the other Contracting State in the aggregate less than 5 years during the 7-year period ending with the year of his death or the making of a gift, provided he was in the other State by reason of an assignment of employment or as the spouse or other dependent of a person present in that State for such a purpose; or if he was domiciled in the other Contracting State in the aggregate less than 7 years during the 10-year period ending with the year of his death or the making of a gift, provided he was in the other State by reason of a renewal of an assignment of employment, or as the spouse or other dependent of a person present in the other State for such a purpose. These domicile rules are reciprocal.

If the rules of paragraph (3) do not apply to an individual who would be deemed under paragraph (1) to be domiciled in both Contracting States, but who is a citizen of only one of the Contracting States, then that individual's domicile shall be determined in accordance with the rules of paragraph (2).

CHAPTER III
TAXING RULES

Article 5. Immovable (Real) Property

This Article provides that immovable property may be taxed in a Contracting State if such property is situated in that State. The term "immovable (real) property" is defined in accordance with the tax laws of the Contracting State in which such property is situated.

Under paragraph (3), the provisions of Article 5 apply to property which forms part of the business property of a permanent establishment or is used for the performance of professional services or other independent activities of a similar character. For example, real property situated in France owned by a domiciliary of France not a citizen of the U.S. which formed part of the business property of a permanent establishment in the United States would be subject to tax in France and not in the United States.

Article 6. Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for the Performance of Professional Services

Paragraph (1) establishes the general rule that, except as provided in Article 5 (Immovable (Real) Property), and with the exception of ships and aircraft operated in international traffic and movable property pertaining to the operation of such ships and aircraft, assets forming part of the business property of a permanent establishment of an enterprise may be taxed by a Contracting State if the permanent establishment is situated in that State.

Paragraph (2) defines the term "permanent establishment" as a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on. The definition is substantially similar to the definition of "permanent establishment" in Article 4 of the Income Tax Convention between the United States and the French Republic signed on July 28, 1967 [1968-2 C.B. 691, 693]. Illustrations in paragraph (3) of a permanent establishment include a branch; an office; a factory; a workshop; a warehouse; a mine, quarry, or other place of extraction of natural resources; and a building site or construction or installation project which lasts for more than twelve months. The twelve month period for a construction or installation project begins when work physically commences in the other Contracting State. A series of contracts or projects which are interdependent both commercially and geographically is to be treated as a single project for the purpose of applying the twelve-months test.

Paragraph (4) provides that a permanent establishment does not include: the use of facilities solely for the purpose of storage, display, or delivery of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise; the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise solely for the purpose of processing by another enterprise; the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purpose of purchasing goods or merchandise, or of collecting information, for the enterprise; the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purpose of advertising, supplying information, conducting scientific research, or similar activities which have a preparatory or auxiliary character; or the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for investment purposes (and not for purposes of engaging in industrial or commercial activity) of an individual, whether by the individual or his employees or through a broker or other agent. These exceptions are cumulative; a fixed place of business used solely for one or more of these purposes will not be considered a permanent establishment under the Convention.

Under paragraph (5), a person, other than an agent of an independent status to whom paragraph (4)(f) or (6) applies, acting in one Contracting State on behalf of an enterprise of the other Contracting State, will be deemed to constitute a permanent establishment if such person has, and habitually exercises in this first-mentioned Contracting State, an authority to conclude contracts in the name of the enterprise, unless that person's activities are limited to the purchase of goods or merchandise for the enterprise.

On the other hand, paragraph (6) provides that an enterprise of one Contracting State will not be deemed to have a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State merely because such enterprise carries on business in the other Contracting State through a broker, general commission agent, or any other agent of an independent status, where the broker or agent is acting in the ordinary course of his business.

Under paragraph (7), the fact that an enterprise controls a corporation which is engaged in industrial or commercial activity in a Contracting State (whether through a permanent establishment or otherwise) is not to be taken into account in determining whether the enterprise had a permanent establishment in that State.

Paragraph (8) provides that, except for assets described in Article 5 (Immovable (Real) Property), assets pertaining to a fixed base used for the performance of independent personal services may be taxed by a Contracting State if the fixed base is situated in that State.

Article 7. Tangible Movable Property

Under paragraph (1), tangible movable property other than currency may be taxed by a Contracting State if the property is situated in that State, and if the property does not form part of the business assets of a permanent establishment situated in the other Contracting State. Tangible movable property for purposes of the wealth transfer taxes imposed by the United States includes whatever property would be considered tangible property under section 2501(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code other than property which would be considered real property. Paragraph (1) provides that tangible movable property which is in transit is to be considered situated at the place of its destination.

Under paragraph (2), notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (1), tangible movable property owned by an individual referred to in paragraph (3) of Article 4 and used for that person's normal personal use or that of his family may be taxed only by the Contracting State in which the individual was domiciled. Under this paragraph, personal property owned by a person who has "double domicile" but who is taxable in the state of his citizenship by virtue of Article 4(3) will be taxable only in the State of citizenship.

Under paragraph (3), notwithstanding paragraph (1), ships and aircraft operated in international traffic, and movable property pertaining to the operation of such ships and aircraft, may be taxed by a Contracting State if the ship or aircraft is registered in that Contracting State. In addition, a ship or aircraft not registered in a Contracting State may be taxed by a Contracting State if the harbors or airports most frequently used by such ship or aircraft are situated in that State.

Article 8. Taxation Other Than Pursuant to Articles 5, 6 and 7

Article 8 states that, except as provided in Articles 5, 6, and 7, property, including shares of stock in a corporation, debt obligations (whether or not there is written evidence of such obligations), other intangible property, and currency may be taxed by a Contracting State only if the decedent or donor was a citizen of, or was domiciled in, that State at the time of death or the making of the gift, and only if the transfer was taxable by that State under its law. The proviso that the transfer must be taxable under the law of the State of domicile or citizenship is intended to ensure that the Convention not be interpreted as permitting a tax not contemplated by internal law.

Article 9. Deduction of Debts

Under paragraph (1), debts, to the extent they are deductible according to the internal law of a Contracting State, are to be deducted from the gross value of property which may be taxed by that State in the proportion that that gross value bears to the gross value of the entire property wherever situated. Under U.S. law, the proration required by paragraph (1) will be made only with respect to transfers of estates of decedents and generation-skipping transfers deemed to occur at or after the death of the deemed transferor. U.S. gift tax law, which in these respects also supplies the law applicable to generation-skipping transfers deemed to occur before the death of the deemed transferor, does not provide a deduction for debts. However, if a donee of a gift, or a transferee of a deemed generation-skipping transfer, assumes a liability in connection with a gift or transfer, the value of the gift or transfer subject to tax will ordinarily be the value of the property transferred net of the liability assumed.

Paragraph (2)(a) provides that, notwithstanding paragraph (1), for purposes of determining French tax debts pertaining to a permanent establishment or to a fixed base used for the performance of independent personal services are to be deducted from the value of assets referred to in Article 6. These deductions are to be allowed, regardless of whether they would be allowed according to French internal law. Under paragraph (2)(b), again notwithstanding paragraph (1), for purposes of determining French tax debts pertaining to ships and aircraft operated in international traffic and to movable property related to the operation of such ships and aircraft are to be deducted from the value of the property to which such debts pertain. These deductions too are to be allowed regardless of whether they would be allowed according to French internal law.

Article 10. Charitable Exemptions and Deductions

Under paragraph (1), a transfer to a legal entity created or organized in a Contracting State is exempt from tax, or fully deductible from the gross value liable to tax, in the other Contracting State, with respect to taxes referred to in Article 2, if the transfer would be eligible for such exemption or deduction if the legal entity had been created or organized in the other Contracting State. Under paragraph (2), the provisions of paragraph (1) apply only if the legal entity to which property is transferred (a) has tax exempt status in the State in which it is created or organized by reason of which transfers to it are exempt or fully deductible from the taxes described in Article 2; (b) is organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes; and (c) receives a substantial part of its support from contributions from the public or from government funds. Under paragraph (3), the provisions of Article 10 apply to transfers to a Contracting State or a political or administrative subdivision of a Contracting State only if the transfers are specifically limited to a religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purpose.

The provisions of Article 10 apply to estates, gifts, and generation-skipping transfers regardless of where the property transferred is situated. In addition, Article 10 requires a Contracting State to exempt or give a full deduction for property situated in that Contracting State transferred by a person who is a domiciliary of that State, if the property is transferred to an entity of the other Contracting State which meets the conditions set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2).

Article 11. Community Property and Marital Deduction

Under paragraph (1), property (other than community property) which was acquired during marriage for consideration by an individual who at the time of death or the making of a gift was domiciled in or a citizen of the United States, and which passes to the spouse, and which under the Convention is taxable by France, whether by virtue of Article 5, 6, or 7 or by virtue of the fact that the individual was domiciled in France, is treated as if it were community property, unless the spouses have elected expressly to have the property treated other than as community property under French civil law.

Under paragraph (2), in the case of an individual domiciled in France, there must be allowed, for purposes of determining the United States tax upon property taxable by the United States under Articles 5, 6, or 7, a marital deduction computed and applied in the manner in which a marital deduction claimed by an individual who was domiciled in the United States would be computed and applied under the law in effect on November 24, 1978. If such deduction is claimed and allowed, the rate of tax imposed upon the property is to be the rate which would be imposed under the law in effect on the date of transfer to transfers by U.S. domiciliaries. If the tax determined without a marital deduction, and with the application of rates applicable under United States law to nonresidents not citizens of the U.S., is lower than the tax resulting from the application of the rule of the first sentence of paragraph (2), then the lower tax shall be the amount due.

The rationale for paragraph (2) derives from modification of internal U.S. law governing the taxation of the estates of nonresidents not citizens of the United States by the Foreign Investors Tax Act of 1966. In adopting that law, Congress was cognizant of the facts that many foreign countries had estate tax rates substantially lower than the U.S., but that the effect of these lower rates was counteracted to some extent by the fact that many of these countries did not allow a marital deduction comparable to that permitted under U.S. law. In order to create more parallel treatment between U.S. and foreign laws with respect to the estates of nonresidents who were not U.S. citizens, Congress adopted a separate rate schedule applicable to such estates, and did not provide a marital deduction for such estates. The rate schedule was substantially lower than that applicable to the estates of citizens and residents. Paragraph (2) assures to domiciliaries of France that they will receive the more favorable of the two forms of treatment—lower rates with no marital deduction, or higher rates with a marital deduction. The benefit conferred by this paragraph is matched by the benefit conferred by France on U.S. citizens and domiciliaries under paragraph (1), under which France has agreed to give community property treatment to all property acquired for consideration after marriage which passes from one spouse to another. This treatment accomplishes substantially the equivalent of a marital deduction on all after-acquired property subject to tax by France under the Convention.

Under paragraph (3), the competent authorities are required to consult to determine whether Article 11 shall be modified or cease to have effect in the event the laws of either Contracting State are changed substantially to reduce the benefits of marital deduction or community property provisions.*

CHAPTER IV
RELIEF FROM DOUBLE TAXATION

Article 12. Exemptions and Credits

Under paragraph (1), each Contracting State is required, except as otherwise provided in the Convention, to impose its tax, and to allow exemptions, deductions, credits, and other allowances, in accordance with its own internal laws.

Paragraph (2) provides specific rules for relieving double taxation. Under paragraph (2)(a), property which may be taxed by the United States in accordance with Article 5, 6, or 7, is exempted from French tax. However, French tax with respect to property which is taxable by France in accordance with the Convention is to be computed at the rate appropriate to the total of property taxable under French law. Thus, the Convention provides for "exemption under progression" with respect to French tax for property that remains subject to taxation by France under the Convention.

Under paragraph (2)(b)(i), where both States impose a tax with respect to property which is taxable by France in accordance with Articles 5, 6, or 7, the United States must allow a credit equal to the amount of the tax imposed by France with respect to such property. Under paragraph (2)(b)(ii), notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (2)(b)(i), the total amount of all credits allowed by the United States pursuant to Article 12 or pursuant to its own laws or other conventions with respect to all property in respect of which a foreign tax credit is allowable under subparagraph (i) of paragraph (2)(b) is not to exceed that part of the United States tax which is attributable to such property. The part of the tax deemed to be so attributable is to be determined in accordance with the principles of section 2014(b)(2) of the Code and section 20.2014-3 of the Estate Tax Regulations. Under paragraph (2)(b)(iii), the credits for tax imposed by France under Article 10(2) are in lieu of, and not in addition to, any credits for such taxes allowed by the internal law of the United States.

Under paragraph (3), if a decedent, donor or deemed transferor was a citizen of the United States at the time of his death or the making of a gift, and such person is considered under Article 4 as having been domiciled in France, the United States must allow a credit equal to the amount of the tax imposed by France. There is no limitation imposed upon the credit which must be allowed under paragraph (3), except that the amount must be an amount of tax paid to France.

Under paragraph (4), exemptions and credits required by Article 12 are to be tentatively allowed by the United States on the basis of statements made in the tax return as to the amount of any tax paid or payable to France. Such exemptions and credits, however, are not finally allowed until such tax for which the exemption or credit is allowable has actually been paid. Under this provision, interest and penalties for underpayments of tax may not be assessed by the United States for any underpayments attributable to a claim for a credit or exemption required under Article 12 if at the time payment of the tax for which the credit or exemption is claimed is not due to France. Interest and penalties may be assessed, however, from such time as tax is due and payable to France, if at such time the amount of tax due and payable is less than the amount of the credit claimed.

Under paragraph (5), the provisions of the Convention may not result in an increase in the amount of the tax imposed by either Contracting State under its domestic laws. A reduction in the credit allowed against United States tax for tax paid to France, which reduction results from the application of the Convention, is not for these purposes to be construed as an increase in tax.

CHAPTER V
SPECIAL PROVISIONS

Article 13. Time Limitations on Claims for Credit or Refund

Under paragraph (1), a claim for credit or for refund of tax founded on the provisions of the Convention must be made before the latest of three dates specified in paragraph (1). The three dates are (1) the time for the making of a claim for refund of tax specified under the internal law of the Contracting State to which the claim for refund or credit is made; (2) five years from the date of death of the decedent, or from the making of a gift with respect to which the claim is made; or (3) one year after final determination (administrative or judicial) and payment of tax for which any credit under Article 12 is claimed, provided that the determination and payment are made within 10 years of the date of death of the decedent or the making of the gift. Under paragraph (2), any refund based on the provisions of the Convention is to be made without payment of interest on the amount refunded.

Article 14. Mutual Agreement

Article 14 provides for competent authority procedures to ensure taxation in accordance with the Convention, and for other purposes. Under paragraph (1), any person who considers that the actions of one or both Contracting States results or will result in taxation not in accordance with the Convention may, notwithstanding remedies provided by the internal law of the Contracting States, present his case to the competent authority of either Contracting State. Such a presentation must be made within the time period specified by Article 13(1) for filing a claim for refund. If the person's claim is considered to have merit by the competent authority to which the claim is made, that authority is required to seek agreement with the competent authority of the other Contracting State with a view to avoiding taxation contrary to the provisions of the Convention.

Under paragraph (2), the competent authorities are to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the application of the Convention.

Under paragraph (3), the competent authorities of the Contracting States may communicate with each other directly for the purpose of reaching an agreement under Article 14. When it seems to them advisable, the competent authorities are empowered to meet together for an oral exchange of opinions.

Under paragraph (4), when the competent authorities reach an agreement for the purpose of avoiding taxation not in accordance with the Convention, taxes are to be imposed, and refund or credit of taxes to be allowed in accordance with the agreement, notwithstanding any procedural rule (including the statute of limitations) applicable under the laws of either Contracting State. Under this paragraph, an agreement between the competent authorities is to be implemented notwithstanding time limitations imposed by the internal law of the Contracting States, and notwithstanding the time limitations for filing a claim for refund or credit imposed by Article 13.

Under paragraph (5), the competent authorities of the Contracting States are permitted to prescribe any regulations and forms as may be necessary or appropriate to give effect to and implement the Convention.

Article 15. Filing of Returns and Exchange of Information

Paragraph (1) preserves obligations to file returns or transfer certificates or notices, or to maintain records, imposed by the internal law of each State, notwithstanding alterations of substantive taxing jurisdiction made by the Convention. Under paragraph (1)(a), the provisions of Articles 5, 6, 7, and 8 which change the taxability or situs of property or the amount of tax which would have been due in the absence of the Convention, do not change (i) the requirements of the respective tax laws of the Contracting States relating to information or tax returns or notices, transfer certificates, or maintenance of records; or (ii) the applicability and amount of any sanctions of such laws with respect to those requirements.

Under paragraph (1)(a)(i), the executor of a French domiciliary whose estate included property which would be considered situated in the United States under United States internal law would be required to file a tax return with respect to such property, even if the property is not subject to taxation by the United States by reason of Article 8, and even though property not subject to taxation by the United States by reason of Article 8 is the only property in the estate that is situated in the United States. Under paragraph (1)(b), as concerns the United States and notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (1)(a), requirements or sanctions found to be unnecessary for the prevention of fraud or fiscal evasion with respect to taxes to which this Convention applies may be eliminated or modified (but not made more burdensome) by regulations prescribed pursuant to paragraph (5) of Article 14. Under this paragraph, the Treasury Department will be empowered, through published regulations, to vary the requirements of U.S. statutory law with respect to filing of tax or information returns, or maintenance of records or transfer certificates, if it finds any such requirements unnecessary for the prevention of fraud or fiscal evasion with respect to taxes covered by this Convention.

Under paragraph (2), the competent authority of each Contracting State is required to exchange information with the competent authority of the other Contracting State. Two categories of information are required to be exchanged: (a) information pertinent to carrying out the provisions of the Convention or the laws of the other Contracting State concerning the taxes subject to the Convention, insofar as taxation under those laws is in accordance with the Convention; or (b) information pertinent to preventing fraud or fiscal evasion in relation to the taxes which are the subject of the Convention, including information in the possession of a Contracting State with respect to property not subject to taxation by that State by reason of Article 8. The paragraph contains a proviso to the effect that the competent authority of a Contracting State is not required to furnish information not in the possession of that State with respect to property exempted from that State's tax by reason of Article 8. Thus, a competent authority is not required to gather information from sources outside its government concerning exempt property. The competent authority is required to furnish information in its own possesion, or in the possession of other agencies of the Contracting State, concerning such property. Paragraph (2) further provides that any information furnished must be treated as secret by the recipient State. Such information may not be disclosed to persons other than those concerned with assessment, collection, enforcement, or prosecution in respect of the taxes which are the subject of the Convention. Such persons include a court or administrative body.

Under paragraph (3), the provisions of paragraph (2) are in no case to be construed so as to impose upon a Contracting State obligations (a) to carry out administrative measures at variance with its own laws or administrative practices, or those of the other Contracting State; (b) to supply particulars which are not obtainable under its laws or in the normal course of its administration, or that of the other Contracting State; or (c) to supply information which would tend to disclose any trade, business, industrial, commercial, or professional secret or trade process, or information the disclosure of which would be contrary to public policy.

Under paragraph (4), the furnishing of information may be either on a routine basis, or on request with reference to particular cases. The competent authorities are required to agree on a list of information to be subject to routine exchange.

Article 16. Assistance in Collection

Under paragraph (1), each Contracting State undertakes to lend assistance and support to the other in the collection of the taxes subject to the Convention, as well as interest, costs, and additions to the taxes and fines not of a penal character. This assistance is to be provided only in cases where the taxes are definitively due according to the laws of the applicant State.

Under paragraph (2), in the case of an application for the enforcement of taxes, revenue claims of each of the Contracting States which have been finally determined will be accepted for enforcement by the State to which application is made, and shall be collected in that State in accordance with the laws applicable to the enforcement and collection of its own taxes.

Under paragraph (3), an application under Article 16 must be accompanied by such documents as are required by the laws of the State making the application to establish that the taxes have been finally determined.

Under paragraph (4), if a revenue claim has not been finally determined, the State to which application is made is required to take such measures of conservancy, including measures applicable with respect to transfers of property belonging to nonresident aliens, as are authorized by its own laws for the enforcement of its own taxes.

Under paragraph (5), the assistance in collection available under Article 16 is not to be accorded with respect to estates of citizens of the Contracting State to which application is made.

Article 17. Diplomatic and Consular Officials

Article 17 preserves such rights as each Contracting State has to impose wealth transfer taxes upon its diplomatic and consular officials. Under paragraph (1), nothing in the Convention is to affect the fiscal privileges of diplomatic or consular officials under the general rules of international law or under the provisions of special agreements. Under paragraph (2), insofar as such privileges prevent the imposition of tax in a receiving Contracting State, the right to tax is reserved to the Contracting State in whose service the persons concerned exercised their functions and, notwithstanding any other provisions of the Convention, such persons are not to be deemed to have been domiciled in the receiving State.

Article 18. Territorial Extension

Under paragraph (1), the Convention may be extended, either in its entirety or with necessary modifications, to all or any of the Overseas Territories of the French Republic or the territories for whose international relations the United States is responsible, if the territory to which the Convention is to be extended imposes taxes substantially similar in character to those referred to in Article 2. Any such extension is permitted to take effect from such date and subject to such modifications and conditions as may be specified and agreed between the Contracting States in notes to be exchanged through diplomatic channels or in any other manner in accordance with the constitutional procedures of the Contracting States. In the case of the United States, extension of the Convention to one of its territories or to a territory of France must be accomplished in accordance with the procedure required by Article II, Section 2, of the Constitution of the United States, which requires that the President secure the advice and consent of a two-thirds vote of the Senate of the United States as a prerequisite to ratification of a treaty.

Under paragraph (2), at any time after the expiration of a period of 1 year from the effective date of an extension made by virtue of paragraph (1), either of the Contracting States is permitted, by written notice of termination given to the other Contracting State through diplomatic channels, to terminate the application of the provisions of the Convention with respect to any territory to which it has been extended. If such notice is given, the Convention shall cease to be applicable to such territory on and after the first day of January following the date of such notice.

Under paragraph (3), unless it is otherwise agreed by both Contracting States, the termination of the Convention by one of the Contracting States under Article 20 will also terminate the application of the Convention to any territory to which it has been extended under Article 18.

CHAPTER VI.
FINAL PROVISIONS

Article 19. Entry into Force

Under paragraph (1), the Convention is required to be ratified, and instruments of ratification are to be exchanged at Paris as soon as possible.

Under paragraph (2), the Convention will enter into force on the first day of the second month following the month in which the exchange of instruments of ratification takes place. The provisions of the Convention are to apply to estates of persons dying, to gifts made, and to generation-skipping transfers deemed to occur, on or after the date on which the Convention enters into force.

Under paragraph (3), the Convention of October 18, 1946, as modified by the Protocol of May 17, 1948, and the Convention of June 22, 1956, shall be terminated on, and shall cease to have effect from, the date on which this Convention enters into force according to paragraph (2).

Article 20. Termination

Under paragraph (1), the Convention is to remain in force until it is terminated by one of the Contracting States. However, not earlier than the fifth year following the year in which the Convention enters into force, either Contracting State is permitted, between January 1 and June 30 of any year, to give written notice of termination, through diplomatic channels. Such written notice will terminate the Convention, effective from the end of the calendar year in which the notice is given. In the event of termination, the provisions of the Convention are not to apply to estates of persons dying, to gifts made, or to generation-skipping transfers deemed to occur, on or after the end of the calendar year with respect to the end of which the Convention is terminated.

Under paragraph (2), notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (1), if the effects of the Convention are substantially altered as a result of changes made in the tax law of either Contracting State, either Contracting State may, through diplomatic channels, give written notice of termination. Such a notice will have effect on a date to be specified in the notice, which date may not be earlier than 6 months following the date of the notice. In the event notice of termination is given under paragraph (2), the Convention will not apply to estates of persons dying, to gifts made, or to generation-skipping transfers deemed to occur, on or after the effective date of the termination.

The provisions of Article 11 may be terminated without termination of the entire Convention in the event of certain described changes in the tax laws of the Contracting States. See the discussion of Article 11 above. Changes in the tax laws of one or both of the Contracting States which are grounds for termination of the provisions of Article 11, if unaccompanied by other changes which would independently give grounds for termination under paragraph (2) of Article 20, may not be grounds for termination of the entire Convention under paragraph (2) of Article 20.

Announcement 80-146 [1]

Certain overseas employees of charitable organizations, as defined in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, who resided in a lesser developed country while employed by such an organization during any part of their 1979 taxable year, will have until December 15, 1980, to file their 1979 income tax returns.

This extension is granted to those taxpayers who, under legislation reported by the Senate Finance Committee would be allowed to elect an income exclusion of up to $20,000 under section 911 in lieu of the deduction provided for excess foreign living costs under section 913, and who were residing or traveling outside the United States and Puerto Rico on April 15, 1980. Qualifying taxpayers need take no further action to obtain this extension, but they should note in the top margin on the front page of the return, "charitable organization overseas employee."

A previous automatic extension to October 15, 1980, was announced in News Release IR-8069, of June 10, 1980 [Announcement 80-94, 1980-30 I.R.B. 28].

Taxpayers who qualify for the exclusion election, but who were in the United States or Puerto Rico on April 15 will not qualify for this extension. If these taxpayers applied for and received an extension to June 15, 1980, their returns were due October 15, 1980.

Under the Senate Finance Committee bill, those who have filed their returns under present law and later wish to make the election for the 911 exclusion, which that bill would provide, would have 24 months from the date of enactment to file amended returns. If the legislation is enacted, any necessary revised tax forms will be issued.

Lesser developed countries are countries not on the following list:

- Australia
- Austria
- Canada
- Czechoslovakia
- European Economic Community member states
    - Belgium
    - Britain
    - Denmark
    - France

- Hungary
- Iceland
- Japan
- Liechtenstein
- Monaco
- New Zealand
- Norway
- Poland
- Republic of South Africa
- San Marino
- Spain
- Sweden
- Switzerland
- Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Any foreign country within the Sino-Soviet bloc as defined in section 2 of E.O. 11071, 1963-1 C.B. 137.

Taxpayers eligible for the exclusion who were outside the U.S. and Puerto Rico on April 15 will not be penalized for failure to pay any tax due on the return if they file their returns and pay the amount due by December 15, 1980. However, taxpayers who were residing or traveling within the United States are subject to penalties if their returns were not filed and their taxes paid by October 15, 1980. In either case, interest will be due on any unpaid taxes from April 15, 1980, to the date of payment.

The due dates for estimated tax payments for the 1980 tax year are not changed by this extension.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 61.—Gross Income Defined

26 CFR 1.61-2: Compensation for services, including fees, commissions, and similar items.

When an employee is in receipt of income because of the grant to the employee of a stock appreciation right. See Rev. Rul. 80-300, this page.

Section 216.—Deduction of Taxes, Interest, and Business Depreciation by Cooperative Housing Corporation Tenant-Stockholder

26 CFR 1.216-1: Amounts representing taxes and interest paid to cooperative housing corporation.

Cooperative housing corporation; tenant-occupant protected by rent control laws. An otherwise qualifying cooperative housing corporation is not precluded from meeting the requirements of section 216(b)(1)(B) of the Code by state and local rent control laws that prevent a purchaser of shares from obtaining occupancy of a unit until the current tenant-occupant voluntarily vacates the unit or breaches the lease and is dispossessed.

Rev. Rul. 80-299

ISSUE

Does a corporation meet the requirement of section 216(b)(1)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

A partnership owned an apartment building that is subject to state and local rent control laws under which a tenant-occupant is entitled to a renewal of the tenant's lease prior to its termination. Thus, the tenant may continually renew the lease. The building was transferred to a corporation organized by the partnership in exchange for stock that the partnership offered for sale to the tenants and to the general public. Of the total number of shares available for sale, different blocks of shares were allocated to each apartment unit. The purchaser of a block of shares is entitled to a proprietary lease of the allocable apartment unit.

The proprietary lease received by a nonoccupant purchaser of shares is subject to the rights under the rent control laws of the tenant in occupancy. That is, a purchaser of a unit that is occupied may obtain occupancy only if the tenant-occupant voluntarily vacates the unit or breaches the obligations and is involuntarily dispossessed. The purchaser becomes a lessee under the proprietary lease, and, if the tenant-occupant remains in possession, a sublessor with respect to the tenant-occupant.

A minority of the tenant-occupants purchased blocks of stock in the corporation and received leases from the corporation for the allocable apartment units. The remaining tenant-occupants did not purchase stock. This stock was sold by the partnership to purchasers who are not able to occupy the allocable apartment units because they are occupied by tenant-occupants who are protected by the rent control laws.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 216(b)(1)(B) of the Code provides that the term "cooperative housing corporation" means a corporation in which, among other things, each of the stockholders is entitled, solely by reason of the stockholder's ownership of stock in the corporation, to occupy for dwelling purposes a house, or an apartment in a building, owned or leased by the corporation.

Section 1.216-1(d)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that each stockholder of the corporation must be entitled to occupy for dwelling purposes an apartment in a building or a unit in a housing development owned or leased by such corporation. The stockholder is not required to occupy the premises. The right as against the corporation to occupy the premises is sufficient. Such right must be conferred on each stockholder solely by reason of the stockholder's ownership of stock in the corporation; that is, the stock must entitle the owner thereof either to occupy the premises or to a lease of the premises. The fact that the right to continue to occupy the premises is dependent upon the payment of charges to the corporation in the nature of rentals or assessments is immaterial.

Section 216(b)(1)(B) of the Code and regulations thereunder require only that the stockholder have a right by reason of the stockholder's ownership of stock either to occupy the premises or to a lease of the premises and such right as against the corporation is all that is needed. Actual occupancy is not required.

In this case, a nonoccupant stockholder is entitled to a proprietary lease solely by reason of ownership of stock in the corporation and such lease confers occupancy rights upon the stockholder as against the corporation. Therefore, it is not material that the stockholder is precluded from actual occupancy of an apartment because it is occupied by a tenant whose lease is protected by the rent control laws.

A tenant-occupant who purchased stock in the corporation is also entitled to a proprietary lease that confers occupancy rights upon the tenant-occupant, notwithstanding the fact that the tenant-occupant may also have a right to occupy the apartment under the rent control laws. As to the occupant-shareholder, who possesses occupancy rights by reason of the occupant-stockholder's stock ownership, the occupancy rights conferred by the rent control laws are immaterial.

HOLDING

The corporation meets the requirements of section 216(b)(1)(B) of the Code.

Section 451.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Inclusion

26 CFR 1.451-2: Constructive receipt of income.
(Also Section 61; 1.61-2.)

Gross income; stock appreciation rights; year includible. A corporation grants to its key employees stock appreciation rights that entitle them to a cash payment for each right exercised equal to the excess of the fair market value of a share of the corporation's common stock on the date of exercise over the fair market value of a share on the date the right is granted. The rights cannot be exercised before one year, and if they are not exercised within five years, they are deemed exercised on the fifth anniversary of the grant. At that time, the employee will be paid the amount of the appreciation. Payments received for the stock appreciation rights are includible in gross income in the year the rights are exercised.

Rev. Rul. 80-300

ISSUE

When is an employee in receipt of income because of the grant to the employee of a stock appreciation right?

FACTS

A corporation adopted a plan under which key employees of the corporation are granted stock appreciation rights (SAR's). An SAR entitles the employee to a cash payment equal to the excess of the fair market value of one share of the common stock of the corporation on the date of the exercise of the SAR over the fair market value of a share on the date the SAR was granted to the employee. An employee need not own any stock of the corporation to receive an SAR, and SAR's are granted without cost to the employee. To exercise an SAR, an employee must notify the corporation in writing. No SAR is exercisable before one year, and if not exercised by the employee within five years, the SAR's will be deemed to have been exercised on the fifth anniversary of the grant. At that time, the amount of the stock appreciation will automatically be paid to the employee. SAR's are not traded on an established market, and are nonassignable and nontransferable by the grantees.

In 1975, the corporation granted 10 SAR's to A, an employee of the corporation. On the date of the grant, the fair market value of the corporation's common stock was 30*x* dollars a share. In 1980, A exercised the SAR's when the fair market value of a share of the corporation's stock was 80*x* dollars. A received 500*x* dollars.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that, except as otherwise provided, income means all income from whatever source derived.

Section 451(a) of the Code provides that the amount of any item of gross income is includible in gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless, under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income, the amount is to be properly accounted for as of a different period.

Section 1.451-2(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that income, although not actually reduced to a taxpayer's possession, is constructively received in the taxable year during which it is credited to the taxpayer's account, set apart for the taxpayer, or otherwise made available so that the taxpayer may draw upon it at any time, or so that the taxpayer could have drawn upon it during the taxable year if notice of intention to withdraw had been given. However, income is not constructively received if the taxpayer's control of its receipt is subject to substantial limitations or restrictions.

The courts and the Internal Revenue Service have recognized that a requirement of surrender or forfeiture of a valuable right is a sufficient restriction to make inapplicable the doctrine of constructive receipt. See Hales v. Commissioner, 40 B.T.A. 1245 (1939), acq., 1940-1 C.B. 2. See also Rev. Rul. 58-230, 1958-1 C.B. 204, which holds that a requirement of a six-month suspension from participation in an employees' profit sharing plan upon an employee's withdrawal of the employer's contributions and earnings thereon, and the employee's consequent loss of the benefit of the employer's contributions that would have been made for the six-month period, is a substantial limitation that precludes constructive receipt of the withdrawable amounts.

The forfeiture of a valuable right is a substantial limitation that precludes constructive receipt of income. The employee's right to benefit from further appreciation of stock, in this case, without risking any capital is a valuable right. However, once the employee exercises the stock appreciation rights, the employee loses all chance of further appreciation with respect to that stock and the amount payable becomes fixed and available without limitation. Accordingly, an employee will be in receipt of income on the date the SAR's are exercised.

HOLDING

An employee who possesses stock appreciation rights is not in constructive receipt of income by virtue of the appreciation of the employer's stock. The cash payment to which the employee is entitled is includible in gross income in the year a stock appreciation right is exercised. Thus, in the example above, the employee must include in gross income 500*x* dollars in 1980 because the SAR's were exercised in that year.

Section 501.—Exemption From Tax on Corporations, Certain Trusts, Etc.

26 CFR 1.501(c)(3)-1: Organizations organized and operated for religious, charitable, scientific, testing for public safety, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.

Genealogical research; public interest. A genealogical society that (1) opens its membership to all persons in a particular area, (2) provides instruction in genealogical research techniques to its members and to the general public, but does not research genealogies for its members, (3) conducts research projects and makes the results available to the state historical society, (4) provides materials for libraries and community displays, and (5) promotes various other related activities for the public qualifies for exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 80-302 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-301

ISSUE

May a genealogical society whose membership is open to all persons in a particular area and which provides instruction in genealogical research techniques qualify for exemption from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The organization is a genealogical society whose membership is open to all interested persons in a particular geographical area. The society provides instruction in genealogical research techniques to both members and the general public through monthly lectures held in a meeting room donated by the community center. It distributes instructional manuals, sponsors tours of historical museums, donates books and other research materials on genealogy to the area's public library, maintains a display board in a community center listing the early pioneers from the area, and conducts a free genealogical speakers bureau. It also conducts various historical genealogical research projects the results of which are made available to the state historical society. The society does not conduct genealogical research for its members. Rather, its members research genealogies independently using the society's research materials. The organization also provides assistance to beginners.

The society's income is derived from membership dues and contributions. Its expenses include the costs of printing, postage, display boards, books, and other miscellaneous items.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 501(c)(3) of the Code provides for the exemption from federal income tax of organizations organized and operated exclusively for educational purposes.

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(3) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the term "educational" includes the instruction or training of the individual for the purpose of developing his capabilities and the instruction of the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community.

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(1)(ii) of the regulations provides that an organization is not organized or operated exclusively for exempt purposes unless it serves a public rather than a private interest.

The Callaway Family Association, Inc. v. Commissioner, 71 T.C. 340 (1978), held that a family association formed as a nonprofit organization to study immigration to and migration within the United States by focusing on its own family history and genealogy does not qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. The association's activities included researching the genealogy of its members for the ultimate purpose of publishing a family history. The court stated that the association's family genealogical activities were not insubstantial and were not in furtherance of an exempt purpose. Rather, they served the private interests of the members. Thus, the association was not operated exclusively for exempt purposes. See also Benjamin Price Genealogical Association v. United States, Civil No. 78-2117 (D.D.C., April 26, 1979).

Rev. Rul. 71-580, 1971-2 C.B. 235, holds that a nonprofit organization formed by members of a particular family to compile genealogical research data on the family in order to perform religious ordinances of the religious denomination to which the family members belong is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-302, this page, this Bulletin, holds that a genealogical society whose primary activity is the compilation of genealogical data for members of a particular family does not qualify for exemption from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

Here, the society is educating the individual and the community generally when it conducts lectures, sponsors public displays and museum tours, provides written materials to instruct members of the general public on genealogical research, and compiles the area's pioneer history. Thus, the society instructs the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community within the meaning of section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(3) of the regulations.

Unlike the organizations described in the Callaway and Price cases, and in Rev. Rul. 80-302, the society does not conduct research for its members and does not focus its activities on any one family. Rather, its activities include all interested members in the geographical area, and seek to develop a better understanding of the history of the area. Thus, the society is operated for a public rather than a private interest, within the meaning of section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(1)(ii) of the regulations.

HOLDING

A nonprofit organization whose membership is open to all persons in a particular area and which provides instruction in genealogical research techniques in the manner described above is operated exclusively for educational purposes and, thus, qualifies for exemption from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

APPLICATION INSTRUCTIONS

Even though an organization considers itself within the scope of this revenue ruling, it must file an application on Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption, in order to be recognized by the Service as exempt under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. See sections 1.501(a)-1 and 1.508-1(a) of the regulations. In accordance with the instructions to Form 1023, the application should be filed with the District Director of Internal Revenue for the key district indicated therein.

tory, and (5) promotes social activities among family members does not qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code; Rev. Ruls. 71-580 and 80-301 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-302

ISSUE

Does the organization described below, which conducts genealogical activities primarily for members of a particular family, qualify for exemption from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The organization was formed to locate, acquire, restore, and preserve all available genealogical records of a particular family. Membership in the organization is limited to lineal or legal descendants of the family.

The organization's primary activity is the compilation of genealogical data on its members. This data is recorded and documented, held for use by members, and presented to designated libraries. Copies of the genealogical data are made available for a fee to any interested individuals, generally family members, who request such data. The organization utilizes the data in preparing and publishing volumes of family history. Other activities of the organization include holding periodic reunions for family members and sponsoring an occasional social activity.

The genealogical data is not developed for the express purpose of conforming to the religious precepts of the denomination to which family members belong.

Income is derived from fees charged for the reproducing, shipping, and handling of genealogical data and from contributions raised at social functions.

LAW

Section 501(c)(3) of the Code provides for the exemption from federal income tax of organizations organized and operated exclusively for charitable or educational purposes.

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(1)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that an organization is not organized or operated exclusively for exempt purposes unless it serves a public rather than a private interest.

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(3) of the regulations defines the term "educational" as including the instruction or training of the individual for the purpose of improving or developing his capabilities, or the instruction of the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community.

Rev. Rul. 71-580, 1971-2 C.B. 235, holds that a nonprofit organization formed by members of a particular family to compile genealogical research data on the family in order to perform religious ordinances of the religious denomination to which the family members belong is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-301, page 6, this Bulletin, holds that a genealogical society whose membership is open to all persons in a particular area and that provides instruction in genealogical research techniques is operated exclusively for educational purposes and qualifies for exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

The Callaway Family Association, Inc. v. Commissioner, 71 T.C. 340 (1978), held that a family association formed as a nonprofit organization to study immigration to and migration within the United States by focusing on its own family history and genealogy does not qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. The association's activities included researching the genealogy of its members for the ultimate purpose of publishing a family history. The court stated that the association's family genealogical activities were not insubstantial and were not in furtherance of an exempt purpose. Rather, they served the private interests of the members. Thus, the association was not operated exclusively for exempt purposes. See also Benjamin Price Genealogical Association v. United States, Civil No. 78-2117 (D.D.C., April 26, 1979).

Compilation, publication, preservation, and distribution of genealogical data has some educational value to the individual members. However, when these activities are primarily limited to one particular family the activities do not advance education to benefit the public interest within the meaning of section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(1)(ii) of the regulations. Any benefit to the general public is merely incidental to the private benefit accruing to family members.

Similar to the organizations described in the Callaway and Price cases, the instant organization is formed primarily for members of a particular family who focus in on their own genealogy with limited public orientation. The Supreme Court in Better Business Bureau v. United States, 326 U.S. 279 (1945), held that the presence of a single non-educational purpose will destroy exemption regardless of the number of truly educational purposes. Since more than an insubstantial part of the organization's activities are in furtherance of private interests it is not operated exclusively for educational purposes. Such activity is not insubstantial and is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-301 is distinguishable from the instant case because the organization described therein provided instruction in genealogical research techniques to any interested member of the general public. On the other hand, the instant organization was formed to compile genealogical data on and promote social activities among its family members, and its membership is limited to members of a particular family.

Rev. Rul. 71-580 is also distinguishable because the genealogical research data in the instant ruling is not compiled in order to perform religious ordinances in accord with the precepts of the religious denomination to which the family members belong.

Compare Rev. Rul. 67-8, 1967-1 C.B. 142, which holds that an organization formed to bring the members of a particular family into closer association through social activities revolving around matters of common genealogical and historical interest may qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(7) of the Code.

HOLDING

An organization that conducts genealogical activities primarily for members of a particular family, under the circumstances described above, does not qualify for exemption from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

Section 1502.—Regulations [Consolidated Returns]

26 CFR 1.1502-44: Percentage depletion for independent producers and royalty owners.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Limitation on percentage depletion for independent producers and royalty owners that join in filing consolidated returns

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to consolidated returns for percentage depletion for independent producers and royalty owners. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 [Pub. L. 94-12, 1975-1 C.B. 545]. The regulations would provide the public with guidance needed to comply with that Act and would affect certain corporations that file consolidated returns.

DATES: The regulations are effective for taxable years for which the due date (without extensions) for filing returns is after September 30, 1980.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On April 9, 1980, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 1502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (45 FR 24203). The amendments were proposed to conform to the consolidated return regulations to section 501(a) of the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 (89 Stat. 47) [supra at 558]. No comments were received with respect to the proposed amendments, and no public hearing was requested or held. The proposed amendments are adopted by this Treasury decision without change.

PERCENTAGE DEPLETION FOR INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS AND ROYALTY OWNERS

Section 613 provides general rules permitting a taxpayer that extracts minerals to deduct a reasonable allowance for depletion, computed as a percentage of the gross income from the property. The allowance may not exceed 50 percent of the taxpayer's taxable income from the property (computed without allowance for depletion). In the case of oil and gas wells, however, section 613A, as added by section 501(a) of the Tax Reduction Act of 1975, restricts the percentage depletion allowance to certain domestic gas wells and independent producers and royalty owners. Section 613A(d) further limits the allowance in the case of independent producers and royalty owners to "65 percent of the taxpayer's taxable income" for the taxable year.

These regulations provide rules for computing the limitation under section 613A(d) on percentage depletion with respect to oil and gas wells if the corporation operating the wells is a member of an affiliated group that files a consolidated return. The regulations adopt the group's consolidated taxable income as the base for computing the 65-percent limitation. For a discussion of the reasons that alternative approaches were rejected, see the preamble to the notice of proposed rulemaking (45 FR 24203).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Lawrence M. Axelrod of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are hereby adopted:

Paragraph 1. Section 1.1502-12 is amended as follows:

1. The material preceding paragraph (a) is revised.
2. The word "and" at the end of paragraph (n) is deleted.
3. Paragraph (o) is revised.
4. A new paragraph (p) is added.

The new and revised provisions read as follows:

§ 1.1502-12 Separate taxable income.

The separate taxable income of a member (including a case in which deductions exceed gross income) is computed in accordance with the provisions of the Code covering the determination of taxable income of separate corporations, subject to the following modifications:

(o) Basis shall be determined under §§ 1.1502-31 and 1.1502-32, and earnings and profits shall be determined under § 1.1502-33; and

(p) The limitation on deductions provided in section 613A shall be taken into account for each member's oil and gas properties as provided in § 1.1502-44.

Par. 2. A new § 1.1502-44 is added to read as follows:

(a) In general. The sum of the percentage depletion deductions for the taxable year for all oil or gas property owned by all members, plus any carryovers under section 613A(d)(1) or paragraph (d) of this section from a prior taxable year, may not exceed 65 percent of the group's adjusted consolidated taxable income (under paragraph (b) of this section) for the consolidated return year.

(b) Adjusted consolidated taxable income. For purposes of this section, adjusted consolidated taxable income is an amount (not less than zero) equal to the group's consolidated taxable income determined without—

(1) Any depletion with respect to an oil or gas property (other than a gas property with respect to which the depletion allowance for all production is determined pursuant to section 613A (b)) for which percentage depletion would exceed cost depletion in the absence of the depletable quantity limitations contained in section 613A (c)(1) and (6) and the consolidated taxable income limitation contained in paragraph (a) of this section,

(2) Any consolidated net operating loss carryback to the consolidated return year under § 1.1502-21, and

(3) Any consolidated net capital loss carryback to the consolidated return year under § 1.1502-22.

(c) Allocation to oil and gas properties. The maximum amount allowable as a deduction under section 613A (c), after the application of paragraph (a) of this section, is allocated to properties held by members in accordance with the regulations under section 613A(d). Those regulations provide for an initial allocation and possible reallocation of the maximum allowable percentage depletion deduction among oil and gas properties. Thus, if, after the initial allocation, cost depletion exceeds the percentage depletion that would be allowable for a particular oil or gas property, cost depletion must be used for that property and the maximum amount of percentage depletion allowable as a deduction for the group is reallocated among only the remaining properties held by all members.

(d) Carryover for disallowed amounts. (1) If any amount is disallowed as a deduction for the taxable year by reason of section 613A(d)(1) or paragraph (a) of this section, the disallowed amount for each oil or gas property is treated as an amount allowed as a deduction under section 613A(c), for the following taxable year for the member that owned the property, in accordance with the regulations under section 613A and paragraphs (a) and (d)(2) of this section.

(2) Any amount that was disallowed as a deduction in a separate return limitation year of a member may be carried to a consolidated return year only to the extent that 65 percent of the excess determined under paragraph (d)(3) of this section exceeds the sum of the otherwise allowable percentage depletion deductions for the member's oil and gas properties for the year.

(3) The excess determined in this subparagraph (3) for a member is the excess, if any, of adjusted consolidated taxable income for the year under paragraph (b) of this section over that income recomputed by excluding the items of income and deductions of the member.

(e) Effective date. This section applies to taxable years for which the due date (without extensions) for filing returns is after September 30, 1980.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 1502 and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 367 and 917; 26 U.S. 1502 and 7805).

Rev. Rul. 80-303

ISSUE

Are payments made by an employer under an unwritten sick pay plan excluded from "wages" under sections 3121(a)(2) and 3306(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The employer's plan is open to all full-time employees after 6 months of service. Employees with the company for at least six months are entitled to a minimum of one day's regular wage for one day sick per year. For periods in excess of one day supervisors decide whether to authorize sick pay and the duration of the payments to employees.

The employer initiated the plan voluntarily and has, for a number of years, made payments pursuant to the plan to all employees generally. Although the plan is not in writing, the employees are made aware of it by custom and usage and by discussions among the employees.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Sections 3121(a)(2) and 3306(b)(2) of the Code except from wages payments made to employees under sick pay plans or systems established by their employer.

For sick pay payments to employees to come within the exclusion from wages, the employer must have a definite plan or system applicable to all employees generally, or to a class or classes of employees, as distinguished from merely a good intention to aid employees in time of need.

Generally, a plan or system exists if any one of the following conditions exists: (A) the plan or system is in writing or is otherwise made known to the employees (for example, through the medium of a bulletin board announcement or the long and established practice of the employer); (B) there is a reference to the plan or system in the contract of employment; (C) employees contribute to the plan or system; (D) there is a special fund for these payments, separate and apart from the salary account; or (E) the employer is required to make the payments.

The payments in this case are made to employees when absent from work because of illness, and are paid under a definite sick pay plan or system that is made known to the employees. The plan was in effect for a number of years, the employees were aware of it and sick pay payments were made pursuant to the plan.

HOLDING

The payments made by the employer under the plan are excepted from wages under sections 3121(a)(2) and 3306(b)(2) of the Code.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

BACKGROUND

On March 24, 1980, the Federal Register published proposed regulations on section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, relating to disclosures of returns and return information (45 FR 18986). Three comments on these proposed regulations were received, but no public hearing was requested or held.

This Treasury decision adopts the regulations as proposed with changes to §§ 301.6103(l)(2)-3 and 301.6103(n)-1 described below.

PROVISIONS OF THE REGULATIONS

Sections 301.6103(a)-1 and 301.6103(a)-2

Prior to its amendment by section 1202 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 143], effective as of January 1, 1977, section 6103(a) of the Code authorized the disclosure of Federal tax data by the Internal Revenue Service to other Federal agencies for nontax related purposes as provided by orders of the President and implementing rules and regulations approved by the President. Section 301.6103(a)-1 provides that returns and return information so disclosed by the Service to another Federal agency before January 1, 1977 pursuant to the authority of prior law (and orders of the President and implementing rules and regulations) may, with one restriction, be disclosed after December 31, 1976 by such agency for any purpose authorized by such prior law (and orders, rules, and regulations). The restriction on such further disclosure is use of such returns or return information after December 31, 1976, by, or on behalf of, the Federal agency in an administrative or judicial proceeding. Such use is restricted to an administrative or judicial proceeding described in section 6103(i)(4) and then only if the requirements of section 6103(i)(4) are first met.

Prior to amendment by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, the Code authorized disclosures of tax returns and tax return information to Justice Department attorneys and Internal Revenue Service Chief Counsel personnel for Federal tax administration purposes as provided by Presidentially approved regulations. A substantial volume of tax returns and tax return information furnished to these attorneys and personnel for tax administration purposes under prior law and regulations was in their possession on January 1, 1977, the effective date of the new statutory disclosure rules of the Act.

[1] This publication of the Treasury Decision contains the complete text of the amendments to the regulations. The instructions for modifying the notice of proposed rulemaking have been omitted.

Section 301.6103(a)-2 provides that, as a general rule, tax returns and tax return information furnished to these persons under prior law for Federal tax administration purposes may be used by them after December 31, 1976 for tax administration purposes authorized by prior law. However, if any such tax returns or tax return information is to be introduced into evidence in tax litigation after that date, the statutory relevancy tests prescribed by the new law must first be met.

Section 301.6103(c)-1

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 amended section 6103(c) of the Code to permit disclosures of tax returns and tax return information to a person designated by the taxpayer in a written request or consent. Paragraph (a) of § 301.6103(c)-1 prescribes rules governing the necessary form and content of these written requests or consents. Paragraph (b) of § 301.6103(c)-1 prescribes rules for disclosures to a person who has been requested by the taxpayer to obtain information or provide assistance concerning a contact between the taxpayer and the Service.

Section 301.6103(h)(2)-1

This Treasury decision amends § 301.6103(h)(2)-1 of existing regulations to conform them to certain amendments made to section 6103(h)(2) of the Code by section 503 of the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 113]. First, the section is amended to make the requirements of section 6103(h)(2), rather than those of section 6103(h)(4), applicable to the use of returns and return information in Federal grand jury proceedings involving tax administration. Second, the section is amended to authorize Service disclosures of returns and return information to "officers and employees" of the Department of Justice as opposed to the more limited category of "attorneys" as provided by prior law.

Section 301.6103(i)-1

This section of the regulations describes the circumstances and conditions under which returns and return information may be disclosed to and by officers and employees of the Department of Justice and other Federal agencies in connection with preparation for, or investigations which may result in, proceedings pertaining to the enforcement of specifically designated Federal criminal statutes (not involving tax administration) to which the United States or a Federal agency is or may be a party. This section also makes it clear that use of returns and return information by the Department of Justice in Federal grand jury proceedings is governed by the requirements of section 6103(i)(1) or (2) of the Code rather than those of section 6103(i)(4).

Section 301.6103(j)(2)-1

This section of the regulations provides rules governing disclosures of return information to certain officers and employees of the Federal Trade Commission for statistical purposes and related activities authorized by section 6103(j)(2) of the Code.

The regulations describe in detail the particular return information which the Service will disclose to officers and employees of the Division of Financial Statistics of the Bureau of Economics of the Federal Trade Commission for use in statistical programs and related activities authorized by law. The regulations also prescribe the procedures to be followed with respect to requested disclosures of return information and the limited extent to which such return can be redisclosed and provide that the confidentiality of return information disclosed as provided by the regulations must be protected to the satisfaction of the Service.

This section of the regulations provides rules governing disclosures of return information by officers and employees of the Service and Office of the Chief Counsel thereof for investigative purposes authorized by section 6103(k)(6) of the Code.

The regulations describe the circumstances and conditions under which such officers or employees are authorized to disclose return information to a person other than the taxpayer to whom such return information relates (or such taxpayer's representative) in connection with official duties relating to an examination, collection activity, civil or criminal investigation, enforcement activity, or other offense under the internal revenue laws or relating to certain personnel or claimant representative matters under such laws or 31 U.S.C. 1026.

These sections of the regulations under section 6103(l)(2) of the Code provide rules regarding disclosures of returns and return information to and by officers and employees of the Department of Labor, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, and the Department of Justice for purposes of administering titles I and IV of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, 172]. The section also makes it clear that returns and return information may be used by the Department of Justice in Federal grand jury proceedings where necessary to enforce the Act.

In response to a comment received, § 301.6103(l)(2)-3(a)(9), (21), and (22), as proposed, is revised, three additional categories of return information subject to automatic disclosure by the Service are added to § 301.6103(l)(2)-3(a), and § 301.6103(l)(2)-3(b)(3) is revised to require that requests for disclosures of additional returns and return information to officers and employees of the Department of Labor and Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation identify such officers and employees only by title rather than by name and title. These changes are designed to further enhance compliance programs under titles I and IV of the Act.

These regulations describe the circumstances and conditions under which an officer or employee of the Treasury Department (including the Internal Revenue Service), a State tax agency described in section 6103 (d), or the Social Security Administration is authorized under section 6103(n) of the Code to disclose returns and return information to a person for the purpose of procuring property and services necessary to Federal or State tax administration. The regulations provide general rules regarding the requirement of necessity for the disclosure and limiting the extent to which such disclosures are authorized. The regulations also provide that the person to whom disclosures are made for these purposes may in turn disclose the tax data only for purposes specified by section 6103 (n) and must maintain, to the satisfaction of the Service, safeguards to protect the confidentiality of the returns and return information and ensure against unauthorized disclosures.

As proposed, § 301.6103(n)-1(d) failed to specify that the terms of a contract between the Social Security Administration and its contractor provide, or be amended to provide, that the contractor is to comply with the safeguard requirements described in that paragraph. As adopted, § 301. 6103(n)-1(d) makes this clear.

Under section 6103 of the Code, a substantial volume of tax returns and tax return information is disclosable by the Service to other Federal agencies for purposes authorized or required by section 6103. It is likely that much of this tax information otherwise disclosable directly by the Service to yet other agencies as authorized or required by section 6103 may be more readily available from the intermediate Federal agency than the Service. For this reason, § 301.6103(p)(2)(B)-1 permits the Service to authorize disclosures of tax returns and tax return information by the intermediate Federal agency to other agencies to whom section 6103 otherwise authorizes or requires disclosures directly by the Service. Under this regulation, however, the Service retains the authority to impose, by regulation or otherwise, such restrictions on these disclosures as the Service may deem appropriate to properly protect the confidentiality of the information to be disclosed consistent with the requirements of section 6103. Further, this regulation imposes upon the head of the disclosing Federal agency the duty to maintain records of disclosures made under this regulation in order to meet the reporting requirements of section 6103(p) (3)(B) and (C).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations was David E. Dickinson of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to 26 CFR Parts 301, 404, and 420 are hereby adopted:

REGULATIONS ON PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION

Paragraph 1. The following new sections are added immediately after § 301.6102-1:

§ 301.6103(a)-1 Disclosures after December 31, 1976 by officers and employees of Federal agencies of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) disclosed to such officers and employees by the Internal Revenue Service before January 1, 1977 for a purpose not involving tax administration.

(a) General rule. Except as provided by paragraph (b) of this section, a return or return information (including taxpayer return information), as defined in section 6103(b)(1), (2), and (3) of the Internal Revenue Code, disclosed by the Internal Revenue Service before January 1, 1977, to an officer or employee of a Federal agency (as defined in section 6103(b) (9)) for a purpose not involving tax administration (as defined in section 6103(b)(4)) pursuant to the authority of section 6103 (or any order of the President under section 6103 or rules and regulations thereunder prescribed by the Secretary or his delegate and approved by the President) before amendment of such section by section 1202 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (Pub. L. 94-455, 90 Stat. 1667) [1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 143] may be disclosed by, or on behalf of, such officer, employee, or agency after December 31, 1976, for any purpose authorized by such section (or such order or rules and regulations) before such amendment.

(b) Exception. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section, a return or return information (including taxpayer return information) disclosed before January 1, 1977, by the Service to an officer or employee of a Federal agency for a purpose unrelated to tax administration as described in paragraph (a) may, after December 31, 1976, be disclosed by, or on behalf of, such agency, officer, or employee in an administrative or judicial proceeding only if such proceeding is one described in section 6103(i)(4) of the Code and if the requirements of section 6103(i)(4) have first been met.

§ 301.6103(a)-2 Disclosures after December 31, 1976 by attorneys of the Department of Justice and officers and employees of the Office of the Chief Counsel for the Internal Revenue Service of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) disclosed to such attorneys, officers, and employees by the Service before January 1, 1977 for a purpose involving tax administration.

(a) General rule. Except as provided by paragraph (b) of this section and subject to the requirements of this paragraph, a return or return information (including taxpayer return information), as defined in section 6103(b)(1), (2), and (3), of the Internal Revenue Code disclosed by the Internal Revenue Service before January 1, 1977, to an attorney of the Department of Justice (including a United States attorney) or to an officer or employee of the Office of the Chief Counsel for the Service for a purpose involving tax administration (as defined in section 6103(b)(4)) pursuant to the authority of section 6103 (or any order of the President under section 6103 or rules and regulations thereunder prescribed by the Secretary or his delegate and approved by the President) before amendment of such section by section 1202 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (Pub. L. 94-455, 90 Stat. 1667 [1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 143]) may be disclosed by, or on behalf of, such attorney, officer, or employee after December 31, 1976, for any purpose authorized by such section (or such order or rules and regulations) before such amendment.

(b) Exception. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section, a return or return information (including taxpayer return information) disclosed before January 1, 1977, by the Service to an attorney of the Department of Justice or to an officer or employee of the Office of the Chief Counsel for the Service for a purpose related to tax administration as described in paragraph (a) may, after December 31, 1976, be disclosed by, or on behalf of, such attorney, officer, or employee in an administrative or judicial proceeding only if such proceeding is one described in section 6103(h)(4) of the Code and if the requirements of section 6103(h)(4) have first been met.

§ 301.6103(c)-1 Disclosure of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) to designee of taxpayer.

(a) Disclosure of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) to person or persons designated in a written request or consent. Section 6103(c) of the Internal Revenue Code applies to disclosures of a return or return information (including taxpayer return information) to a person designated in a written request for or consent to disclosure. A request for or consent to disclosure must be in the form of a written document pertaining solely to the authorized disclosure. The written document must be signed and dated by the taxpayer who filed the return or to whom the return information relates. The taxpayer must also indicate in the written document—

(1) The taxpayer's taxpayer identity information described in section 6103(b)(6);

(2) The identity of the person to whom disclosure is to be made;

(3) The type of return (or specified portion of the return) or return information (and the particular data) that is to be disclosed; and

(4) The taxable year covered by the return or return information.

Thus, for example, a provision included in a taxpayer's application for a loan or other benefit authorizing the Internal Revenue Service to disclose to the grantor of the loan or other benefit such returns or return information as the grantor may request for purposes of verifying information supplied on the application does not meet the requirements of this paragraph. The disclosure of a return or return information authorized by a request for or consent to the disclosure shall not be made unless the request or consent is received by the Service within 60 days following the date upon which the request or consent was signed and dated by the taxpayer.

(b) Disclosure of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) to designee of taxpayer to comply with request for information or assistance. Section 6103(c) of the Code applies to requests made by the taxpayer to other persons (for example, members of Congress, friends or relatives of the taxpayer, and, when not acting as a taxpayer's representative, income tax return preparers) for information or assistance relating to the taxpayer's return or a transaction or other contact between the taxpayer and the Service.

The taxpayer's request for information or assistance must be in the form of a letter or other written document signed and dated by the taxpayer. The taxpayer must also indicate in the written request—

(1) The taxpayer's taxpayer identity information described in section 6103(b)(6);

(2) The identity of the person to whom disclosure is to be made; and

(3) Sufficient facts underlying the request for information or assistance to enable the Service to determine the nature and extent of the information or assistance requested and the returns or return information to be disclosed in order to comply with the taxpayer's request.

A return or return information will be disclosed to the taxpayer's designee as provided by this paragraph only to the extent considered necessary by the Service to comply with the taxpayer's request for information or assistance. This paragraph does not apply to disclosures to a taxpayer's representative in connection with practice before the Service (as defined in Treasury Department Circular No. 230). For disclosures in these cases, see § 601.502(c) of this chapter.

(c) Exceptions. A disclosure of return information shall not be made under this section if the Service determines that the disclosure would seriously impair Federal tax administration (as defined in section 6103(b)(4) of the Code).

Par. 2. Section 301.6103(h)(2)-1 is amended to read as follows:

§ 301.6103(h)(2)-1 Disclosure of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) to and by officers and employees of the Department of Justice for use in Federal grand jury proceeding, or in preparation for proceeding or investigation, involving tax administration.

(a) Disclosure of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) to and by officers and employees of the Department of Justice. (1) Returns and return information (including taxpayer return information), as defined in section 6103(b)(1), (2), and (3) of the Internal Revenue Code, shall, to the extent provided by section 6103(h)(2)(A), (B), and (C) and subject to the requirements of section 6103(h)(3), be open to inspection by or disclosure to officers and employees of the Department of Justice (including United States attorneys) personally and directly engaged in, and for their necessary use in, any Federal grand jury proceeding, or preparation for any proceeding (or for their necessary use in an investigation which may result in such a proceeding) before a Federal grand jury or any Federal or State court, in a matter involving tax administration (as defined in section 6103(b)(4)), including any such proceeding (or any such investigation) also involving the enforcement of a related Federal criminal statute which has been referred by the Secretary to the Department of Justice.

(2) Returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) inspected by or disclosed to officers and employees of the Department of Justice as provided in paragraph (a)(1) of this section may also be used by such officers and employees or disclosed by them to other officers and employees (including United States attorneys and supervisory personnel, such as Section Chiefs, Deputy Assistant Attorneys General, Assistant Attorneys General, the Deputy Attorney General, and the Attorney General), of the Department of Justice where necessary—

(i) In connection with any Federal grand jury proceeding, or preparation for any proceeding (or with an investigation which may result in such a proceeding), described in paragraph (a)(1), or

(ii) In connection with any Federal grand jury proceeding, or preparation for any proceeding (or with an investigation which may result in such a proceeding), described in paragraph (a)(1) which also involves enforcement of a specific Federal criminal statute other than one described in paragraph (a)(1) to which the United States is or may be a party, provided such matter involves or arises out of the particular facts and circumstances giving rise to the proceeding (or investigation) described in paragraph (a)(1) and further provided the tax portion of such proceeding (or investigation) has been duly authorized by or on behalf of the Assistant Attorney General for the Tax Division of the Department of Justice, pursuant to the request of the Secretary, as a proceeding (or investigation) described in paragraph (a)(1).

If, in the course of a Federal grand jury proceeding, or preparation for a proceeding (or the conduct of an investigation which may result in such a proceeding), described in subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph, the tax administration portion thereof is terminated for any reason, any further use or disclosure of such returns or taxpayer return information in such Federal grand jury proceeding, or preparation or investigation, with respect to the remaining portion may be made only pursuant to, and upon the grant of, a court order as provided by section 6103(i)(1)(A), provided, however, that the returns and taxpayer return information may in any event be used for purposes of obtaining the necessary court order.

(b) Disclosure of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) by officers and employees of the Department of Justice. (1) Returns and return information (including taxpayer return information), as defined in section 6103(b)(1), (2), and (3) of the Code, inspected by or disclosed to officers and employees of the Department of Justice as provided by paragraph (a) of this section may be disclosed by such officers and employees to other persons, including, but not limited to, persons described in paragraph (b)(2), but only to the extent necessary in connection with a Federal grand jury proceeding, or the proper preparation for a proceeding (or in connection with an investigation which may result in such a proceeding), described in paragraph (a). Such disclosures may include, but are not limited to, disclosures—

(i) To properly accomplish any purpose or activity of the nature described in section 6103(k)(6) and the regulations thereunder which is essential to such Federal grand jury proceeding, or to such proper preparation (or to such investigation);

(ii) To properly interview, consult, depose, or interrogate or otherwise obtain relevant information from, the taxpayer to whom such return or return information relates (or such taxpayer's legal representative) or from any witness who may be called to give evidence in the proceeding; or

(iii) To properly conduct negotiations concerning, or obtain authorization for, settlement or disposition of the proceeding, in whole or in part, or stipulations of fact in connection with the proceeding.

Disclosure of a return or return information to a person other than the taxpayer to whom such return or return information relates or such taxpayer's legal representative to properly accomplish any purpose or activity described in this paragraph should be made, however, only if such purpose or activity cannot otherwise properly be accomplished without making such disclosure.

(2) Among those persons to whom returns and return information may be disclosed by officers and employees of the Department of Justice as provided by paragraph (a)(1) of this section are—

(i) Other officers and employees of the Department of Justice, such as personnel of an office, board, division, or bureau of such department (for example, the Federal Bureau of Investigation or the Drug Enforcement Administration), clerical personnel (for example, secretaries, stenographers, docket and file room clerks, and mail room employees) and supervisory personnel (such as supervisory personnel of the Federal Bureau of Investigation or the Drug Enforcement Administration);

(ii) Officers and employees of another Federal agency (as defined in section 6103(b)(9)) working under the direction and control of any such officers and employees of the Department of Justice; and

(iii) Court reporters.

Par. 3. The following new sections are added immediately after § 301.6103(h)(2)-1:

§ 301.6103(i)-1 Disclosure of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) to and by officers and employees of the Department of Justice or another Federal agency for use in Federal grand jury proceeding, or preparation for proceeding or investigation, involving enforcement of Federal criminal statute not involving tax administration.

(2) Services relating to the processing, storage, transmission, or reproduction of such returns or return information, or to the programming, maintenance, repair, or testing of equipment or other property, for purposes of tax administration (as defined in section 6103(b)(4)).

No person, or officer or employee of such person, to whom a return or return information is disclosed by an officer or employee of the Treasury Department, the State tax agency, or the Social Security Administration under the authority of this paragraph shall in turn disclose such return or return information for any purpose other than as described in this paragraph, and no such further disclosure for any such described purpose shall be made by such person, officer, or employee to anyone, other than another officer or employee of such person whose duties or responsibilities require such disclosure for a purpose described in this paragraph, without written approval by the Internal Revenue Service.

(b) Limitation. For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, disclosure of returns or return information in connection with contractual procurement of property or services described in such paragraph will be treated as necessary only if such procurement or the performance of such services cannot otherwise be reasonably, properly, or economically carried out or performed without such disclosures. Thus, for example, disclosures of returns or return information to employees of a contractor for purposes of programming, maintaining, repairing, or testing computer equipment used by the Internal Revenue Service or a State tax agency should be made only if such services cannot be reasonably, properly, or economically performed by use of information or other data in a form which does not identify a particular taxpayer. If, however, disclosure of returns or return information is in fact necessary in order for such employees to reasonably, properly, or economically perform the computer related services, such disclosures should be restricted to returns or return information selected or appearing at random. Further, for purposes of paragraph (a), disclosure of returns or return information in connection with the contractual procurement of property or services described in such paragraph should be made only to the extent necessary to reasonably, properly, or economically conduct such procurement activity.

Thus, for example, if an activity described in paragraph (a) can be reasonably, properly, and economically conducted by disclosure of only parts or portions of a return or if deletion of taxpayer identity information (as defined in section 6103(b)(6) of the Code) reflected on a return would not seriously impair the ability of the contractor or his officers or employees to conduct the activity, then only such parts or portions of the return, or only the return with taxpayer identity information deleted, should be disclosed.

(c) Notification requirements. Each officer or employee of any person to whom returns or return information is or may be disclosed as authorized by paragraph (a) of this section shall be notified in writing by such person that returns or return information disclosed to such officer or employee can be used only for a purpose and to the extent authorized by paragraph (a) of this section and that further disclosure of any such returns or return information for a purpose or to an extent unauthorized by such paragraph constitutes a felony, punishable upon conviction by a fine of as much as $5,000, or imprisonment for as long as 5 years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution. Such person shall also so notify each such officer and employee that any such unauthorized further disclosure of returns or return information may also result in an award of civil damages against the officer or employee in an amount not less than $1,000 with respect to each instance of unauthorized disclosure.

(d) Safeguards. Any person to whom a return or return information is disclosed as authorized by paragraph (a) of this section shall comply with all applicable conditions and requirements which may be prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service for the purposes of protecting the confidentiality of returns and return information and preventing disclosures of returns or return information in a manner unauthorized by paragraph (a). The terms of any contract between the Treasury Department, a State tax agency, or the Social Security Administration and a person pursuant to which a return or return information is or may be disclosed for a purpose described in paragraph (a) shall provide, or shall be amended to provide, that such person, and officers and employees of the person, shall comply with all such applicable conditions and restrictions as may be prescribed by the Service by regulation, published rules or procedures, or written communication to such person. If the Service determines that any person, or an officer or employee of any such person, to whom returns or return information has been disclosed as provided in paragraph (a) has failed to, or does not, satisfy such prescribed conditions or requirements, the Service may take such actions as are deemed necessary to ensure that such conditions or requirements are or will be satisfied, including—

(1) Suspension or termination of any duty or obligation arising under a contract with the Treasury Department referred to in this paragraph or suspension of disclosures by the Treasury Department otherwise authorized by paragraph (a) of this section, or

(2) Suspension of further disclosures of returns or return information by the Service to the State tax agency, until the Service determines that such conditions and requirements have been or will be satisfied.

(e) Definitions. For purposes of this section—

(1) The term "Treasury Department" includes the Internal Revenue Service and the Office of the Chief Counsel for the Internal Revenue Service, and

(2) The term "State tax agency" means an agency, body, or commission described in section 6103(d) of the Code.

§ 301.6103(p)(2)(B)-1 Disclosure of certain returns and return information by other Federal agencies.

(a) General rule. Subject to the requirements of this section, returns and return information disclosed by the Internal Revenue Service to officers and employees of another Federal agency (as defined in section 6103(b)(9) of the Internal Revenue Code) as provided by section 6103 may, if the Commissioner of Internal Revenue determines that such returns or return information is more readily available from such Federal agency, be disclosed by such officers and employees to officers and employees of another Federal agency, the General Accounting Office, an agency, body, or commission described in section 6103(d) or (l)(6), or a person described in section 6103(e) for a purpose or use authorized or required by, but subject to any requirements imposed by, any other provision of section 6103 and the regulations thereunder. Any such disclosure may be made only as, to the extent, and to such persons as may be authorized in writing by the Commissioner pursuant to a written request for such disclosure by such person, and containing such information, as may be designated or provided by the applicable provision of section 6103 and the regulations thereunder pursuant to which the disclosure is sought. Such disclosure authorization by the Commissioner shall be directed to the head of the Federal agency from which disclosure is sought and may contain such conditions or restrictions as the Commissioner may prescribe.

(b) Records and reports of disclosure. The Federal agency making a disclosure authorized by paragraph (a) of this section shall maintain to the satisfaction of the Service a permanent system of standardized records with respect to any disclosure authorization by the Commissioner described in paragraph (a) and any disclosure of returns or return information made pursuant to such authorization. In order to enable the Service to make a timely submission of the public report on disclosures to the Joint Committee on Taxation as required by section 6103(p)(3)(C) of the Code, the Federal agency shall, within 30 days after the close of each calendar year, furnish to the Commissioner a report with respect to such records which provides the number of—

(1) Disclosure authorizations by the Commissioner,

(2) Instances in which returns or return information was disclosed pursuant to such disclosure authorizations and to disclosure authorizations executed in prior calendar years, and

(3) Taxpayers whose returns or return information with respect to whom was disclosed pursuant to the disclosure authorization described in subparagraph (2).

In addition, in order to enable the Service to make a timely submission of the report to the Joint Committee on Taxation required by section 6103(p)(3)(B), the Federal agency shall furnish to the Commissioner a report with respect to, or summary of, the records at such time or times, in such form, and containing such information as the Commissioner may prescribe in a written request directed to the head of such Federal agency. The requirements of this paragraph do not apply to disclosures of taxpayer identity information described in section 6103(m) or to disclosures of returns and return information as provided by paragraph (a) which, had such disclosures been made directly by the Service, would not have been subject to the recordkeeping requirements imposed by section 6103(p)(3)(A).

Austria; situs of nonprofit organization. The exemption from tax provided under Article XIII (3) of the U.S.-Austria Income Tax Convention for a recipient of a grant, allowance, or award from a nonprofit religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational organization shall be allowed without regard to the situs of the nonprofit organization.

Advice has been requested whether the situs of nonprofit organizations has any effect on the application of Article XIII (3) of the United States-Republic of Austria Income Tax Convention (the Convention), 1957-2 C.B. 985.

Article XIII (3) of the Convention provides that a resident of one of the contracting States who is a recipient of a grant, allowance or award from a nonprofit religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational organization, shall be exempt from tax by the other State on such payments from such organization (other than compensation for personal services).

Under the authority granted by Article XVII of the Convention, the Competent Authority of the United States and the Competent Authority for the Republic of Austria have agreed that the exemption provided under Article XIII (3) of the Convention shall be allowed without regard to the situs of the nonprofit organization.

Rev. Proc. 80-45 [1]

Section 1. Purpose

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to further extend the time set forth in Rev. Proc. 77-47, 1977-2 C.B. 580, in which contractors or subcontractors with contracts subject to the Vinson-Trammell Act, 48 Stat. 503 (current version at 10 U.S.C. sections 2382 and 7300 (1970)) in taxable years that end after September 30, 1976, must file certain reports.

Section 1005(a) of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1981, Pub. L. 96-342, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. (September 8, 1980), exempts from the profit limitations of the Vinson-Trammell Act contracts for the construction or manufacture of aircraft or naval vessels and parts thereof when the final payment under such contracts is made before October 1, 1981. Further, section 1005(b) of such Act prohibits the Internal Revenue Service from requiring any reports under the Vinson-Trammell Act to be filed before October 1, 1981.

Sec. 2. Extension and Effect on Other Documents

Section 4.02 of Rev. Proc. 77-47, as modified by Rev. Proc. 78-38, 1978-2 C.B. 542, Rev. Proc. 79-25, 1979-1 C.B. 566, Rev. Proc. 79-53, 1979-2 C.B. 538, and Rev. Proc. 80-13, 1980-16 I.R.B. 32, is further modified by extending to October 1, 1981, the time for filing Forms 949 and 949-A for taxpayers with taxable years that end before January 1, 1981.

An extension of the time granted taxpayers for filing Forms 949 and 949-A does not extend the time for filing their federal income tax returns.

Interest on any excess profits will be charged from the due date of the report, without regard to any extensions, to the date of payment. However, taxpayers who repay excess profits by October 1, 1981, will not be subject to the penalty for failure to pay tax with respect to the excess profits under section 6651 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Rev. Proc. 80-13, which provides that Rev. Proc. 77-47 is extended to October 15, 1980, for taxpayers with tax years that ended before January 31, 1981, is superseded.

Rev. Proc. 77-47 is further modified.

(Also Part I, Section 6103; 301.6103(c)-1.)

Rev. Proc. 80-46

Section 1. Purpose

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to enhance the ability of the Internal Revenue Service district offices to respond fully and effectively to inquiries by employees of business entities. This procedure is intended to facilitate the resolution of account related questions and does not provide for the furnishing of tax returns to third parties. It has no effect on the Conference and Practice Requirements (26 CFR 601.501 et seq.), technical advice requests or ruling determination letters. Nor does it affect the ability of a taxpayer, or any person acting on behalf of a taxpayer, to contact the Internal Revenue Service by telephone for the purpose of obtaining general information regarding the meaning of a bill, notice, or letter.

Sec. 2. Background

The Internal Revenue Code specifies that confidential tax information with respect to sole proprietorships, partnerships, corporations, estates and trusts may be disclosed to certain persons. The Service is prohibited from disclosing confidential tax information to another person acting on behalf of a taxpayer in the absence of a written authorization from the taxpayer. It is recognized that the limitations on disclosure often cause delays in servicing requests for tax assistance. The restrictions are particularly troublesome for businesses that have a number of employees who need to contact the Service to resolve day to day tax matters. For example, an employee who is not specifically authorized in writing to receive confidential tax information might contact the Service to resolve a tax matter of the business, such as a notice or a bill. In these situations, the Service makes every effort to resolve the issue by discussing it in general terms without disclosing confidential tax information from our records. However, on many occasions, due to the complexity of the business's tax matters, the question cannot be resolved without disclosure of confidential tax information by the Service. Accordingly, the Service will accept letters of authorization, pursuant to the requirements of this revenue procedure, with attached lists specifying employees of business entities who are authorized to receive confidential tax information.

Sec. 3. Persons Who May Submit a List.

.01 A sole proprietor may submit a list.

.02 With respect to a partnership, any partner may submit a list but the scope of the authorization is limited to those tax periods during which he or she is a partner.

.03 Authorization lists may be submitted on behalf of a corporation by the corporate president/chief executive officer or an officer authorized by law to bind the corporation. As an alternative, the list may be submitted by any principal officer if attested to by the secretary or any other officer.

.04 If the business entity is included in an estate, a list may be submitted by the administrator, executor or trustee of the estate.

.05 A trustee may submit an authorization list on behalf of a business entity that is a trust.

.06 In the case of business matters of an incompetent, an authorization list may be submitted by the trustee, guardian or committee for the incompetent.

.07 If substantially all of the property of the business is in the hands of a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy, such persons may submit a list.

Sec. 5. Where to Send the Letter of Authorization

The letter of authorization shall be submitted to the Disclosure Officer for the Internal Revenue Service district office with which contacts are expected. A list of Disclosure Officer addresses appears in Sec. 7. If contact with more than one district office is anticipated, a letter must be sent to each District Disclosure Officer. The Disclosure Officer will acknowledge receipt by letter, which will provide a telephone number for contacts pursuant to Sec. 6.03.

Sec. 6. Modification of the Authorization List

.01 It is the responsibility of the taxpayer to keep the authorization lists current and to modify the list when necessary. The Service will recognize authorizations as effective until revised or revoked, unless otherwise specified in the letter of authorization.

.02 The taxpayer shall modify the authorization list by sending a letter which meets the requirements of Secs. 3 and 4. The letter shall be addressed to the appropriate District Disclosure Officer(s) and shall clearly indicate the names of employees to be deleted from the list and the names of employees to be added to the list. If revocation of the Disclosure Authorization List is desired, the letter shall so state. Modifications will become effective when the Disclosure Officer receives the letter.

.03 To quickly effect deletions from the list, taxpayers may advise the Disclosure Officer of the deletions by telephone. The deletions become effective upon notification of the Disclosure Officer but shall then be confirmed in writing.

.04 The Disclosure Officer should be contacted five days after the modification letter is mailed to confirm receipt.

SEC. 9. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure becomes effective December 10, 1980.

---

26 CFR 601.105: Examination of returns and claims for refund, credit or abatement; determination of correct tax liability.
(Also Part I, Section 2032A; 20.2032A-8.)

Rev. Proc. 80-49

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to outline the procedure for electing to value less than all qualified real property in a decedent's gross estate under section 2032A of the Internal Revenue Code where an election to value all the qualified real property under section 2032A was previously made on or before August 30, 1980.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 2032A of the Code provides that, under certain conditions, an executor may elect to value real property included in a decedent's gross estate which was used as a farm or a closely held business at a value based upon its current use rather than at its full fair market value. This election must be made no later than nine months after the decedent's death (unless an extension of time to file the estate tax return is granted) pursuant to section 2032A(d)(1).

.02 Prior to the publication of section 20.2032A-8(a)(2) of the Estate Tax Regulations on July 31, 1980, it was unclear whether an election could be made to value less than all qualified real property included in an estate. That regulation clarifies the issue by permitting such an election, provided the threshold requirements of section 2032A(b)(1)(B) of the Code have been met by property actually valued under section 2032A.

.03 Those executors who made an election on or before August 30, 1980, to value all qualified real property included in a decedent's estate at its current use value may now want to withdraw a portion of that property from section 2032A treatment. Such a change is a partial revocation of the section 2032A election.

.04 Section 20.2032A-8(a)(1) of the regulations provides that once made, an election is irrevocable. However, section 20.2032A-8(d) provides an exception to this general rule. Elections to use section 2032A of the Code made on or before August 30, 1980, may be revoked. The deadline for filing a notice of revocation is January 31, 1981 (six months after the publication of section 20.2032A-8 in the Federal Register). However, if the period of limitations for assessments for the affected estate (normally three years and nine months from date of death) will expire earlier than January 31, 1981, such expiration date is the last day for filing the notice of revocation.

.05 Provided the threshold requirements of section 2032A(b)(1)(B) of the Code will be met following the revocation, a revocation may be made as to part of the qualified property. A partial revocation is made by filing a notice of revocation and paying any additional estate tax and interest due. The notice must contain the decedent's name, date of death, and taxpayer identification number.

Appropriate revised schedules should be attached showing the property for which the election is being made and the tax recomputation. If the partial revocation results in a decrease in tax, the executor should, in addition, file a claim for refund for the amount of refund to which the estate is entitled. Such a reduction may result for example, if after the partial revocation, the remaining specially valued property satisfies the requirements for valuation based under section 2032A(e)(7), but section 2032A(e)(8) was used prior to the revocation. See section 20.2032A-8(d) of the regulations for the requirement concerning the filing of an amended return to conform an election.

.06 As a result of the revocation the agreement required under sections 2032A(b)(1)(D) and (d)(2) of the Code must be conformed to specify by legal description the property which remains subject to section 2032A.

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 2032A of the Code is restricted to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1976. This revenue procedure applies only to executors desiring to make partial revocations for estates where the original election under section 2032A was made on or before August 30, 1980. The notice of revocation must be filed by January 31, 1981 (six months after the publication of section 20.2032A-8 in the Federal Register). However, if the period of limitations for assessments for the affected estate will expire (normally three years and nine months from date of death) earlier than January 31, 1981, such expiration date is the last day for filing the notice of revocation.

The Treasury Department announces that it will hold a public meeting on November 19, 1980, to solicit the views of interested persons on issues being considered in the negotiation of an income tax treaty between the United States and Tunisia.

The public meeting will be held at the Treasury Department at 2:00 p.m., in Room 4125. Persons interested in attending are requested to give notice in writing by November 14, 1980, of their intention to attend. Notices should be addressed to H. The Treasury seeks the views of interested persons on any of the items covered in those models and on any aspect of Tunisian income tax relevant to such a treaty, including the taxation of dividends, interest, royalties, film rentals, insurance, and independent personal services.

Windfall Profit Tax—Base Prices for Tier 2 and Tier 3 Oil

The Service will modify the temporary and proposed regulations on base prices of tier two and tier three oil for the crude oil windfall profit tax, published in the Federal Register on September 30, 1980, T.D. 7721, 1980-42 I.R.B. 13.

As revised, the regulations will provide that base prices are to be determined on a property-by-property basis.

The new base price rules will apply to oil removed after September 30, 1980, but deposits of withheld or estimated tax need not reflect the new rules until December 15, 1980. Deposits made before December 15, 1980, may be made under the interim rule for determining base prices of oil removed before October 1, 1980, contained in Temporary Excise Tax Regulations section 150.4989-1(c)(8), supra at 17.

Windfall Profit Tax—Time for Filing Statements and Returns and Making Withholding Adjustments

The existing temporary regulations under the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 will be changed to allow additional time for filing annual statements and returns and for making withholding adjustments.

The current regulations, T.D. 7690, 1980-16 I.R.B. 11, 27, require purchasers (or in some cases, operators) to furnish a yearly statement of windfall profit tax liability and amount withheld and a yearly statement of amount deductible for income tax purposes to producers, operators, or partnerships by January 31, 1981. Yearly returns with the same information are required to be filed with the Service by February 28, 1981. Withholding adjustments in subsequent payments for oil removed during 1980 may not be made after the annual statement is furnished to producers, operators, or partnerships. Producers for whom too little tax was withheld for the calendar year must file an annual return and pay the additional tax due by February 28, 1981.

The changes to the regulations under the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 will include the following revised requirements concerning annual statements and returns and withholding adjustments:

Form 6248 will be provided for the yearly statement of windfall profit tax liability and amount withheld. It will be due to be furnished to producers, operators, or partnerships by March 31, 1981, and will be due to be filed with the Internal Revenue Service by April 30, 1981.

A separate statement of the amount deductible for income tax purposes will be due to producers, operators, or partnerships by January 31, 1981. Corresponding information must be furnished the Service on the annual return (Form 6248) due April 30.

As provided under the current regulations, withholding adjustments in subsequent payments for oil removed during the removal year may be made until the yearly statement of windfall profit tax liability and amount withheld is furnished producers, operators, or partnerships. Because the due date for furnishing this statement will be extended, the time for making adjustments will also be extended.

Producers for whom too little tax was withheld (after adjustments) for 1980 will be required to file an annual return and pay the additional tax due by May 31 of the year after the removal year.

The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 170.—Charitable, Etc., Contributions and Gifts

26 CFR 1.170A-9: Definition of section 170 (b)(1)(A) organization.

Private foundation controlled by community trust; contribution limitation. A trust is operated, supervised, and controlled by the distribution committee of a community trust. Each individual donor to the trust has the right to designate charitable recipients of the income and corpus of the trust attributable to the donor's contribution. The trust is described in section 170 (b)(1)(D)(iii) of the Code and the 50 percent charitable deduction limitation of section 170(b)(1) is applicable for transfers to the trust.

Rev. Rul. 80-305

ISSUE

Does the trust described below qualify for status as an organization described in section 170(b)(1)(D)(iii) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The trust is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. Its governing instrument states that it was created to receive donations, to pool them in a common fund, and to distribute all of its income to organizations that are publicly supported organizations under section 509 (a)(1). The trustee is required to keep an accounting of the portion of the income that is attributable to the contribution of each of the donors. Each donor has the right to designate annually the recipient of such portion, subject to the requirement that the recipient be a publicly supported organization under section 509(a)(1), and to direct (by deed or by will) the payment, to an organization described in section 509(a)(1), of the corpus in the common fund attributable to his or her contribution. All of the income of the trust is required to be (and is) distributed to one or more organizations described in section 509(a)(1) not later than the 15th day of the third month after the close of the taxable year in which the income is realized by the trust. All of the corpus attributable to any donor's contribution to the trust is required to be (and is) distributed to one or more organizations described in section 509(a)(1) not later than one year after the death of the donor or the donor's surviving spouse if the surviving spouse has the right to designate the recipients of the corpus.

The trust is subject to the control of the distribution committee of a community trust that is a publicly supported organization described in sections 170(b)(1)(A)(vi) and 509 (a)(1) of the Code. If a donor does not exercise his right to designate a recipient, the funds are disbursed as the distribution committee may direct. The distribution committee also has the power to replace the trustee for breach of fiduciary duty or failure to earn a reasonable rate of return on the trust principal.

LAW

Section 170(b)(1)(D)(iii) of the Code describes an organization to which an individual may make a charitable contribution subject to the 50 percent deduction limitation set forth in section 170(b)(1). Included in section 170(b)(1)(D)(iii) is a private foundation all of the contributions to which are pooled in a common fund and which would be described in section 509(a)(3) but for the right of any substantial contributor or the spouse of a substantial contributor to designate annually the recipients, from among organizations described in section 509 (a)(1), of the income attributable to the donor's contribution to the fund, and but for the right to direct (by deed or will) the payment, to an organization described in section 509(a)(1), of the corpus in the common fund attributable to the donor's contribution. Additionally, all of the income of the common fund is required to be (and is) distributed to one or more organizations described in section 509(a)(1) not later than the 15th day of the third month after the close of the taxable year in which the income is realized by the fund. Finally, all of the corpus attributable to any donor's contribution to the fund is required to be (and is) distributed to one or more such organizations not later than one year after the donor's death or after the death of the donor's surviving spouse if the spouse has the right to designate the recipients of such corpus.

Section 509(a)(3) of the Code describes a suporting organization as one which—

(A) is organized, and at all times thereafter is operated, exclusively for the benefit of, to perform the functions of, or to carry out the purposes of one or more specified organizations described in section 509(a)(1) or (2).

(B) is operated, supervised, or controlled by or in connection with one or more organizations described in section 509(a)(1) or (2), and

(C) is not controlled directly or indirectly by one or more disqualified persons (as defined in section 4946) other than foundation managers and other than one or more organizations described in section 509(a)(1) or (2).

Section 1.509(a)-4(d)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the "specified organizations" referred to in section 509(a)(3)(A) of the Code may be specified by class rather than by name if the supporting organization is operated, supported, or controlled by a publicly supported organization and if the organization's articles require that it be operated to benefit one or more organizations that are designated by class, and which includes such publicly supported organization.

Section 1.509(a)-4(g) of the regulations provides that the term "operated, supervised, or controlled by" presupposes a substantial degree of direction over the policies, programs, and activities of a supporting organization by one or more publicly supported organizations. The relationship required is comparable to that of a parent and subsidiary where the subsidiary is under the direction of, and accountable or responsible to, the parent organization.

Section 1.509(a)-4(j)(1) of the regulations provides that an organization will be considered "controlled," for purposes of section 509(a)(3)(C) of the Code, if any substantial contributor has the right to designate annually the recipients, from among the publicly supported organizations, of the income attributable to his contribution to the supporting organization.

In this case, the trust does not specify by name the publicly supported organization on whose behalf it is to be operated. Rather, the trust is required by the terms of its governing instrument to distribute all of its income to organizations that are publicly supported organizations under section 509 (a)(1) of the Code. The community trust falls within this class of organizations. Therefore, under section 1.509 (a)-4(d)(2) of the regulations, in order for the trust to be described in section 509(a)(3), but for the rights retained by the donors, it must be operated, supervised, or controlled by the community trust within the meaning of section 1.509(a)-4(g).

The distribution committee of the community trust has the power to replace the trustee of the trust for breach of fiduciary duty or failure to earn a reasonable rate of return on the trust principal. Also, if a donor does not exercise his right to designate a recipient, the funds are disbursed as the distribution committee directs. These powers over the trust are sufficient to establish the relationship required by section 1.509(a)-4(g) of the regulations. Therefore, the trust is "operated, supervised, or controlled by" the community trust.

The donor's right to designate recipients, however, constitutes "control" by substantial contributors for purposes of section 509(a)(3)(C) of the Code. Therefore, the organization is controlled by disqualified persons within the meaning of section 509(a)(3)(C).

HOLDING

The trust meets the requirements of sections 509(a)(3)(A) and (B) of the Code, and would meet the requirements of section 509(a)(3)(C) but for the right of the donors to designate recipients. Accordingly, since the trust would be an organization described in section 509(a)(3) but for the right of the donors to designate recipients, it is an organization described in section 170(b)(1)(D)(iii).

Section 401.—Qualified Pension, Profit-Sharing, and Stock Bonus Plans

26 CFR 1.401-1: Qualified pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans.

Plan funded solely by employees. A defined contribution pension plan established by an employer may be a qualified plan under section 401 of the Code even though the only contributions are those made by the employees; Rev. Ruls. 54-152 and 66-205 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-306

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate the position in Rev. Rul. 54-152, 1954-1 C.B. 149, and Rev. Rul. 66-205, 1966-2 C.B. 119, in view of the amendment of section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1.

The issue in the two revenue rulings is whether a pension plan will fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Code merely because no contributions are made by the employer so that the pension plan is funded by employee contributions only.

An employer established a defined contribution pension plan under which the only contributions are employee contributions. The contributions are deducted from each employee's wages paid by the employer at the rate of (x) cents per hour worked. Benefits under the plan are distributed only upon the death, disability, retirement, or separation from service of an employee.

Section 401(a)(1) of the Code generally provides, in part, that a pension plan of an employer may qualify under section 401(a) if contributions are made by the employer, or employees, or both for the purpose of distributing to such employees or their beneficiaries the corpus and the income of the fund in accordance with the plan.

Thus, a pension plan established and maintained by an employer may be funded by either employer or employee contributions, or both, so long as the plan is not one established by the unilateral action of employees.

Accordingly, the defined contribution pension plan will not fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Code merely because contributions are only made by employees.

Similarly, a defined benefit pension plan (whether or not the employer retains a liability to provide the plan benefits to the extent the employee contributions are insufficient) will not fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Code merely because no employer contributions are made under the plan.

This revenue ruling does not deal with whether the employee contributions will of themselves satisfy the minimum funding requirements of section 412 of the Code to the extent such requirements apply.

Rev. Rul. 54-152 and Rev. Rul. 66-205 are superseded because the positions stated therein are restated under current law in this revenue ruling.

26 CFR 1.401-4: Discrimination as to contributions or benefits.
(Also Section 410; 1.410(b)-1.)

Discrimination; mandatory employee contribution plan. A mandatory employee contribution plan offered to all employees that operates to deny participation to lower paid employees or to deprive lower paid employees of benefits at least as high as the benefits provided for higher paid employees in proportion to compensation, after considering differentials permitted under the requirements for integration with social security, may result in discrimination within the meaning of section 410(b)(1) or 401(a)(4) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 72-58 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-307

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate the position of Rev. Rul. 72-58, 1972-1 C.B. 111, in view of the amendment of section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1.

The issue in Rev. Rul. 72-58 is whether mandatory employee contributions under a qualified plan may result in discrimination within the meaning of section 410(b) (1) or 401(a) (4) of the Code under the circumstances described below.

Section 410(b) (1) of the Code requires that a qualified plan cover either a certain percentage of an employer's employees or a classification of employees that does not discriminate in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated.

If a mandatory employee contribution plan is offered to all employees, but the contributions required of the employee-participants are burdensome, some of the lower paid employees may not participate because of such requirement. In such event the plan may not meet the coverage requirements of section 410(b) (1) of the Code.

Section 401(a) (4) of the Code requires that a qualified plan must provide either benefits or contributions which do not discriminate in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated.

In cases where the plan provides for optional rates of contributions by employees, and employer contributions or the benefits are geared to the employee contributions in such a way that a higher rate of employee contributions will result in larger benefits from employer contributions, the employee contributions may similarly result in discrimination within the meaning of section 401(a) (4) of the Code, because the employer-derived benefits favor those who are highly compensated.

Accordingly, mandatory employee contributions may operate either to deny participation to lower paid employees or to deprive lower paid employees of benefits at least as high in proportion to compensation as are provided for higher paid employees, after taking into account differentials permitted under the requirements for integration with social security benefits. Thus, mandatory employee contributions may result in discrimination within the meaning of sections 410 (b) (1) or 401(a) (4) of the Code.

Although Rev. Rul. 72-58 provided that, generally, discrimination would not result if the rate of mandatory employee contributions did not exceed six percent of compensation, discrimination may result even in that case.

The principles stated herein also apply to a plan described in section 410(c) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 72-58 is superseded because the position stated therein is restated under current law in this revenue ruling.

Section 410.—Minimum Participation Standards

26 CFR 1.410(b)-1: Minimum coverage requirements.

Whether mandatory employee contributions under an employee benefit plan may result in discrimination within the meaning of sections 410(b) (1) (B) or 401(a) (4) of the Code. See Rev. Rul. 80-307, page 6.

Section 412.—Minimum Funding Standards

Automatic approval for certain changes in funding methods for defined benefit plans. See Rev. Proc. 80-50, page 45.

26 CFR 1.451-1: General rule for taxable year of inclusion.

Public utilities; fuel adjustment charges; when includible in income. A public utility that uses the accrual method of accounting is authorized to include fuel adjustment charges in its customers' bills for natural gas. The charges may be adjusted every six months and are based on estimated sales for the period they are in effect, but they are intended to recover the increased fuel costs for the preceding six-month period. The utility must include the fuel adjustment charges in gross income as part of the selling price of gas sold during the period the charges are in effect.

Rev. Rul. 80-308

ISSUE

When must a public utility company that uses the accrual method of accounting include in its gross income its increased fuel costs that are passed through to the utility's customers over a 6-month cycle by a fuel adjustment charge?

FACTS

M is a natural gas company that files its federal income tax return on a calendar year basis using the accrual method of accounting. The rates for natural gas charged by M to its customers are regulated by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC). The FERC determines the amount of any increase in M's rates based upon, among other things, 12 months of actual increased operating expenses, adjusted for any known changes that will occur within the following 9 months. This 12-month period is called the "base period." Generally a FERC rate increase does not become effective until about 10 months after the end of the base period. M does not receive payment until it delivers gas to its customers and bills them. Thus, under the normal rate-making process, M cannot recover any increased costs until a considerable time after they are incurred. This delay is often referred to as "regulatory lag."

Because of regulatory lag and unusual increases in the cost of gas, the FERC authorized a special method for M to recover its increased gas costs charged by M's suppliers by inserting a "purchased gas adjustment" (PGA) clause in M's tariff. Under the PGA clause M can adjust its rates every 6 months to recover its increased gas costs during that period (first six months). This adjustment (fuel adjustment charge) is based on estimated sales and is in addition to the normal rate M is otherwise authorized to charge its customers. It is effective for the succeeding full 6-month period (second six months). Any overcollections or undercollections resulting from the fuel adjustment charges must be included in the calculation of the next 6 months' fuel adjustment charge (third six months). Thus, the PGA clause has significantly reduced regulatory lag for M's increased gas costs.

For financial reporting purposes M defers the increased gas costs for the first six months until the second six months, the period during which it includes the fuel adjustment charges in its customers' bills. For income tax purposes M deducts the increased gas costs in the year the gas is delivered to its customers, the first six months. See Rev. Rul. 75-407, 1975-2 C.B. 197. For financial reporting and income tax purposes M includes the fuel adjustment charges in its gross income when they are added to a customer's bill as part of the selling price of fuel sold during the 6 months the fuel adjustment charge is in effect, the second six months.

LAW

Section 451(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the amount of any item of gross income is included in the gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income this amount is to be properly accounted for as of a different period.

Section 1.451-1(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that under an accrual method of accounting income is includable in gross income when all the events have occurred that fix the right to receive the income and its amount can be determined with reasonable accuracy.

All the events that fix the right to receive income occur when (1) the required performance takes place, (2) payment is due, or (3) payment is made, whichever happens first. See Schlude v. Commissioner, 372 U.S. 128 (1963), Ct. D. 1879, 1963-1 C.B. 99 and Rev. Rul. 79-195, 1979-1 C.B. 177.

Rev. Rul. 63-182, 1963-2 C.B. 194 discusses a situation in which a natural gas distributor using the accrual method of accounting receives a refund from its supplier because of a retroactive decrease in the price of previously purchased gas. The refund was the result of a settlement agreement reached between the distributor and its supplier and was conditioned upon approval by the Federal Power Commission (FPC). The distributor was required by the FPC to adjust its gas charges to its customers to reflect any decrease in its price paid for gas. The distributor passed the refund on to its customers by adjusting their gas bills over the 12 months following receipt of the refund by offsetting or crediting the refund against future charges.

Rev. Rul. 63-182 concludes that the distributor's liability to make refunds to its customers was established on the date the FPC issued its order approving the rate settlement agreement entered into by the distributor and its supplier and not over the 12-month period during which the customer's gas bills are being adjusted.

The fuel adjustment charge is an addition to the normal approved billing rate that M uses to bill its customers. It is intended to permit M to recover its increased gas costs sooner than the normal billing-rate process allows. Although the fuel adjustment charge is calculated by reference to the increased cost of gas purchased by M during the first six months, it is not a charge that is a part of the selling price of this gas. Rather, it is an adjustment to the selling price of gas that is sold during the 6 months the fuel adjustment charge is in effect, the second six months.

M is authorized by the PGA clause to adjust its rates every six months when it incurs increased gas costs. M must make additional sales in the future in order to recover, or to have the right to recover, the increased costs represented by the fuel adjustment charge. Accordingly, the "all events test" under section 1.451-1(a) of the regulations is not met until M sells gas during the 6 months the fuel adjustment clause is in effect.

In Rev. Rul. 63-182 the taxpayer was required to make refunds to its customers when the FPC issued its order approving the settlement agreement. Although the taxpayer chose to make the refunds by adjusting its customers' bills over 12 months, the taxpayer's liability to its customers was unconditional upon the FPC's approval of the agreement. The liability was fixed at that time and not contingent upon the taxpayers having future sales. Thus, the "all events test" was met upon approval of the settlement agreement by the FPC.

HOLDING

A public utility company that uses the accrual method of accounting must include fuel adjustment charges that are applied as part of the rate charged for future sales in its gross income as part of the selling price of fuel sold during the specific 6-month period the fuel adjustment charge is in effect.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 63-182 is distinguished.

Section 501.—Exemption From Tax on Corporations, Certain Trusts, Etc.

26 CFR 1.501(c)(3)-1: Organizations organized and operated for religious, charitable, scientific, testing for public safety, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.

Hospital; organization formed to construct, maintain, and operate or lease. An otherwise qualifying nonprofit organization that was created to construct, maintain, and operate or lease a public hospital and related facilities for the benefit of a city and the surrounding communities is operated exclusively for charitable purposes and qualifies for exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-309

ISSUE

Is the nonprofit organization described below, which otherwise qualifies for exemption from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, operated exclusively for charitable purposes?

FACTS

The organization was created to construct, maintain, and operate or lease a public hospital and related facilities. After construction of these facilities, the organization's only activity has been to lease such facilities to an association exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. The lessee operates the facilities and pays as consideration an amount sufficient only to retire the organization's indebtedness incurred to finance the hospital and meet the organization's administrative expenses. Trustees of the lessee association make up the lessor organization's entire board of directors.

The articles of incorporation provide that the organization's purpose is to provide hospital facilities for city Y and the surrounding communities. The articles also provide that all of the organization's assets will be transferred, without consideration, to city Y when all indebtedness has been paid. City Y has agreed to accept title at such time.

With minor exceptions, the organization's income is derived from the lease payments and disbursements are made for administrative expenses and retirement of indebtedness.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 501(c)(3) of the Code provides for the exemption from federal income tax of organizations organized and operated exclusively for charitable purposes, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations states that the term "charitable" is used in section 501(c)(3) of the Code in its generally accepted legal sense.

In the general law of charity, the promotion of health is considered to be a charitable purpose. Restatement (Second), Trusts, secs. 368, 372; IV Scott on Trusts (3d ed. 1967), secs. 368, 372.

The organization, by building and leasing a public hospital and related facilities to an exempt charitable association, which operates the facilities, for an amount sufficient only to retire indebtedness and meet necessary operating expenses, is furthering the charitable purpose of promoting the health of the community. See Rev. Rul. 73-313, 1973-2 C.B. 174; see also Rev. Rul. 69-631, 1969-2 C.B. 119.

HOLDING

The organization as described above is operated exclusively for charitable purposes and, thus, qualifies for exemption from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

APPLICATION INSTRUCTIONS

Even though an organization considers itself within the scope of this revenue ruling, it must file an application on Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption, in order to be recognized by the Service as exempt under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. See sections 1.501(a)-1 and 1.508-1(a) of the regulations. In accordance with the instructions to Form 1023, the application should be filed with the District Director of Internal Revenue for the key district indicated therein.

Section 4941.—Taxes on Self-Dealing

26 CFR 53.4941(d)-1: Definition of self-dealing.

Private foundations; self-dealing; incidental benefit to disqualified person. A private foundation made a grant to an exempt university to establish an educational program providing instruction in manufacturing engineering. A corporation that is a disqualified person with respect to the private foundation intends to hire graduates of the new program and encourage its employees to enroll in the program, but will not receive preferential treatment in recruiting graduates or enrolling its employees. The grant is not an act of self-dealing within the meaning of section 4941 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-310

ISSUE

In the situation described below, does a grant by a private foundation to a university to establish an educational program constitute an act of self-dealing within the meaning of section 4941 of the Internal Revenue Code because the program benefits a corporation that is a disqualified person?

FACTS

P is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code, and is a private foundation within the meaning of section 509(a). P has made a grant to U, a university that is exempt under section 501(c)(3), and is not a private foundation because it is described in sections 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) and 509(a)(1). By its terms, the grant must be used by U to establish a new educational department providing instruction in manufacturing engineering. Students enrolled in the program will acquire skills useful in a wide range of manufacturing businesses.

W corporation has its headquarters and principal manufacturing plant located in the same city as P and U. W is a disqualified person with respect to P within the meaning of section 4946 of the Code. W intends to seek to employ graduates of the new program at U, and will encourage its employees to enroll in the program. However, W will not receive preferential treatment in its attempts to recruit graduates, and its employees will compete for admission to the program on an equal nondiscriminatory basis with other members of the general public. It is expected that a number of other manufacturers, including competitors of W, will seek to recruit graduates of the program and to enroll their employees in the program.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 4941 of the Code imposes a tax on each act of self-dealing between a disqualified person and a private foundation. Section 4941(d)(1)(E) provides that the term "self-dealing" includes any direct or indirect transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a disqualified person of the income or the assets of a private foundation.

Section 53.4941(d)-2(f)(2) of the Foundation Excise Tax Regulations provides that the fact that a disqualified person receives an incidental or tenuous benefit from the use by a foundation of its income or assets will not, by itself, make such use an act of self-dealing. For example, a grant by a private foundation to a section 509(a)(1), (2), or (3) organization will not be an act of self-dealing merely because such organization is located in the same area as a corporation that is a substantial contributor and thus a disqualified person with respect to the foundation. This is illustrated by Example (1) of section 53.4941(d)-2(f)(4), which considers a grant by a private foundation to the governing body of a city for the purpose of alleviating the slum conditions that exist in a particular neighborhood of the city. A corporation that is a substantial contributor to the foundation, and thus a disqualified person with respect to the foundation, is located in the same area in which the grant is to be used. Although the general improvement of the area may constitute an incidental and tenuous benefit to the corporation, such benefit by itself will not constitute an act of self-dealing under section 4941 of the Code.

An incidental or tenuous benefit occurs when the general reputation or prestige of a disqualified person is enhanced by public acknowledgement of some specific donation by such person, when a disqualified person receives some other relatively minor benefit of an indirect nature, or when such person merely participates to a wholly incidental degree in the fruits of some charitable program that is of broad public interest in the community. See Rev. Rul. 77-331, 1977-2 C.B. 388.

In this case, as in the slum clearance program described in Example (1) of section 53.4941(d)-2(f)(4) of the regulations, the educational program is of broad public interest to the community. The corporation will benefit from the program only in an incidental manner as one of many manufacturing businesses that can benefit from the skills acquired by the students in the program. W will not receive preferential treatment in recruiting graduates of the program, and W's employees must compete for admission to the program on an equal basis with the general public, including employees of other manufacturing businesses. Under the circumstances, W will receive only an incidental or tenuous benefit from the grant by P to U.

HOLDING

Since any benefit to the corporation, a disqualified person, is incidental, the grant by the private foundation to the university to establish an educational program in manufacturing engineering does not constitute an act of self-dealing within the meaning of section 4941 of the Code.

Section 1. Purpose

This revenue procedure states the requirements of the Internal Revenue Service relating to the preparation of acceptable reproductions and private design and printing of substitute federal tax return forms (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) and related forms (schedules) for filing purposes in place of the official forms and schedules.

Sec. 2. Definitions

.01 Definitions Used in This Publication (Relating to Tax Forms).

1 Substitute Form. A tax form or related form or schedule that differs in any way from the official version and is intended to replace the entire form that is printed and distributed by the Service. This term also covers those approved substitute formats and forms described in this revenue procedure. (A photocopy of an official form or a copy produced from an unchanged reproduction proof, supplied by the Service, is not a substitute form.)

2 Supporting Statement (Supplemental Schedule). A document filed as a part of a tax return that provides detailed information to support an entry for a line (or lines) on an official form. A supporting statement cannot take the place of an official form.

3 Computer-Prepared Form. A preprinted form in which the taxpayer's name, address and tax entry information has been printed by a computer, computer-printer or other computer-type equipment, such as word-processing equipment.

4 Manually Prepared Form. A preprinted form in which the taxpayer's name, address and tax entry information is entered by an individual using a pen, pencil, typewriter or other non-automated equipment.

5 Computer-Generated Tax Form. A document that is entirely prepared by the use of a computer printing device so that all the line numbers, line captions, and the tax amount data entries are in the same type face. No graphics appear on the form.

7 Printed Form. A form produced using conventional printing processes, photocopying, or other similar processes.

8 Preprinted Pin-Fed Form. A form printed beforehand by conventional methods on paper that has marginal perforations for use with automated and high-speed printing equipment.

Sec. 3. Summary of Contents

.01 MESSAGE TO TAX RETURN PREPARERS

IF YOU PLAN TO CHANGE OR MODIFY ANY TAX FORMS, YOU MUST FOLLOW INTERNAL REVENUE PROCEDURES AND, IN MOST CASES, YOU MUST GET OFFICIAL APPROVAL BEFORE USING SUBSTITUTE FORMS. THE SERVICE IS CONTINUING A NATIONWIDE PROGRAM TO IDENTIFY AND CONTACT TAX RETURN PREPARERS USING UNAPPROVED FORMS

.02 Additional information you may also need is contained in Rev. Proc. 80-48, page 21, this Bulletin. You can get this procedure by (1) ordering it on the form provided in Package X, Informational Copies of Federal Income Tax Forms, or (2) by writing to: IRS REV. PROC., P.O. Box 27322, Richmond, VA 23261. They are also obtainable at your local district office.

.03 THINGS YOU CAN DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE PRINTED TAX FORMS.

1 You can PHOTOCOPY any federal tax form or schedule and use it instead of the official one.

2 You can REPRODUCE ANY CURRENT form (or schedule) as cut sheets, snap-sets, marginally-punched pin-fed forms, so long as you use an official Service version as the master copy. An official version is one supplied by the Service, such as those in the taxpayer's tax package, those in Package X, reproduction proofs (sold by the Service) and those printed in revenue procedures.

3 You can ADJUST the graphics on printed Forms 1040 and 1040A (and other forms) to allow for computer-printed or word processor fill-in. Guidelines for making these adjustments are listed in Rev. Proc. 80-48.

4 You can PRINT AND DUPLICATE the substitute "worksheet-type" versions of Schedules A and B (see exhibits section) for use when you need a "worksheet." The Service will accept these substitute schedules instead of the official versions. These schedules serve different purposes. One allows the form to contain state tax information which is blocked-out before submission to the Service. The other allows the form to be used singly or as part of a snap-set.

.04 THINGS YOU CANNOT DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE PRINTED TAX FORMS.

1 You cannot change any Internal Revenue Service tax form or use your own (non-approved) version, unless permitted by revenue procedures without prior Service approval.

2 You cannot change any of the graphics on Forms 1040 and 1040A (except those specified in revenue procedures) without prior approval from the Service.

3 You cannot use your own version of Schedule A (Itemized Deductions) UNLESS YOU FIRST GET IT APPROVED. When using attachements to the official Schedule A, you must COMPLETELY FILL OUT ALL REFERENCED (NUMBERED OR LETTERED) LINES OF THE OFFICIAL SCHEDULE A; not just the total lines, but the line items that make up the totals as well. In other words, you may not enter just the totals for the various deduction categories, i.e., "Medical," "Taxes," etc., and write "See Attached Schedule" across the part of the form. The Service wants only one Schedule A—either yours or an official version; yours needs prior approval from the Service.

4 You cannot use your own preprinted label on tax returns filed with the Service. The ONLY label permitted is the one provided the taxpayers in their tax packages. Otherwise, the taxpayer's name and address must be entered on the return in the spaces provided.

5 Other items are also not permitted. Please read the rest of this revenue procedure for details.

SEC. 4. SPECIFICATIONS FOR FILING SUBSTITUTE FORMS

.01 Computer-Prepared Tax Forms. For filing purposes, the Service will accept computer-prepared tax forms (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) filled in by a computer or by word-processing equipment, but these forms MUST be preprinted.

.02 Computer-Generated Forms. For filing purposes, the Service will accept computer-generated versions of schedules and forms that are attached to individual and business income tax returns, provided they meet the requirements prescribed in Rev. Proc. 80-48.

.03 Combination of Manually Prepared and Computer-Prepared/Generated Forms. For filing purposes, the Service will accept substitute tax forms that contain a combination of computer prepared/generated and manually filled in information.

.04 Substitute Schedules K-1. Prior approval is NOT required for Schedules K-1 that accompany Forms 1065, for partnerships, 1120-S, for small businesses, and 1041, for fiduciaries, when the K-1's meet the following requirements:

(a) The K-1 must contain only the line items required for use by the taxpayer,

(b) These line items must be in the same order and arrangement as the official form,

(c) The line items must be numbered, titled, and/or captioned exactly as shown on the official form, and

(d) Each taxpayer's information must be on a separate piece of paper.

SEC. 5. APPROVAL INFORMATION

.01 Approvals.

1 Guidelines. Preparers who desire to file privately designed and printed substitute tax forms must develop such substitutes using these guidelines and those contained in Rev. Proc. 80-48 and, unless permitted by revenue procedures, must obtain approval from the Service before the forms are filed.

2 Changes to Tax Forms. Any person making changes to any tax form or schedule (EXCEPT THOSE STATED IN THIS OR OTHER REVENUE PROCEDURES) must obtain approval from the Service before filing the substitute.

Because a substitute form is a variation from the official form, you should know the requirements of the official form before you modify it to meet your needs. For the most frequently used tax forms, the quickest way to obtain an official form is to request reproduction proofs of these forms. Reproduction proofs can only be ordered by using the Form M-5368, Order for Reproduction Proofs. Form M-5368 can be obtained in two ways: (1) by written request to Internal Revenue Service, RM:FM:P, Room 1528, 1111 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, or (2) by telephone request (at your expense) to the Reproduction Proof Coordinator at (202) 566-2473.

(a) THE GUIDELINES FOR PRIVATELY DESIGNED AND PRINTED TAX FORMS ARE AS FOLLOWS:

(1) Each form must follow the design of the official form as to format, arrangement, item caption, line numbers, line references and sequence.

(2) When a form is designed with both federal and state columns, THE FEDERAL COLUMN MUST BE TO THE LEFT OF THE STATE COLUMN AND ADJACENT TO THE LINE CAPTION.

(3) When a form is to be manually prepared (see definitions), the federal column must have a vertical line in the amount field to separate dollars from cents if the official form has a vertical line. The cents column must be at least ⅛th inch wide.

(4) Please note that certain forms have a newly added "sequence number" located just below the year designation in the upper right corner of the form. The Service uses this number to indicate the order in which forms are processed when filed with a return. It must be printed on the affected form, in no less than 12-point bold-face type, and centered below the form's year designation. THE SEQUENCE NUMBER IS REQUIRED ON FORMS LISTED BELOW. Please note: some of the numbers have been changed since last year.

3 Mailing Address. Proposed substitutes should be forwarded by letter to the Internal Revenue Service, Attention: Substitute Forms Program, TX:R:I, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

4 When to Submit. Proposed substitutes should be sent to the address listed in 3 above, as much in advance of the filing period for the form as possible. This is to allow adequate time for analysis and response and to permit notice to our field offices. Quarterly filed forms, such as the Form 941, must be submitted by the first day of the last month of the quarter.

5 Required Statement. When the sample substitute is submitted, there must also be an accompanying statement that lists the form number of each substitute requested and details those items that deviate from the official form in position, arrangement, appearance, line numbers, additions, deletions, etc. Included with each of the items must be a detailed reason or justification for the change and an approximation of the number of forms expected to be filed.

6 Approval Letter. Upon determination that approval can be given, the Service sends a formal letter of approval which also may contain qualifications for use of the substitutes.

7 Duration of Approval. Approvals, when granted, are good for only one calendar year (January through December) or, in the case of corporation tax forms (with the exception noted below), for the remainder of the quarters of the calendar year.

PLEASE NOTE: Each new filing season requires a new approval, even if the official form does not change.

Exception: Certain quarterly tax forms in the 94X series (941, 942, etc.) are approved for only one quarter. Each new quarter requires a new approval.

8 Required Copies. Once an approval is granted for the use of a substitute form, you may be requested to send to the Service eleven (11) copies of each approved form. When requested, the copies will be used to notify Internal Revenue Service Centers that your substitute forms are approved. The requested forms must be assembled in sets. A set constitutes a return with the related schedules and forms in order as they will be filed, i.e., Form 1040, Schedules A, B, C, etc., Forms 2440, 2441, etc. The Service reserves the right to reject sets not assembled in the order specified.

9 Other Forms Not Listed. Other Service forms, such as Forms W-2, 1087, 1099, and 1040-ES, are governed by different revenue procedures. These procedures are available at your local district office.

SEC. 6. PHYSICAL ASPECTS AND REQUIREMENTS

.01 Printing Medium. The private printing of these substitutes must be produced by conventional printing processes, photocopying or other similar reproduction process.

1 Remove Government Printing Office Symbol. When privately printing a tax form, the Government Printing Office symbol and jacket numbers must be removed, and in its place (using the same type size) print the Employer Identifying Number (EIN) of the printer or the Social Security Number (SSN) of the form designer.

.02 Paper Requirements. The paper must be chemical wood writing paper that is equal to or better than the quality used for the official forms.

1 Official tax forms are printed on 18 pound (17″ × 22″, 500 sheets) white, chemical wood writing paper, or

2 45 pound offset white (25″ × 38″, 500 sheets).

3 The thickness of the stock cannot be less than .003 inch.

.03 Prohibited Paper. Carbon bonded paper is prohibited from use for forms filed with the Service.

.04 Chemical Transfer Paper—LIMITED USE. Chemical transfer paper may be used ONLY when the following specifications are met:

1 Each ply within the chemical transfer set of forms or schedules must be labeled.

2 Only the top ply (ply one and white in color), the one which contains chemical on the back only (coated back), may be filed with the Service. For example, a set containing three plies would be constructed as follows: Ply one (coated back), "Federal Return, File with IRS"; Ply two (coated front and back), "Taxpayer's copy"; and Ply three (coated front), "Preparer's copy."

3 The file designation, "Federal Return, File with IRS," for ply one must be printed in the bottom right margin (just below the last line of the form) in 12-point bold-face type. It is not mandatory, but recommended, that the file designation, "Federal Return, File with IRS," be printed using a contrasting ink to be clearly visible to the taxpayer.

.05 Paper and Ink Color. The color of paper and ink must substantially duplicate that of the original form in order to be accepted. This means that your substitute must be printed in black ink and on the color paper the Service form is printed on. An exception to this rule is that Forms 1040A and 1040 reproductions may be in black ink without the colored screening. Any additional exceptions to this rule require written approval from the Service.

.06 Legibility. Reproductions must have a high standard of legibility, both as to original form and as to fill-in matter. The Service reserves the right to reject any reproductions with poor legibility.

.07 Size of Page. Reproductions and privately designed and printed substitutes may be the same size as the official form (8″ × 11″, in most cases) or they may be the standard commercial size (8½″ × 11″).

.08 Image Size, Text Removal, and Type Font. The image size of printed material should be as close as possible to that of the official form. You may omit any text that is solely instructional in nature.

1 To allow a larger top margin for marginal printing (see .09 below), the title line(s) for all forms (not including the form's year designation and sequence code when present) may be photographically reduced by 40 percent or reset as one line of type. When reset as one line, the type size may be no smaller than 14 point. You may omit the "Department of the Treasury-Internal Revenue Service" and all references to instructions that appear in the form's title area.

2 Almost all federal tax forms are printed using "News Gothic" as the basic type font. We request that this type font be used when composing substitute forms.

3 Maintain at least a one-half (½) inch margin on all sides of the form. This allows room for Service employees to make necessary entries on the form during processing.

.09 Marginal Printing — Limited Area. You may print your logo, company or firm name, identifying and collation symbols, etc., in the top left margin of any Service form. The area you may use extends vertically from the top of the form's title designation to the top edge of the form and horizontally 3½ inches from the left edge. No printing is permitted in the top right margin. With the exception of the actual tax return form (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) you may also print in the left vertical and bottom left margins. The bottom left margin you may use extends 3½ inches from the left edge of the form.

SEC. 7. APPROVED SUBSTITUTE FORMATS FOR FORM 1040 SCHEDULES A AND B

.01 Schedules A and B (Form 1040).

1 Exhibits of Approved Formats. There are two sets of exhibits (Exhibits A-1 & B-1 and A-2 & B-2) shown in this publication. They are acceptable substitutes for the official forms. Both sets are usable for manual entry or computer preparation. (Vertical spacing is six (6) lines to the inch.)

.02 Duplication of Exhibits A-1 & A-2 and B-1 & B-2. You are permitted to duplicate these exhibits photographically or using photo-reproduction techniques, PROVIDING YOUR PRINTED IMAGES ARE EXACTLY LIKE THE ONES IN THE EXHIBITS. WITH THE EXCEPTION NOTED BELOW, NOTHING CAN BE CHANGED. Please note: The Service does NOT supply reproduction proofs for these exhibits.

.03 Use of Duplicated Exhibits.

1 If your forms are EXACT DUPLICATES of these exhibits, THEY MAY BE USED WITHOUT PRIOR AUTHORIZATION.

2 SIZE OF EXHIBITS. The exhibits are shown at 92 percent of actual size. These substitutes should be restored to their original size during your reproduction process.

ANY CHANGE TO THE FORMAT, CAPTIONS, SPACING, ARRANGEMENT AND/OR POSITION OF THE VARIOUS CATEGORIES, ETC., OF THESE EXHIBITS REQUIRES PRIOR WRITTEN APPROVAL.

EXCEPTION—The areas in the Exhibits A-1 and A-2 identified by the circled numbers 1 through 9 may be changed as follows. The areas inside the perimeter of the boxes containing the dash-leaders, i.e., ----, (designated by the circled numbers), may be used to print any particular deduction item associated with the corresponding deduction category. You may remove the dash-leaders if you wish. YOU MAY NOT CHANGE THE AMOUNT COLUMN BOX SIZE OR POSITION. Strip out the circled numbers before use.

3 Exhibit A-1. This substitute Schedule A format may be used as a single sheet or as one of the copies of a snap-set. It is designed to be used in place of the official Schedule A (Form 1040).

4 Exhibit A-2. This substitute Schedule A format may be used as a single sheet when both federal and state tax information is placed on the same form.

NO STATE TAX INFORMATION CAN APPEAR ON THESE FORMS WHEN FILED WITH THE FORM 1040. THE STATE COLUMN MAY BE PRESENT BUT THE STATE TAX INFORMATION MUST NOT BE VISIBLE WHEN FILED WITH THE SERVICE. We prefer that the entire state column be COMPLETELY BLOCKED OUT.

5 Exhibits B-1 and B-2. These exhibits correspond to Exhibits A-1 and A-2 and the provisions in 3 and 4 apply. Both of these exhibits are acceptable for use in place of the official Schedule B (Form 1040). Both are designed for either manual or computer-generated entries.

6 Exhibits A-1 and B-1 or A-2 and B-2. These exhibits may be used as sets when the return calls for both Schedules A and B. PLEASE NOTE: DO NOT USE BOTH THESE SUBSTITUTES AND THE OFFICIAL VERSIONS. USE ONE OR THE OTHER.

7 BLOCK OUT METHODS. A suggested method to block out the state tax information is: (1) place the substitute form in a clear plastic folder, (2) on the folder place a strip of opaque material the exact width and length of the column you wish to block out, then (3) photocopy the substitute form while still in the folder. The result will be a form with only the federal tax information visible. Another method is to take a black marking pen and using either vertical or horizontal strokes cross out the state figures. Carbon interleaved sets may be used where the amounts entered in the state column are filled in with black carbon overprint. This copy may be filed with the return.

SEC. 8. OTHER CONSIDERATIONS

.01 Reproductions of official forms and substitute forms which do not meet the requirements of this revenue procedure may not be filed instead of the official forms and schedules.

.02 Required Preparation of Forms. You must completely fill out all the numbered or referenced lines on official forms (NOT JUST THE TOTALS, BUT ALL THE ITEMS THAT MAKE UP THE TOTALS AS WELL) before attaching any supporting statement (see exceptions below). The Service processes the return based on information entered on the official or approved version of the tax forms. References are made to attachments ONLY as required by law and as processing requirements direct. When you fail to complete all the lines on the official forms, Internal Revenue Service Tax Examiners have to locate the information on your attachment and write it on the proper line of the official form. This unfortunate process causes delays in processing the return and increases the potential for errors both in transcription and in interpretation. THE SERVICE IS CONTINUING A NATIONWIDE PROGRAM TO NOTIFY PREPARERS WHO FAIL TO MEET THIS REQUIREMENT.

.03 Exceptions.

1 Lines Captioned "Other." It is not necessary to fill in every numbered or referenced line of tax forms when the line caption calls for "Other," i.e., "Other (itemize)," "Other (specify)," "Other (attach schedule)," etc. Examples of this exception are lines 6c, 15, 19, 21b and 31 for Schedule A (Form 1040). When this occurs, a supporting statement may be used and only the total amount of these "Other" items entered on the line of the official form. However, we prefer that the space on the official form be used when it is adequate.

2 Schedule A (Form 1040). All numbered and lettered lines must be filled in, if applicable. Supporting statements may be used to give the details of the totals entered on such lines but may not be used as a substitute for a collection of lines. For example, the detailed information for "Taxes" may not be shown on a supporting statement (supplemental schedule) and only line 16 filled in; but the details of "State and local income taxes" may be shown on a supporting statement and the total of such taxes entered on line 11. Also, lines 33 through 38 need not be shown, but the total of itemized deductions must be shown on line 39.

3 Schedule B (Form 1040). Lines 1 and 3 need not be filled in on the form. A supporting statement may be used for the details of interest and dividend income and the appropriate totals of such income entered on lines 2 and 4 unless nominee distribution or accrued interest criteria apply. (See the tax package instructions concerning interest.)

4 Schedule C (Form 1040). All lines on page 1 must be filled in when applicable except the line where "Other expenses-specify" is listed. (See instruction (2) above.) All information for Schedule C-1 must be entered. Schedule C-2 information may be entered on a supporting statement so long as the method of depreciation used (if any) is entered on the form in column (e). Schedule C-3 information may be shown on a supporting statement and not entered on the form.

5 Schedule E (Form 1040).

(a) When there are entries on page 1 for any of the Parts I through IV, the following requirements must be met: (1) in Part I, lines 1a through 4, the questions must be answered and tax information must be entered on the lines provided, (2) in Part II, lines 5a through 6b, the question boxes must be answered; if the answer to question 6a is "yes," the amortizable basis must be entered on line 6b. Be sure there is a place on line 6b for the amount.

(b) Supporting statements may be used for the details of rental income and expenses and for royalty income. The appropriate totals must be carried to line 7, columns (b) and (g), when a Form 4835 is filed with the return. Totals must also be entered on line 8, columns (b) through (g).

(c) The income and loss from various partnerships, estates or trusts, and small business corporations also may be detailed on a supporting statement, but the appropriate total income and total loss must be entered on lines 10 through 18 and also on line 19 when applicable.

(d) Page 2 need not be used so long as the information is provided on a supporting statement. The supporting statement must show the details required by the form.

6 Schedule F (Form 1040). Depending on which accounting method is used (cash or accrual), all of parts I and II or II and V must be printed in their entirety.

.04 Supporting Statements.

1 You may attach supporting statements to explain or support any line item on an official or approved form. Supporting statements must provide details and explain entries made on the official form or schedule, must furnish all required information in the same sequence as called for on the official forms or schedules, and must be attached to the return following all other official forms. All tax returns must be arranged in this order: the tax return, lettered forms in alphabetical order, numbered forms in numerical sequence and supporting statements. Information on supporting statements must be in the same order as the items appeared on the form to which it is referenced. THEIR USE MUST BE TO SUPPORT LINE ENTRIES ON THE OFFICIAL FORM AND NOT TO AVOID COMPLETING REQUIRED LINES ON THE OFFICIAL FORM.

2 Additionally, each of your supporting statements must be referenced to the form it supports, and the entry on the form must be cross-referenced to the supporting statement. For example, put "See Statement X" on the line of the form that references the statement and put "Statement X" on the top of the supporting statement that contains the identified line number and the supporting information.

.05 Printing On One Side of Paper. While it is preferred that both sides of the paper be used in making reproductions, resulting in the same page arrangement as that of the official form or schedule, the Service will not object if only one side of the paper is used or if the reproduction has a different fold from that provided on the official form.

.06 Paid Preparer's Information and Signature Area. On both Forms 1040A and 1040, the "Paid Preparer's Information" area may not be rearranged or relocated. You may add one extra line to the paid preparer's address area. An exact facsimile must appear on Page 1 of Form 1040A and Page 2 of Form 1040. This applies to other tax forms as well.

.07 Use Preaddressed Label. When filing reproduced or privately printed federal tax returns and related schedules, use the preaddressed label furnished to the taxpayer in the tax package by the Service on the copy that is to be filed with the Service. Use of the label avoids larger processing costs because it reduces the potential for error—the kind of error which can delay the receipt of refund and information needed by the taxpayer. No other label may be used.

.08 State Tax Information Prohibited. State tax information must not appear on the federal tax return which is filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center, except where amounts are claimed on or required by the federal return, e.g., line 11, Schedule A (Form 1040).

.09 Use Internal Revenue Service Envelope. When filing reproduced or privately printed federal tax returns use the envelope enclosed with the taxpayer's tax package. This envelope is coded for sorting into several categories. Use of the envelope can help speed up the processing and reduce processing costs. Do not use the Service-provided tax package envelope for other correspondence with the Service, as its misuse could delay the correspondence.

.10 Filing Substitute Forms. Follow the same instructions as for filing official forms. These instructions are in the taxpayer's tax package.

.11 Voluntarily Submitted Information. Additional information required or voluntarily submitted should be on the same size paper as the official form.

SEC. 9. REPRODUCTION PROOFS

Camera-ready, reproduction-quality, proof copies of many of the tax forms issued by the Service are available to the public. Order blanks for reproduction proofs will be mailed to requestors of record and, on request, to prospective users. Printers and others wishing to obtain reproduction proofs may send their requests to the Internal Revenue Service, Attention: Publishing Services, RM:FM:P, Room 1528, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

Basic specifications, such as margin, pagination, etc., will be printed in the margins of the reproduction proofs and must be removed before printing. The official reproduction proof margins across the top, bottom, and sides must be maintained on all reproductions and privately printed federal tax returns and related schedules.

A charge of $1.00 per page will be made for each reproduction proof regardless of page size. After an order has been filled, invoices will be mailed to the requestor.

SEC. 10. ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTIONS

.01 Photocopy Equipment. The Service does not undertake to approve or disapprove the specific equipment or process used in reproducing official forms, but requires only that the reproduced forms and schedules satisfy the conditions stated in revenue procedures.

.02 Taxpayer and Preparer Signatures. All taxpayer signatures on forms to be filed with the Service must be original signatures, affixed subsequent to the reproduction process. However, the income tax preparer can satisfy the manual signature requirement by signing a completed income tax return form, making a photocopy of the return form, and having the taxpayer sign and file the photocopy. (See Rev. Rul. 78-370, 1978-2 C.B. 336.)

.03 Requests for Approvals. When specific approval of a reproduction of any form is desired, or if the use of a reproduction of any form is not listed or specified herein or otherwise specifically authorized, a sample of the proposed reproduction should be forwarded by letter to the Internal Revenue Service, Attention: Substitute Forms Program, TX:R:I, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, for consideration. When copies of privately designed forms are submitted for approval, please follow the instructions listed near the beginning of this revenue procedure.

SEC. 11. AGREEMENT

Any person or company who uses substitute forms and makes all or part of the changes specified in this revenue procedure, agrees to the following stipulation: The Service presumes the changes are made in accordance with these procedures and, as such, will be noninterruptive to the processing of the tax return. Should any of the changes prove to be not exactly as described, and as a result become disruptive to the Service during processing of the tax return, the person or company agrees to accept the determination of the Service as to whether or not the form may continue to be used during the filing season, and also agrees to work with the Service in correcting noted deficiencies. Notification of deficiencies may be made by letter, phone call or both.

SEC. 12. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

This revenue procedure supersedes Rev. Proc. 79-57, 1979-2 C.B. 540.

SEC. 13. EXHIBITS SECTION

Exhibits shown in this section are acceptable substitutes for official forms and are intended to be used in place of their corresponding official forms. No prior approval is needed before using them so long as all other requirements in this revenue procedure are met.

Rev. Proc. 80-48

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This Revenue procedure states the requirements of the Internal Revenue Service regarding the acceptance of computer-prepared tax forms (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) and computer-generated forms (and schedules) to be attached thereto.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS

.01 Definitions Used in This Procedure (Relating to Tax Forms).

1 Substitute Form. A tax form or related form that differs in any way from the official versions and is intended to replace the entire form printed and distributed by the Service. This term also covers those approved substitute formats and forms described in this revenue procedure. (A photocopy or a copy produced from an unchanged reproduction proof, supplied by the Service, is not a substitute form.)

2 Supporting Statement (Supplemental Schedule). A document filed as a part of a tax return that provides detailed information to support an entry for a line (or lines) on an official form. A supporting statement cannot take the place of an official form.

3 Computer-Prepared Form. A preprinted form in which the taxpayer's name, address and tax entry information has been printed by a computer, computer-printer or other computer-type equipment, such as word-processing equipment.

4 Manually Prepared Form. A preprinted form in which the taxpayer's name, address and tax entry information is entered by an individual using pen, pencil, typewriter or other non-automated equipment.

5 Computer-Generated Tax Forms. A document that is entirely prepared by the use of a computer-printing device so that all the line numbers, line captions, and the tax amount data entries are in the same typeface. No graphics appear on the form.

6 Graphics. Those parts of the tax form that are not the tax amount entries or called-for information. Generally, these are line numbers, captions, instructions, rules and borders, special indicators, and rules or strokes created by type-setting, photo-graphics, photocomposition, etc.

7 Printed Form. A form produced using conventional printing processes, photocopying, or other similar processes.

8 Preprinted Pin-Fed Form. A form printed beforehand by conventional methods on paper with marginal perforations for use with automated and/or high-speed printing equipment.

SEC. 3. SUMMARY OF CONTENTS

.01 MESSAGE TO TAX RETURN PREPARERS.

IF YOU PLAN TO CHANGE OR MODIFY ANY TAX FORMS, YOU MUST FOLLOW THESE INTERNAL REVENUE PROCEDURES. IN MOST CASES, YOU MUST GET OFFICIAL APPROVAL BEFORE USING SUBSTITUTE FORMS.

THE SERVICE IS CONTINUING A NATIONWIDE PROGRAM TO IDENTIFY AND CONTACT TAX RETURN PREPARERS USING UNAPPROVED FORMS.

.02 Additional information you may also need is contained in Rev. Proc. 80-47, page 11, this Bulletin. You can obtain this revenue procedure by (1) ordering it on the form included in Package X, Informational Copies of Federal Tax Forms, or (2) writing to: IRS Rev. Proc., P.O. Box 27322, Richmond, VA 23261. They are also obtainable at your local district office.

.03 THINGS YOU CAN DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE PRINTED TAX FORMS TO MAKE THEM SUITABLE FOR COMPUTER PREPARATION.

1 You can PHOTOCOPY any federal tax form or schedule and use it instead of the official one.

2 You can REPRODUCE ANY CURRENT form (or schedule) cut sheets, snap-sets, and marginally-punched pin-fed forms, so long as you use an official Service version as the master copy. An official version is one supplied by the Service, such as those in the taxpayer's tax package, those in Package X, reproduction proofs (sold by the Service), and those printed in revenue procedures.

3 You can ADJUST the graphics on printed Forms 1040, 1040A, 1120, 940, 941, etc., to allow for computer-printed or word processor fill-in. Only the areas listed in revenue procedures may be changed without prior approval.

4 You can PRINT AND DUPLICATE the substitute "worksheet-type" versions of Schedules A and B (shown as exhibits) in Rev. Proc. 80-47 when you need a "worksheet-type" format. The Service will accept these substitute schedules instead of the official versions. These schedules serve different purposes. One allows the form to contain a state tax column. (The state tax information must not be visible on the copy filed with the Service.) The other allows the form to be used singly or as part of a snap-set.

.04 THINGS YOU CANNOT DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE PRINTED TAX FORMS.

1 You cannot change any Internal Revenue Service form or use your own (non-approved) version, unless permitted by revenue procedures, without prior Service approval.

2 You cannot change any of the graphics on Forms 1040 and 1040A (except those specified in revenue procedures) without prior approval from the Service.

3 You cannot use your own version of Schedule A (Itemized Deductions) UNLESS YOU FIRST GET IT APPROVED. When using attachments to the official Schedule A, you must COMPLETELY FILL OUT ALL REFERENCED (NUMBERED OR LETTERED) LINES OF THE OFFICIAL SCHEDULE A, not just the total lines, but also the line items that make up the totals. In other words, you may not enter just the totals for the various deduction categories, i.e., "Medical," "Taxes," etc., and write "See Attached Schedule" across that part of the form. The Service wants only one Schedule A—either yours or an official version; yours needs prior approval from the Service.

4 You cannot use your own preprinted label on tax returns filed with the Service. The ONLY label permitted is the one provided the taxpayers in their tax packages. Otherwise, the taxpayer's name and address must be entered on the return in the spaces provided.

5 Other items are also not permitted. Please read the rest of this revenue procedure for details.

.05 THINGS YOU CAN DO TO FILE COMPUTER-PREPARED/ GENERATED FORMS.

1 You can DUPLICATE the approved, computer-generated formats of Schedules A, B, C, D, E, F, G, R, RP, SE and TC (shown in the Exhibit Section of this revenue procedure) and use them without prior approval.

2 You can FILL IN official Internal Revenue Service supplied forms using computer or word-processing equipment. Internal Revenue Service forms are designed for a vertical spacing of six lines to the inch, with money amount columns wide enough to allow for the computer printing of ten characters.

3 You can CHANGE CERTAIN SPECIFIED AREAS on the Forms 1040 and 1040A (spelled out in the revenue procedures) to assist computer-printing requirements and to allow for a little more room on certain lines.

4 Other items are also permitted. Please read the rest of this revenue procedure for more details.

.06 THINGS YOU CANNOT DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE FORMS.

1 You cannot use computer graphics on any Internal Revenue Service form without prior approval.

2 You cannot computer-generate the TAX FORMS THEMSELVES (i.e., forms requiring signatures; for example, Forms 1040, 1040A, 1120, 940, and 941). These forms must be preprinted using conventional printing processes, photocopying or similar reproduction processes. The forms may be filled in by a computer, by a word processor, or the like, but the forms themselves must be printed like the Service versions are. Forms designed using computer graphics may be submitted for approval.

3 You cannot use your own computer-generated version of any tax form that is to be attached to the tax return, unless permitted by revenue procedures, without prior Service approval.

4 Other items are also not allowed. Please read the rest of this revenue procedure for more details.

SEC. 4. SPECIFICATIONS FOR FILING SUBSTITUTE FORMS

.01 Computer-Prepared Tax Forms. For filing purposes the Service will accept computer-prepared tax forms (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) filled in by a computer or by word-processing equipment, but these forms MUST be pre-printed.

.02 Computer-Generated Forms. For filing purposes, the Service will accept computer-generated versions of forms that are attached to individual and business income tax returns, provided the substitutes and their manner of completion meet the guidelines prescribed herein.

.03 Combination of Manually Prepared and Computer-Prepared/Generated Forms. For filing purposes, the Service will accept substitute tax forms that contain a combination of computer-prepared/generated and manually filled in information.

SEC. 5. GENERAL INFORMATION

1 Guidelines. Preparers who desire to file substitute computer-prepared forms and/or computer-generated forms must develop such substitutes using guidelines in revenue procedures. Substitutes other than those described here must be approved by the Service before being filed.

2 Changes to Tax Forms. Any person making changes to any tax form (EXCEPT THOSE ALLOWED BY REVENUE PROCEDURES) must obtain approval from the Service before filing the substitute.

3 Mailing Address. Proposed substitutes should be forwarded by letter to the Internal Revenue Service, Attention: Substitute Forms Program, TX:R:I, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

4 When to Submit. Proposed substitutes should be sent to the address in 3 above, as much in advance of the filing period for the form as possible. This is to allow adequate time for analysis and response and to permit notice to our field offices. Quarterly filed forms, such as the Form 941, must be submitted by the first day of the last month of the quarter.

5 Required Statement. When the sample substitute is submitted, there must also be an accompanying statement that lists the form number of each substitute requested and details those items that deviate from the official form in position, arrangement, appearance, line numbers, additions, deletions, etc. Included with each of the items must be a detailed reason or justification for the change and an approximation of the number of forms expected to be filed.

6 Approval Letter. Upon determination that approval can be given, the Service sends a formal letter of approval which also may contain qualifications for the substitute's use.

7 Duration of Approval. Approvals when granted are good for only one calendar year (January-December) or, in the case of corporation tax forms (with the exception noted below), for the remainder of the quarter of the calendar year.

PLEASE NOTE: Each new filing season requires a new approval, even if the official form does not change.

Exception: Forms in the 94X series (941, 942, etc.) are approved only for one quarter. Each new quarter requires a new approval from the Service.

8 Required Copies. Once an approval is granted for the use of a computer-prepared or computer-generated substitute form, you may be requested to send the Service eleven (11) copies of each approved form. When requested, the form(s) must be assembled in sets and submitted to the Service so that we can notify our Service Centers of the approvals we have given. A set constitutes a return with the related schedules and forms in order as they will be filed, i.e., Forms 1040, Schedules A, B, C, D, etc., Form 2440, 2442, etc. We reserve the right to reject sets which are not assembled in the order specified.

SEC. 6. PHYSICAL ASPECTS AND REQUIREMENTS

.01 Lined Paper. Computer-generated substitute forms must be submitted on quality, lined, machine paper. Lined, color-barred paper is also acceptable. Lined paper assists Service employees during processing of the returns by allowing speedy location of tax entries corresponding to line captions. The lines provide the basic means for eye-travel from one side of the form to the other.

.02 Margins. A one-half inch margin must be maintained across the top, bottom, and both sides (exclusive of any pin-feed holes) of all computer-generated substitutes. One-half inch margins allow for slight printing misalignment when forms are prepared on high-speed equipment. The margin area is also used by Service employees to make necessary entries on the form during processing.

.03 Page Size. Computer-prepared/generated substitutes may be the same size as the official (8″ × 11″, in most cases) or they may be the standard commercial size (8½″ × 11″). Computer-generated forms must be on the same size paper as the tax form to which it is attached.

.04 Prohibited Paper. Carbon-bonded paper is prohibited from use for forms filed with the Service.

.05 Chemical Transfer Paper—Limited Use.

Chemical transfer paper may be used ONLY when the following specifications are met:

1 Each ply within the chemical-transfer set of forms must be labeled.

2 Only the top ply (ply one), the one which contains chemical on the back only (coated back), may be filed with the Service. For example, a set containing three plies would be constructed as follows: Ply one (coated back), "Federal Return, File with IRS"; Ply two (coated front and back), "Taxpayer's copy"; and Ply three (coated front), "Preparer's copy."

1 COMPUTER-GENERATED VERSIONS. Computer-generated versions of a tax form which requires a signature are not permitted. Only preprinted substitutes of these forms are allowed.

2 COMPUTER-GENERATED GRAPHICS. Computer - generated graphics CANNOT be used on any form without prior approval.

.02 FILL - IN INFORMATION. The tax form itself (i.e., 1040, 1040A, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) may be filled in by a computer printer or other similar automated equipment, but the form itself must be created beforehand (i.e. preprinted) using conventional printing methods, photocopying or other similar reproduction processes.

.03 CHANGES PERMITTED TO THE FORMS 1040 & 1040A.

1 Certain changes (listed below) are permitted to the graphics of the form without prior approval, but these changes apply only to preprinted forms as described in .02 above.

2 Changes not requiring prior approval are good only for the filing period January through December 1981.

3 OTHER CHANGES NOT LISTED. All changes not listed here require prior approval from the Service BEFORE the form may be filed with the Service.

4 OTHER FORMS NOT LISTED. Other Internal Revenue Service forms, such as Forms W-2, 1087, 1099, and 1040-ES, are governed by different revenue procedures. These revenue procedures are available at your local district office.

SEC. 8. AGREEMENT

Any person who uses substitute forms and makes all or part of the changes specified in this revenue procedure, agrees to the following stipulation: The Service presumes the changes are made in accordance with these procedures and, as such, will be noninterruptive to the processing of the tax return. Should any of the changes prove to be not exactly as described, and as a result become disruptive to the Service during processing of the tax return, the preparer agrees to accept the determination of the Service as to whether or not the form may continue to be used during the filing season, and also agrees to work with the Service in correcting noted deficiencies. Notification of deficiencies may be made by letter, phone call or both.

SEC. 9. CHANGES PERMITTED TO THE GRAPHICS ON BOTH FORM 1040 AND 1040A AND, WHERE APPLICABLE, ON OTHER FORMS AS WELL (FOR USE WITH COMPUTER-PREPARED FORMS ONLY)

.01 Adjustments. You may make minor vertical and horizontal spacing adjustments to allow for computer or word-processing printing. This includes widening the amount columns or tax entry areas so long as the adjustments do not exceed other provisions stated in revenue procedures. No prior approval is needed for these changes. However, the user of forms with such changes are bound by the "Agreement" in Section 8.

.02 NAME AND ADDRESS AREA.

1 The horizontal rules and instructions within the name and address area may be removed and the entire area left blank; no line or instruction can remain in the area.

2 The heavy ruled border (when present) that outlines the name and address area must not be removed, relocated, expanded or contracted.

3 Required Format.

1st name line (35 characters maximum)

In-care-of name line (35 characters maximum)

Street address (35 characters maximum)

City, State (24 char. max.), one blank char., & zip (five char.)

(b) When there is no in-care-of name line, the name and address will consist of only three lines. Examples of the formats follow:

Example of name and address with NO in-care-of name line:

JOHN AND MARY JONES
1234 ANYWHERE ST. APT 111
ANYTOWN, VA. 12345

Example of name and address WITH in-care-of name line:

JOHN AND MARY JONES
C/O THOMAS A. JONES
4311 SOMEWHERE AVE.
SAMETOWN, VA. 54321

(c) YOU MAY NOT USE YOUR OWN PREADDRESSED LABEL ON ANY INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE FORM.

(d) The ONLY label that may be used is the OFFICIAL INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE LABEL SUPPLIED to the taxpayer in his/her tax package. Please use the official Internal Revenue Service supplied label to help reduce errors.

(e) For identification purposes, you may computer print the taxpayer's name and address on the form and afterward affix the OFFICIAL INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE SUPPLIED LABEL over the computer printed address. This applies whether or not the horizontal rules and the instructions have been removed.

.03 SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER (SSN) AND EMPLOYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBER (EIN) AREA.

1 The vertical lines separating the format arrangement of the SSN/EIN may be removed.

2 When the vertical lines are removed, the SSN and EIN formats must be 000-00-0000 and 00-0000000, respectively.

.04 CENSUS INFORMATION. When present, this area may be vertically compressed into two lines; one for captions and one line below for computer entries. The areas A-D (Forms 1040 and 1040A) must NOT be rearranged or relocated. You may remove the vertical dash-leader in section A that separates "State" and "City." Captions may be shortened to fit in the space but sufficient "key words" must be used to identify the items requested.

.05 CENTS COLUMNS.

1 You may remove the vertical rule that separates the dollars from the cents.

2 All entries in the amount column must have a decimal point following the whole dollar amounts whether or not the vertical line that separates the dollars from the cents is present.

3 You may omit printing the cents, but all amounts entered on the form must follow a consistent format. YOU ARE STRONGLY URGED TO ROUND OFF THE FIGURES TO WHOLE DOLLAR AMOUNTS.

4 When printing money amounts, you must use one of the following ten-character formats:

(a) 0,000,000.
(b) 000,000.00

5 When there is no entry for a line, leave the line blank.

.06 PAID PREPARER'S INFORMATION AREA.

1 On all forms, where present, the paid preparer's information area may NOT be rearranged or relocated.

2 You may add one line to the preparer's address area.

SEC. 10. CHANGES PERMITTED TO FORM 1040A GRAPHICS (for use with computer-printed forms only)

This line may be compressed vertically to one line (to allow for a larger entry area for the name of the qualifying unmarried child) by using the following line caption:

"Head of household; unmarried child's name... ..."

1 The vertical lines separating columns (1) through (5) may be removed.

2 The number of lines for listing "other dependents" may be expanded to a maximum of 5.

.03 LINE 9a (and 9b).

These lines may be changed to allow larger amount entry fields by removing references to instructions.

This line may be vertically compressed to one line by using the following line caption:

"Adjusted Gross Income."

.05 LINES 12a, 12b, 14a, 14b, and 17.

These lines may be vertically compressed to one line by removing references to instructions.

SEC. 11. MARGINAL PRINTING

You may print your logo, company or firm name, identifying and collation symbols, etc., in the top left margin of the form. The area you may use extends vertically from the top of the Form 1040A title designation to the top edge of the form and horizontally 3½ inches from the left edge.

SEC. 12. OTHER CHANGES PROHIBITED

NO OTHER CHANGES TO THE FORM 1040A GRAPHICS ARE ALLOWED WITHOUT PRIOR APPROVAL.

SEC. 13. CHANGES PERMITTED TO THE FORM 1040 GRAPHICS (FOR USE WITH COMPUTER-PREPARED FORMS ONLY)

.01 LINE 4. This line may be compressed horizontally (to allow for a larger entry area for the name of the qualifying unmarried child) by using the following line caption:

1 The vertical lines separating columns (1) through (5) may be removed. The captions may be shortened to allow a one-line caption for each column.

2 The number of lines for listing "other dependents" may be expanded to a maximum of 5 by compressing other noted areas listed here.

.03 LINES 10a and 10b. This line may be horizontally compressed to allow for larger entry fields for Dividends and Exclusions by the use of the following line caption (on one line):

"10a Dividends . . . (15 char.) . . . 10b Exclusion . . . (15 char.)."

.04 LINE 11. This line may be vertically compressed to one line by using the following line caption:

"State and local income tax refunds."

.05 LINES 20a and b. These lines may be compressed horizonally and vertically to allow a larger entry field for "total received" and to make a two-line entry on one line by using the following caption:

"a. Total unempl. comp. rec'd (10 char.) b. Taxable amt."

1 This line may be expanded vertically to a maximum of 4 lines.

2 The amount entry box must remain a single entry and the cross-hatched shading must extend down the numbered line box by the same number of lines you add.

.07 LINE 31. This line may be vertically compressed to one line by removing references to instructions.

.08 LINE 35. You may change the line caption to read "Tax" and computer-print either the words "FROM TAX TABLES" or "FROM SCHEDULE TC."

.09 LINE 36. You may change the caption to read:

"Additional taxes from Form/Section" and computer-print only the form(s) or/and section number that apply.

SEC. 14. OTHER CHANGES PROHIBITED

NO OTHER CHANGES TO THE FORM 1040 GRAPHICS ARE PERMITTED WITHOUT PRIOR APPROVAL.

SEC. 15. ACCEPTABLE FORMATS — COMPUTER-GENERATED FORMS AND SCHEDULES

.01 Exhibits of Acceptable Formats for Form 1040 Schedules.

1 Exhibits of acceptable computer-generated formats for the schedules usually attached to the Form 1040 are shown in the Exhibits section of this revenue procedure. The exhibits are for Schedules A, B, C, D, E, F, G, R, RP, SE, and TC.

Because a substitute form is a variation from the official form, you should know the requirements of the official form before you modify it to meet your needs. For the most frequently used tax forms, the quickest way to obtain an official form is to request reproduction proofs of these forms. Reproduction proofs can only be ordered by using Form M-5368, Order for Reproduction Proofs. Form M-5368 can be obtained in two ways: (1) by written request to Internal Revenue Service, RM:FM:P, Room 1528, 1111 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, or (2) by telephone request (at your expense) to the Reproduction Proof Coordinator at (202) 566-2473.

2 Use of Acceptable Formats. If your computer-generated forms appear exactly like the exhibits, no prior authorization is needed.

3 CHANGES TO EXHIBITS NOT PERMITTED WITHOUT PRIOR APPROVAL. Any change to the text or format of any of the exhibits requires PRIOR WRITTEN APPROVAL.

SEC. 16. COMPUTER - GENERATED FORMS NOT SHOWN AS EXHIBITS IN THIS REVENUE PROCEDURE

.01 Persons or companies desiring to change the computer-generated forms shown as exhibits MUST obtain prior approval before use.

.02 Those desiring to computer-generate forms not shown here may do so, but they must design such forms themselves by following the manner and style of those in the Exhibits section of this publication and by taking care to observe other requirements and conditions stated here.

.03 Computer-generated forms so designed DO NOT require prior approval from the Service. However, the user of such forms is bound by the "Agreement" in Sec. 8 above.

.04 If you wish, you may submit any substitute form to the Service for approval consideration.

SEC. 17. INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING COMPUTER-GENERATED SUBSTITUTES

.01 Format Arrangement.

The format of each substitute schedule must follow the format of the official schedule as to item caption, line reference, line numbers, sequence, form arrangement and format, etc. Basically try to make the form look like the official one, with readability being a primary factor. Use periods and/or other special characters to separate the various parts and sections of the form. With the exceptions in .02 below, all line numbers and items must be printed even though an amount is not entered on the line.

.02 Exceptions.

1 Zero Entries. Detailed information for any deduction or income category may be omitted from the printout if the category total to be reported is zero. However, the substitute form must show the total (zero when applicable) for each category.

2 Lines Captioned "Other." It is not necessary to fill in every numbered or referenced line of forms when the line caption calls for "Other," e.g., "Other (itemize)," "Other (specify)," "Other (attach schedule)," etc. Examples of this exception are lines 6c, 15, 19, 21b and 31 for Schedule A (Form 1040). When this occurs, a supporting statement may be used and only the total amount of these "Other" items entered on the line of the official form. However, we prefer that the space on the official form be used when it is adequate.

3 Schedule A (Form 1040). All numbered and lettered lines must be filled in, if applicable. Supporting statements may be used to give the details of the totals entered on such lines but may not be used as a substitute for a collection of lines. For example, the detailed information for "Taxes" may not be shown on a supporting statement (supplemental schedule) and only line 16 filled in; but the details of "state and local income taxes" may be shown on a supporting statement and the total of such taxes entered on line 11. Also, lines 33 through 38 need not be shown, but the total of itemized deductions must be shown on line 39.

4 Schedule B (Form 1040). Lines 1 and 3 need not be filled in on the form. A supporting statement may be used for the details of interest and dividend income and the appropriate totals of such income entered on lines 2 and 4 unless nominee distribution or accrued interest criteria apply. (See the tax package instructions concerning interest.)

5 Schedule C (Form 1040). All lines on page 1 must be filled in when applicable except the line where "Other expenses (specify)" is listed. (See instruction 2 above.) All information for Schedule C-1 must be entered. Schedule C-2 information may be entered on a supporting statement so long as the method of depreciation used (if any) is entered on the form in column (e). Schedule C-3 information may be shown on a supporting statement and not entered on the form.

6 Schedule E (Form 1400).

(a) When there are entries on page 1 for any of the Parts I and IV, the following requirements and/or questions must be answered and tax information must be entered on the lines provided, in Part II, lines 5a through 6b, the question boxes must be answered; if the answer to question 6a is "yes," the amortizable basis must be entered on line 6b. Be sure there is a place on line 6b for the amount.

(b) Supporting statements may be used for the details of rental income and expenses and for royalty income. The appropriate totals must be carried to line 7, columns (b) through (g).

(c) The income and loss from various partnerships, estates or trusts, and small business corporations also may be detailed on a supporting statement, but the appropriate total income and total loss must be entered on lines 10 through 18 and also on line 19 when applicable.

(d) Page 2 need not be used so long as the information is provided on a supporting statement. The supporting statement must show the details required by the form.

7 Schedule F (Form 1040). Depending on which accounting method is used (cash or accrual), all of parts I and II or II and V must be printed in their entirety.

.03 Vertical Alignment of Amount Fields. Vertically align the amount entry fields where possible.

1 When a line on an official form is designated by a number or a letter, that designation (reference code) must be used on a computer-generated substitute form.

2 The reference code must be printed to the left of the corresponding captioned line and also immediately preceding the data field even if there is no reference code immediately preceding the data field on the official form.

3 In addition, the reference code that is immediately before the data field must be either followed by a period or enclosed in parentheses. There also must be at least two blank spaces between the period or the right parenthesis and the first character of the data field. (See example in 4 below.)

4 A decimal point (i.e., a period) must be used for each money amount regardless of whether the amount is reported in dollars and cents or in whole dollars or whether or not the vertical line that separates the dollars from the cents is present. The decimal points must be vertically aligned when possible.

Example:

12 Real Estate --------	12.	495.00
13 General Sales ------	13.
14 Personal Property --	14.	198.00

12 Real Estate --------	(12)	496.00
13 General Sales -------	(13)

.05 Sequence Numbers.

1 Please note that certain forms have a newly added "sequence number" located in the upper right hand corner of official forms. On computer-generated forms, place this sequence number following the year designation for the tax form and separate with an asterisk. (Example. 1980 * 08)

2 The affected forms and their respective sequence numbers follow:

Please note that some of the numbers have been changed since the 1979 tax forms.

Form 1040 Schedule/Form	Sequence Number
D	15
E	16
F (front)	17
F (reverse)	18
G	21
R and RP	22
SE	23
4136-T	29
4726	31

.06 Multiple Page Forms. With the exceptions noted above, when printing multiple page forms and no entries are present in an entire section of the form, you may omit printing the line numbers, captions, etc. by following these rules:

1 the section title/description must be printed

2 skip one blank line following the title/description

4 skip one blank line, and

5 begin the next section.

Sec. 18. Additional Instructions for All Forms

.01 Internal control numbers and identifying symbols of the computer preparer may be shown on the substitute, if the use of such numbers or symbols is acceptable to the taxpayer and the taxpayer's representative. If shown, such information must not be printed in the top one-half inch clear area, from the center to the right edge, of any form or schedule requiring a signature.

With the exception of the actual tax return form (i.e., Forms 1040, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) you may also print in the left vertical and bottom left margins. The bottom left margin you may use extends 3½ inches from the left edge of the form.

.02 Descriptions for captions, lines, etc., appearing on the substitute forms may be limited to one print line by using abbreviations and contractions and by omitting articles, prepositions, etc. However, sufficient key words must be retained to permit ready identification of the caption, line or item.

1 Explanatory details and/or intermediate calculations for derivation of final line totals, may be included on the substitute. We prefer that such calculations be submitted in the form of a supporting statement. If intermediate calculations are included on the substitute, the lines on which they appear may not be numbered or lettered. Intermediate calculations may not be printed in the right column. This column is reserved for official numbered and lettered lines that correspond to the ones on the official form. If a supporting statement is submitted, intermediate calculations or subtotals may be formatted at the preparer's option.

All supporting statements submitted must be referenced to the schedule entry which it supports, and the entry on the schedule, in turn, must be cross-referenced to the supporting statement. However, all total lines on supporting forms must have a total printed. This total must be carried forward from any supporting statements.

2 Text prescribed for the official form, which is solely instructional in nature, e.g., "Attach this schedule to Form 1040," "See instructions," etc., may be omitted from the substitute form.

3 Information for more than one schedule may not be shown on the same printout page without prior approval from the Service. Except for computer-generated Schedules A and B (Form 1040), any form may be continued on two or more pages if necessary. When a form is continued on two or more pages, clearly identify at the bottom of each page, including page 1, that it is continued, e.g., "page 1, Schedule C continued." It is strongly recommended that a substitute form not exceed the same number of pages used for the official form.

5 State tax information must not appear on the federal tax return which is filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center, except where amounts are claimed as a state tax deduction, e.g., line 11, Schedule A (Form 1040).

The state column may be present, but the state tax information must NOT be visible on the copy filed with the Service. When a form is designed with both federal and state columns, THE FEDERAL COLUMN MUST BE TO THE LEFT OF THE STATE COLUMN AND ADJACENT TO THE LINE CAPTION.

6 Use the preaddressed label supplied with the taxpayer's tax package on all computer-prepared substitute forms that will be filed with the Service. Use of the label avoids larger processing costs because it reduces the potential for error—the kind of error which can delay the receipt of refund and information needed by the taxpayer.

7 When filing substitute computer-prepared or computer-generated schedules, use the envelope enclosed with the taxpayer's tax package. This envelope is coded for sorting into several categories. Use of the coded envelope can help speed up the processing of the return and reduce processing costs. Use of the Service provided tax package envelope for other correspondence with the Service could delay the correspondence.

8 Attach all schedules in alphabetical order and forms in numerical order followed by supporting statements. The sequence of information on supporting statements must be the same order as the items appear on the form(s) to which it is referenced.

9 Additional information required or voluntarily submitted should be on the same size paper as the official form and attached to the return following the supporting statements.

10 Attach all payments (checks or money order, no cash) to the front of the tax return.

11 Reproductions must have a high standard of legibility, both as to original form and as to fill-in matter. The Service reserves the right to reject any computer-generated or computer-prepared substitutes or related forms that have poor legibility or that do not meet the specifications of this revenue procedure.

SEC. 19. FILING SUBSTITUTE FORMS WITH IRS

Follow the same instructions as for filing official forms. These instructions are in the taxpayer's tax package.

SEC. 20. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

This revenue procedure supersedes Rev. Proc. 79-58, 1979-2 C.B. 549.

Rev. Proc. 80-50

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure provides approval for certain defined benefit pension plans to change the funding method for plan years described in Section 7.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

Section 412(c)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended, and section 302(c)(5) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, 40, state that if the funding method of a plan is changed, the new funding method shall become effective only if the change is approved by the Secretary.

SEC. 3. APPROVAL FOR SPECIFIED CHANGES

Except as restricted by Section 6 of this revenue procedure, approval is granted to the following:

.01 Approval 1—A change to either of the three Aggregate Methods described in sections 3.01(1), 3.01(2) or 3.01(3).

(1) The normal cost is computed in the aggregate as the normal cost accrual rate multiplied by compensation. The normal cost accrual rate is (A) the present value of future benefits less adjusted assets divided by (B) the present value of future compensation.

(2) The normal cost is computed in the aggregate as the normal cost per participant multiplied by the number of participants who are currently employed by employers maintaining the plan. The normal cost per participant is (A) the present value of future benefits less adjusted assets divided by (B) the sum of the present value of an annuity of $1 per year payable from the attained age to retirement age for each participant who is currently employed.

(3) The normal cost is computed in the aggregate as (A) the present value of future benefits less adjusted assets divided by (B) a temporary annuity factor. The temporary annuity factor is the present value of future individual level premium normal costs divided by the current year's individual level premium normal cost. For purposes of this subsection, the individual level premium normal cost for each participant is the sum of the level amounts to fund each increment of projected benefit from the attained age at which the increment occurs to the anticipated retirement age.

(4) In methods (1), (2), and (3), for purposes of section 412 of the Code, the assets are adjusted by subtracting any credit balance in the funding standard account or adding any funding deficiency. For purposes of section 404, the assets are adjusted by subtracting any undeducted contributions. Also, all existing amortization bases under sections 404 or 412 shall be considered fully amortized.

.02 Approval 2—A change to an Individual Aggregate Method that satisfies paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (4) and (5) of this subsection.

(1) The normal cost is the sum of individual normal costs for each participant for whom a normal cost is determined. The normal cost for a participant is (A) the present value of future benefits less allocated adjusted assets, divided by (B) a temporary annuity factor from attained age to the anticipated retirement age. (The temporary annuity factor may also be determined as the present value of future compensation for the participant divided by current compensation.)

(2) For purposes of section 412 of the Code, prior to the allocation of assets each year the assets are adjusted by subtracting any credit balance in the funding standard account or adding any funding deficiency. For purposes of section 404, any undeducted contributions are subtracted from the assets. Also, if the plan retains the liabilities for any participant or beneficiary for whom a normal cost is not computed, the assets are adjusted by subtracting the present value of such liabilities.

(3) In the first year the method is used, the adjusted assets are allocated on the basis of the present value of accrued benefits, the present value of future benefits, or the accrued liability under a funding method of the immediate gain type.

(4) After the first year the method is used, adjusted assets are allocated in the proportion that the sum of the allocated assets plus calculated normal cost of the prior year for each participant for whom a normal cost is computed bears to the total for all such participants.

(5) In the first year the method is used, all unamortized bases under sections 404 and 412 of the Code will be considered fully amortized.

.03 Approval 3—A change to a method described in paragraphs (1) or (2) if the requirements in paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) are also satisfied.

(1) The normal cost is computed in the aggregate as the normal cost accrual rate multiplied by compensation. The normal cost accrual rate is (A) the present value of future benefits less assets less unfunded liability divided by (B) the present value of future compensation.

(2) The normal cost is computed in the aggregate as the normal cost per participant multiplied by the number of participants who are currently employed by employers maintaining the plan. The normal cost per participant is (A) the present value of future benefits less assets less the unfunded liability divided by (B) the sum of the present value of an annuity of $1 per year payable from the attained age to retirement age for each participant who is currently employed.

(3) As of the date of change, the unfunded liability under the new method is determined under an acceptable funding method of the immediate gain type.

For years subsequent to the plan year of the change in method, the unfunded liability for any year equals

(A) the unfunded liability for the prior plan year plus the normal cost for the prior plan year, minus

(B) the actual contributions for the the prior plan year

where the amounts in (A) and (B) are adjusted with interest to the date as of which the unfunded liability is determined.

(4) The new amortization base resulting from the change in funding method is the difference between

(A) the unfunded liability under the new method as determined under 3.03(3), and

(B) the net sum of the outstanding balance of all amortization bases (including the gain or loss base for the immediately preceding period), treating credit bases as negative bases, less the credit balance (or plus the funding deficiency) in the funding standard account.

(5) The amortization period for the new amortization base for purposes of sections 302 of ERISA and 412 of the Code is as follows:

(A) If the plan was in existence on January 1, 1974, any decrease in unfunded liability will be amortized over 40 years reduced by the number of prior plan years to which section 302 has applied, and any increase will be amortized over 30 years.

(B) If the plan was not in existence on January 1, 1974, any increase will be amortized over 30 years reduced by the number of prior plan years to which section 302 has applied, and any decrease will be amortized over 30 years.

SEC. 4. APPROVAL FOR TAKEOVER PLANS

.01 Approval is granted by this subsection for a change in funding method where all the conditions set forth in subsections .02 through .05 are satisfied.

.02 There has been both a change in the enrolled actuary for the plan and a change in the business organization providing actuarial services to the plan.

.03 The method used by the new actuary is substantially the same as the method used by the prior actuary, and is consistent with the information contained in the prior actuarial valuation reports or prior Schedule B's of Form 5500. Also, the method used by the new actuary must be applied to the prior year (using the assumptions of the prior actuary) and the net charge in the funding standard account produced must not differ by more than five percent from the net charges computed by the prior actuary for that year.

.04 The new enrolled actuary signs and attaches a statement to Schedule B of Form 5500 that the procedures and formula currently being used may produce different results from the prior procedures and formula, but that information is not available to reproduce the prior method exactly.

.05 The change in costs due to the change in method is treated in the same manner as an experience gain or loss, unless the actuarial assumptions are being changed, in which case the change in method is treated as part of the change in assumptions.

SEC. 5. CHANGE IN YEAR OF TERMINATION

.01 For a plan year beginning before a plan terminates, the funding method may be changed to a method that satisfies subsection .02 provided that the conditions set forth in subsection .03 are satisfied. As part of the change in method, the valuation date may be changed, if desired, to the date of termination, or the asset valuation method may be changed to fair market value.

.02 A method is described in this subsection if the normal cost for the plan year is the present value of the benefits accruing in the plan year under the method, and the accrued liability is the present value of the benefits accrued under the method as of the valuation date.

.03 The conditions in this subsection are satisfied if:

(1) as of the date of termination as approved by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC), the fair market value of the assets of the plan is not less than the present value of all accrued benefits (whether or not vested). The actuarial assumptions used for determining such present value must be acceptable to PBGC for use under section 4044 of ERISA, supra, at 194; and

(2) a timely notice of intention to terminate was filed with the PBGC.

SEC. 6. RESTRICTIONS

.01 This revenue procedure does not apply unless an actuarial valuation is made for the plan year for which a change in method is effective, and such valuation is used for purposes of section 302 of ERISA for such plan year.

.02 This revenue procedure does not apply unless the plan administrator or plan sponsor signs and attaches a statement to Schedule B of Form 5500 for the plan year for which a change is effective stating that the plan administrator or plan sponsor agrees to the change in funding method which is being made as approved by this revenue procedure.

.03 This revenue procedure does not apply if:

(1) The funding method (including the asset valuation method) is being changed in any manner other than that described above.

(2) A waiver of the minimum funding standards has been granted for the plan or the amortization charge described in section 412(b)(2)(C) of the Code is applicable in the plan year of the change.

(3) Except as described in Section 5, the change is made for a plan year in which the plan is terminated.

.04 The approvals under sections 3.01(1), 3.02(1), and 3.03(1) do not apply if the temporary annuity factor is weighted by compensation but the plan benefits are not based on compensation.

.05 Section 4 does not apply to any plan for any plan year beginning on or after the date final regulations under section 6059 of the Code are adopted.

.06 This revenue procedure does not apply for any plan year if Schedule B of Form 5500 has been filed or if the date (without extension) by which it must be filed has passed.

This revenue procedure is effective for changes in funding methods made with respect to plan years commencing on or after July 1, 1979, and before January 1, 1986.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individual has been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

The turbine generating unit was acquired within the meaning of section 1.48-2(b)(6) of the regulations, but the addition was constructed within the meaning of section 1.48-2 (b)(1). Department of the Treasury
Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

EMPLOYEE PLANS

Rev. Rul. 80-314, page 8.

Discrimination; coverage; officer acting in nominal capacity. An employee who was given the title of assistant secretary-treasurer merely to qualify the employee to sign checks in the absence of superior officers and to affix and attest to the corporate seal when necessary and who actually performed these duties on only a few occasions but otherwise had no voice in the management or administration of the corporation is not considered an officer for purposes of sections 401(a)(4) and 410(b) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 68-300 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-315, page 9.

Minimum funding; supplementary plan. An employee benefit plan that provides benefits that merely supplement benefits paid to the employees covered by a qualified defined benefit plan must consider the participants of the qualified plan in applying the minimum funding standards of section 302 of ERISA.

EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS

Hospital service organization; purchasing; legal title. An organization that otherwise qualifies as a cooperative hospital service organization within the meaning of section 501(e) of the Code, that buys hospital equipment for its patron hospitals, and that holds legal title to the equipment while the hospitals repay a commercial lender for the loan used to purchase the equipment is operated solely to perform the service of "purchasing" within the meaning of section 501(e)(1)(A).

Buyer's "points" assumed by seller-decedent. An individual entered into an arm's length agreement to sell a personal residence and to pay mortgage "points" for the buyer that were to be deducted from the sale proceeds, but died before consummating the sale. The amount includible in the individual's gross estate is the sales price of the property less the "points" assumed by the seller, and the "points" are not deductible under section 2053(a)(3) or (a)(4) of the Code.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 38.—Investment in Certain Depreciable Property

26 CFR 1.38-1: Investment in certain depreciable property.
(Also Sections 46, 48, 446; 1.46-3, 1.48-2, 1.446-1.)

Investment credit; public utilities; retired items reused. An electric utility's qualified investment in new section 38 property that is public utility property includes minor items that are treated as mass assets recovered for retired electric public utility property and are reused in the construction or reconstruction of electric utility property. A method for valuing the mass assets for detemining basis is explained. A change to the method of valuing such items is a change in accounting method. Rev. Rul. 70-114 modified and superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-311

ISSUE

Under the facts described below, do certain minor items recovered from retired electric public utility property qualify as "new section 38 property" for investment credit purposes when again used in construction, reconstruction, or erection of electric utility property? Further, what are the proper tax bases for such mass asset type materials?

FACTS

The taxpayer, an electric utility, is engaged in the generation, transmission, distribution, and sale of electric energy. In the course of its operations, the taxpayer recovered reusable items from retirements of its electric utility property, generally from distribution and transmission lines. The reusable items recovered were stored at supply depots maintained by the taxpayer until again placed in service. Largely easily identifiable individual items such as transformers and meters were included in the materials and supplies account at original cost. The small items, numerous in quantity, including insulators, cross arms, brackets, etc., the identity of which could not be ascertained without undue refinement in accounting were included in the materials and supplies account at the average cost of similar items (new and used) already in the account. These items on retirement had been credited to the appropriate depreciation reserve account at the same average cost. This practice had been consistently followed for both regulatory and tax accounting.

In Rev. Rul. 70-114, 1970-1 C.B. 2, the same items of electric public utility property were involved. The taxpayer in that revenue ruling, however, could not determine either the original date of installation or the original cost for such mass assets. In the present case, the taxpayer's property records enable it to determine the original cost and installation date at the time these items are retired. However, the reusable small items are then transferred to a storage yard and are physically intermixed with similar items already on hand. At this point, the taxpayer in this case is in the same position as the taxpayer in Rev. Rul. 70-114 in that it no longer knows the original cost of the reusable small items.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 38 of the Internal Revenue Code allows a credit against federal income tax for qualified investment in section 38 property, and the determination of what property is qualified is made in accordance with rules provided in section 48.

Section 46(a)(2)(B) of the Code provides for a 10 percent investment credit for all taxpayers (including public utilities) for otherwise qualifying property.

Section 48(a)(1) of the Code provides that the term "section 38 property" means, among other things, tangible property subject to depreciation and having a useful life of 3 years or more.

Section 48(b) of the Code defines new section 38 property as section 38 property the construction, reconstruction, or erection of which is completed by the taxpayer, or acquired by the taxpayer, after December 31, 1961, provided the original use of such property commences with the taxpayer after such date (except as provided with respect to "suspension period property" defined in section 48(h) of the Code).

Section 1.46-3(c)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the basis of any new section 38 property shall be detemined in accordance with the general rules for determining the basis of property. The basis of such property would generally be its cost unreduced by any adjustment to basis, such as for depreciation, and also would include all items properly in the depreciable basis. Therefore, the basis for investment credit purposes is generally the same as the basis for depreciation.

Section 1.48-2(b)(3) of the regulations provides that the materials entering into construction of new property need not be new in use, nor that the materials be acquired after December 31, 1961. Therefore, it is of no consequence that the materials are recovered from the retired plant facilities.

Rev. Rul. 70-114 holds that such items of property are materials entering into construction of new property and need not be new in use nor be acquired after December 31, 1961, in order to qualify for the investment credit. This holding is followed in this revenue ruling. However, incidental replacements of a single pole, cross arm insulator, etc., do not constitute construction, reconstruction, or erection of public utility property and such replacements are not "section 38 property."

Section 1.446-1(a)(2) of the regulations provides that a method of accounting that reflects the consistent application of generally accepted accounting principles in a particular trade or business in accordance with the accepted conditions or practices in that trade or business will ordinarily be regarded as clearly reflecting income. For both regulatory and tax purposes, the taxpayer has consistently valued these reusable small items recovered from retirements of property at the average cost of similar items already in the materials and supplies account, and has used such cost as basis in computing depreciation.

HOLDING

The taxpayer's qualified investment in new section 38 property that is public utility property, with respect to its newly constructed or reconstructed electric utility property, includes the values determined to be the basis of the minor items that were reused in the construction or reconstruction of electric utility property. However, since these items in the present case are accounted for as mass assets, if the requirements of section 1.47-1(e)(2) of the regulations for the treatment of mass assets are met, the taxpayer may substitute data from an appropriate mortality dispersion table to compute or recompute the qualified investment with respect to its reused (and purchased) parts and components used in the construction or reconstruction of electric utility property.

Further, since the basis of property for investment credit purposes follows the general rules regarding basis, the taxpayer's bases for the minor items described above are also deemed to be "cost" for investment credit purposes unless it can be shown that the use of such bases in computing depreciation results in a distortion of income. A change to this method is a change in method of accounting within the meaning of section 446 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 70-114, providing other rules to be followed in valuing reusable materials recovered from retirements, is modified and superseded since its provisions, as modified, are reflected herein.

This revenue ruling does not apply to taxpayers electing section 1.167(a)-11 of the regulations because that section requires that an asset transferred to a supplies account may not have a basis higher than its unadjusted basis.

26 CFR 1.48-1: Definition of section 38 property.

Investment credit; public utilities; acquisition v. construction. A public utility contracted with a manufacturer of turbine generating units and with a general contractor for an exansion of its generating plant. The manufacturer exercised direction and control over installation, testing, and start-up of the turbine generating unit purchased by the utility, while the utility exercised continuing control over the important details of construction under the general contract for construction of the plant addition. The turbine generating unit was acquired within the meaning of section 1.48-2(b)(6) of the regulations, but the addition was constructed within the meaning of section 1.48-2(b)(1). The Service will not follow the Public Service Co. of New Mexico decision.

Rev. Rul. 80-312

ISSUE

Whether an addition to an electrical power plant was "acquired" or "constructed" by the taxpayer for purposes of determining the amount of the investment tax credit.

FACTS

The taxpayer is a public utility corporation in the business of furnishing electrical energy. In 1974 the taxpayer entered into contracts with a general contractor, company X, and also with company Y, the manufacturer of turbine generating units for the construction of an addition to an electrical generating plant. This addition was built on the taxpayer's land and was to be operated in conjunction with the taxpayer's existing plant facilities.

The contract with Y called for Y to manufacture a turbine generating unit and exercise technical direction and authoritative control over its installation including the furnishing of all test procedures and their application. The turbine generating unit addition to the plant was installed and made operational by Y.

The contract with X provided that X would furnish the required engineering design, drafting, accounting, purchasing and expediting of materials, supervision, labor, and other requirements necessary for the construction of the addition to the electrical power plant which included mechanical, electrical, concrete, and site work; a railroad spur; and an addition to the generating building. The contract also specified that X would furnish the necessary construction facilities and engineering to turn over to the taxpayer a complete addition to the operating plant (with the exception of the turbine generating unit).

The builder's risk policy for the other additions to the electrical generating plant was secured and premiums were paid by the taxpayer. The taxpayer participated in and had the right of final approval over competitive bids from the manufacturers of the other additions of plant components. The specifications for the addition to the power plant, such as the technical data and performance details, were prescribed by the taxpayer. During the construction of the addition, the taxpayer and X had many meetings concerning the construction costs, bids, and design details affecting the operation of the addition to the plant. A representative of the taxpayer was at the construction site daily and acted as a liaison between the taxpayer and X. This resulted in the taxpayer having continuing control over important details of the construction. The construction of the addition to the plant began in 1974 and was not completed until mid-1975.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 38 of the Internal Revenue Code allows a credit against federal income tax for qualified investment in section 38 property and the determination of what property is qualified is made in accordance with the rules provided in section 48.

Section 46(a)(2)(B) of the Code provides for a 10 percent investment credit for all taxpayers (including public utilities) for otherwise qualifying property that was acquired after January 21, 1975. For property acquired prior to that date the credit is 4 percent. The Tax Reduction Act of 1975, Pub. L. 94-12, 1975-1 C.B. 545, provided that, when the qualifying property was constructed, the 10 percent credit applied only to the portion of the basis of the property that was attributable to construction occurring after January 21, 1975. A 4 percent investment credit for public utility property applied to the portion of the basis attributable to construction before such date.

Section 48(a) of the Code, in defining the term "section 38 property," includes tangible personal property, or other tangible property (not including a building and its structural components) if such other tangible property is used as an integral part of certain specified activities, including the furnishing of electrical energy.

Section 48(b) of the Code which governs the extent to which particular items may be treated as "new section 38 property," states that "new section 38 property" means section 38 property, the construction, reconstruction, or erection of which is completed by the taxpayer after December 31, 1961, or acquired after December 31, 1961, if the original use of such property commences with the taxpayer and commences after such date.

Section 1.48-2(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that property is considered as constructed, reconstructed, or erected by the taxpayer if the work is done for the taxpayer in accordance with the taxpayer's specifications.

Section 1.48-2(b)(6) of the regulations provides that property is deemed to be acquired when reduced to physical possession or control.

In Madison Newspapers, Inc. v. Commissioner, 47 T.C. 630 (1967), acq., 1975-2 C.B. 2, the issue of whether the taxpayer was entitled to the investment credit depended on whether the printing press units in question were acquired as new section 38 property after December 31, 1961. To the Tax Court of the United States the critical question in Madison Newspapers was of what did the taxpayer acquire possession and control. The installation of the printing press units was a complex operation that required extensive time. The installation was conducted under the technical directions of persons designated by the seller but paid for by the taxpayer separately from the costs of delivered units. The Court concluded that the taxpayer acquired installed printing presses and hence the taxpayer was entitled to the credit because it found the property was built and installed in accordance with the seller's rather than the taxpayer's specifications.

A number of factors must be considered in determining whether the construction of property built by another may be attributed to a taxpayer as having been done for the taxpayer in accordance with taxpayer's specifications or whether the property was acquired by the taxpayer. The degree of control a taxpayer has over a planned construction project is an indication of whether property is constructed or acquired by the taxpayer. A taxpayer's control is indicated by ownership of the major components, ownership of the land upon which the construction took place, the carrying of builder's risk insurance, and the daily presence of the taxpayer's technical representative. Other factors are the taxpayer's participation in the bidding process, the purchase of certain major units by the taxpayer, and the taxpayer's right of final approval on all major units.

When a facility is acquired, the control by the taxpayer is minimal, as in the instant case where the installation and conducting of the generating unit's operational tests were performed by manufacturer Y.

Thus, when a taxpayer exercises continuing control of components added to its electrical generating plant, the components are "constructed" by the taxpayer, but where the components added to the plant are installed and made operational by a manufacturer, the components are "acquired" by the taxpayer. The facts of this case establish that, except for the turbine generator unit, the taxpayer had sufficient control over the construction project to conclude that it was built according to the taxpayer's specifications.

HOLDINGS

The turbine generating unit was acquired by the taxpayer within the meaning of section 1.48-2(b)(6).

The addition to the electric generating plant with the exception of the turbine generating unit under the continuing control of the taxpayer was "constructed" by the taxpayer within the meaning of section 1.48-2(b)(1) of the regulations. Therefore, the full 10 percent investment credit applies to the turbine generating unit and that portion of the addition constructed after January 21, 1975; however, only the 4 percent investment credit applies to that portion of the addition constructed prior to such date.

The Internal Revenue Service will not follow Public Service Co. of New Mexico v. United States, 431 F. 2d 980 (10th Cir. 1970), which reached a different conclusion based on similar facts.

26 CFR 1.48-2: New section 38 property.

Investment credit; computer using reconstructed circuit boards. New computers that contain reconstructed circuit boards that conform to design characteristics similar to new unused components and that had been used in, and salvaged from, old scrapped computers qualify as "new section 38 property" when leased to customers.

Rev. Rul. 80-313

ISSUE

Do new computers that use reconstructed circuit boards that had been used in, and salvaged from, old computers qualify as new section 38 property when leased to customers?

FACTS

During 1975, the taxpayer was in the business of manufacturing, selling, and leasing computers. A computer product line generally becomes obsolete because of improvements in computer design. At the time of construction, the taxpayer's computers were estimated to have a useful life of 3 or more years.

After a computer is determined to be obsolete, the taxpayer withdraws it from leasing and scraps the computer, salvaging any reusable or serviceable parts. For accounting purposes, the scrapping of the computer is treated as an extraordinary retirement. When gain is not recognized on retirement, the adjusted basis is used as the basis in the materials and supply account when the parts are retired; however, if a loss is recognized on the retirement, the estimated salvage value, or the fair market value if greater at the time of retirement, is capitalized as the cost of such parts in the materials and supply account.

A major component used in the manfacture of a computer is its printed circuit boards, the configuration of which is dictated by the design of the computer. The printed circuit boards are salvaged from scrapped computers by the taxpayer for further use in newly designed computers.

These circuit boards are made up of integrated printed circuits. After being salvaged, these boards are reconstructed by rewiring or adding new circuitry to them so that they are able to perform their newly designed function in the same way that a wholly new board would perform the same function. Therefore, the reconstructed circuit board is equivalent to a new circuit board.

The reconstructed circuit boards are then used in association with other new components in the construction of new computers.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 38 of the Internal Revenue Code allows a credit against the federal income taxes for qualified investment in new section 38 property. The determination of what property qualifies and whether it is new or used section 38 property is made in accordance with rules provided in section 48.

Section 48(a)(1) of the Code defines section 38 property as including tangible personal property with respect to which depreciation is allowable and having a useful life of 3 or more years.

Section 48(b) of the Code and section 1.48-2(a) of the Income Tax Regulations define new section 38 property as property, the construction, reconstruction, or erection of which was completed by the taxpayer after December 31, 1961, or was acquired by the taxpayer after that date provided the original use commences with the taxpayer after that date.

Section 1.48-2(b)(3) of the regulations provides that it is not necessary that materials entering into construction, reconstruction, or erection be new in use.

Section 1.48-2(b)(7) of the regulations provides that property will not be treated as reconditioned or rebuilt merely because it contains used parts.

Rev. Rul. 68-111, 1968-1 C.B. 29, concerns a railroad company that purchased and placed in service a current model diesel-electric locomotive to replace a locomotive that it had used in its trade or business for more than 8 years. In the purchase transaction, the replaced locomotive was traded in and its value allowed as a part of the purchase price of the replacement locomotive. The replacement locomotive was constructed by the manufacturer with some used materials and parts from its inventory. The ruling holds that the locomotive is new section 38 property within the meaning of section 48(b) of the Code and section 1.48-2(b) of the regulations.

Rev. Rul. 70-114, 1970-1 C.B. 2, holds that the basis of recovered parts and components accounted for as mass assets salvaged from retired plant facilities and reused to construct new section 38 property to be taken into account for investment credit purposes is (1) for normal retirements, the estimated salvage value, and (2) for abnormal retirements, when gain is not recognized on retirements the basis shall be their adjusted basis when retired, and when loss is recognized on retirement the basis is the estimated salvage value or the fair market value if greater at the time of abnormal retirement. Such basis for such salvaged parts and components may be charged to the constructed property by applying a consistent averaging convention. However, a change from valuing such parts and components at the current price of similar new items is a change in method of accounting within the meaning of section 446 of the Code.

In this case, the newly designed computers, containing the salvaged and reconditioned circuit boards, go through a complete assembly process. The reconstructed circuit boards are reworked, tested and modified to perform a specific function. These circuit boards conform to design characteristice similar to new unused components that are to be incorporated into the new computer.

As recognized in section 1.48-2(b)(7) of the regulations, the presence of used circuit boards does not require the computers to be treated as reconditioned or rebuilt property. The new computers have different performance characteristics, are newly manufactured with new and used parts after December 31, 1961, and the original use will occur with the taxpayer after that date.

HOLDING

The new computers that are manufactured using reconstructed printed circuit boards that have been used in, and salvaged from, old computers qualify as new section 38 property when leased to customers.

Discrimination; coverage; officer acting in nominal capacity. corporation is not considered an officer for purposes of sections 401(a)(4) and 410(b) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 68-300 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-314

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate Rev. Rul. 68-300, 1968-1 C.B. 159, in view of the enactment of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1.

The issue in Rev. Rul. 68-300 is whether an employee is an officer within the purview of sections 401(a)(4) and 410(b) of the Internal Revenue Code under the circumstances stated below.

An employee in the parts department of a company was given the title of assistant secretary-treasurer to qualify such employee to sign checks, in the absence of superior officers of the corporation, and to affix and attest to the corporate seal when necessary. The employee executed documents in such employee's official capacity on a few occasions but otherwise had no voice in the management or administration of the corporation.

Sections 401(a)(4) and 410(b) of the Code set forth certain coverage and benefit or contribution requirements that are intended to assure that an employee benefit plan will not be qualified if it discriminates in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated.

The status of officers should be determined upon the basis of all the facts including, for example, the source of their authority, the term for which elected or appointed, and the nature and extent of their duties. As generally accepted in connection with corporations, the term "officer" means an administrative executive who is in regular and continued service. It implies continuity of service and excludes those employed for a special and single transaction.

The facts in this case indicate that the employee's administrative duties are nominal and are exercised in a substitute capacity on some occasions.

Accordingly, the employee is not considered an officer within the purview of sections 401(a)(4) and 410(b) of the Code. However, such an employee, although not included in the officer group, may be a shareholder or a highly compensated employee.

The principles and conclusion stated herein are applicable to those plans described in section 410(c) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 68-300 is superseded because the position stated therein is restated under current law in this revenue ruling.

Section 412.—Minimum Funding Standards

Minimum funding; supplementary plan. An employee benefit plan that provides benefits that merely supplement benefits paid to the employees covered by a qualified defined benefit plan must consider the participants of the qualified plan in applying the minimum funding standards of section 302 of ERISA.

Rev. Rul. 80-315

Advice has been requested regarding how the minimum funding standards of section 412 of the Internal Revenue Code and section 302 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, 38, apply under the circumstances described below, to a plan which provides benefits which merely supplement benefits paid to employees covered by a qualified defined benefit plan.

Corporation B maintains Plan Y, a qualified defined benefit plan. B established Plan X, an employee benefit plan within the meaning of section 3(2) of ERISA, supra at 2, which provides that employees who receive benefits under Plan Y will also receive benefits supplementing their benefits under Plan Y to reflect post-retirement cost-of-living increases. In addition, Plan X provides a social security supplement, as described in section 1.411(a)-7(b)(4) of the Income Tax Regulations. Plan X contains no other provisions indicating which employees are considered participants or how benefits under Plan X accrue and vest. Plan X is subject to the minimum funding requirements of section 302 of ERISA.

Section 412 of the Code and section 302 of ERISA describe the minimum funding standards applicable to most pension plans. Section 412 applies only to certain qualified pension plans, and under section 4 of ERISA section 302 applies, in general, to most employee pension benefit plans. Consequently, certain pension plans which are not subject to the qualification requirements of the Code, or which do not satisfy those requirements, must, nevertheless, comply with the minimum funding standards of section 302 of ERISA.

The minimum funding standard imposed by section 412 of the Code or section 302 of ERISA requires that a determination be made of which employees are covered by the plan and, therefore, may be entitled to receive benefits according to the terms of the plan.

Plan X specifies only that benefits will be paid by Plan X to supplement benefits received under Plan Y. Although benefits from Plan X are thus paid in conjunction with those of Plan Y, Plan X and Plan Y are nevertheless considered distinct plans. As such, the minimum funding requirements are determined separately for each. However, absent any specific plan provisions specifying participants, the participants in Plan Y are also the participants in Plan X. This treatment is necessary to satisfy the requirement that the plan provisions may not impose, directly or indirectly, a minimum age or service requirement, that does not independently satisfy section 202(a) of ERISA, supra at 22. See section 1.420(a)-(3)(e)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations.

Accordingly, Plan X must consider the participants of Plan Y in applying the minimum funding standards of section 302 of ERISA.

Section 501.—Exemption from Tax on Corporations, Certain Trusts, Etc.

Hospital service organization; purchasing; legal title. An organization that otherwise qualifies as a cooperative hospital service organization within the meaning of section 501(e) of the Code, that buys hospital equipment for its patron hospitals, and that holds legal title to the equipment while the hospitals repay a commercial lender for the loan used to purchase the equipment is operated solely to perform the service of "purchasing" within the meaning of section 501(e)(1)(A).

Rev. Rul. 80-316

ISSUE

Is the organization described below, which otherwise qualifies for exemption from federal income tax as a cooperative hospital service organization described in section 501(e) of the Internal Revenue Code, operated solely to perform the service of "purchasing" within the meaning of section 501(e)(1)(A)?

FACTS

The organization buys hospital equipment from suppliers when requested to do so by one or more of its patron hospitals that constitute its governing body and operate it on a cooperative basis. However, it holds legal title to the equipment while a patron hospital, which as the equitable owner of the equipment, pays the principal and interest payments on the equipment. Such payments are transmitted to a commercial lender whose funds were used by the organization to finance the buying of the equipment. Each patron hospital makes payments only on the equipment it is buying.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 501(e) of the Code defines a cooperative hospital service organization, and treats it as described in section 501(c)(3) for purposes of exemption from federal income tax under section 501(a).

Section 501(e)(1)(A) of the Code provides that a cooperative hospital service organization may perform on a centralized basis the service of "purchasing" which, if performed by a hospital exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3), would constitute performance of the hospital's exempt purpose.

Although the organization described above holds legal title to the equipment it purchases for its patron hospitals, that arrangement is used merely as a convenience to its patron hospitals that are the beneficial owners of and solely responsible for paying for the equipment.

HOLDING

The organization described above is operated solely to perform the service of "purchasing" within the meaning of section 501(e)(1)(A) of the Code and, because it otherwise qualifies as a cooperative hospital service organization described in section 501(e), is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(a).

APPLICATION INSTRUCTIONS

Even though an organization considers itself within the scope of this revenue ruling, it must file an application on Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption, in order to be recognized by the Service as exempt under section 501(e) of the Code. See section 1.501(a)-1 of the Income Tax Regulations. In accordance with the instructions to Form 1023, the application should be filed with the District Director of Internal Revenue for the key district indicated therein.

Section 613.—Percentage Depletion

26 CFR 1.613-5: Taxable income from the property.

Percentage depletion; taxable income from property; damages. Damages paid as a result of a breach of contract suit by a mineowner who was unable to deliver the mineral required by the contract because of a decrease in production are not deductible from gross income from mining for purposes of computing percentage depletion.

Rev. Rul. 80-317

ISSUE

Is the amount of damages paid by the taxpayer deductible from gross income from mining in computing the taxable income from mining pursuant to section 613 of the Internal Revenue Code under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

A entered into a contract with B, an unrelated purchaser of mineral mined from A's mine. The contract provided for the sale and delivery to B of a specified amount of A's production each year for 5 years. A delivered the mineral to B for the first 2 years. After that, A was unable to deliver any mineral to B because of a decrease in production. Therefore, B had to acquire the mineral from other sources. B sued A for breach of contract and was awarded x dollars as damages.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 611(a) of the Code provides that in the case of mines there shall be allowed as a deduction in computing taxable income a reasonable allowance for depletion according to the peculiar circumstances in each case, made under regulations prescribed by the Secretary. In the case of certain natural deposits, section 613 provides that the allowance for depletion shall be a specified percentage of the gross income from the property. Such allowance for depletion shall not exceed 50 percent of the taxpayer's taxable income from the property.

Section 613(c)(1) of the Code defines the term "gross income from the property," in the case of a property other than an oil or gas well, as the gross income from mining.

Section 1.613-4(a) of the Income Tax Regulations defines the term "gross income from mining" as that amount of income attributable to the extraction of ores or mineral from the ground and the application of mining processes, including mining transportation.

Section 1.613-5(a) of the regulations defines the term "taxable income from the property," as used in section 613, to mean "gross income from the property" less all allowable deductions that are attributable to mining processes with respect to which depletion is claimed.

In Island Creek Coal Co. v. Commissioner, 382 F.2d 35 (4th Cir. 1967), the Fourth Circuit determined that premiums paid for business interruption insurance were not deductible for percentage depletion purposes because the relationship of the processes of extraction and mining treatment was too remote. Income received from business interruption insurance is also not includible in gross income from mining because the receipts are not occasioned by the production of a mineral with consequent depletion of that mineral deposit but are paid in lieu of lost profits. Guthrie v. United States, 323 F.2d 142 (6th Cir. 1963). Similarly, amounts received in settlement of a breach of contract are not includible in gross income from mining. Rev. Rul. 77-57, 1977-1 C.B. 166.

Rev. Rul. 60-74, 1960-1 C.B. 253, provides that charitable contributions made by mining corporations which are deductible under section 170 of the Code need not be deducted in computing taxable income from the property, but payments to charitable organizations which constitute ordinary and necessary business expenses attributable to the mineral property must be deducted in computing the limitation on the percentage depletion allowance.

In the instant case, the payment of damages for breach of contract is not attributable to mining processes. The expenditure was not an ordinary and necessary cost of extracting and mining a depletable mineral product and was not related to production of income from an extracted mineral. Rather than a cost of production of a mineral, the payment of damages was occasioned by the lack of production.

HOLDING

The amount of damages paid by A is not deductible from gross income from mining in computing taxable income from the property for percentage depletion purposes of section 613.

Section 1491.—Imposition of Tax [Tax on Transfers to Avoid Income Tax]

26 CFR 1.1491-1: Imposition of tax.

Tax on transfer to foreign trust; Virgin Islands resident. Section 1491 of the Code does not apply to the transfer of appreciated property to a Virgin Islands trust by a U.S. citizen who is a permanent resident of the Virgin Islands.

Rev. Rul. 80-318

ISSUE

Does section 1491 of the Internal Revenue Code apply to a transfer of appreciated property, by a United States citizen who is a permanent resident of the United States Virgin Islands, to a revocable United States Virgin Islands trust?

FACTS

A is a United States citizen who is a permanent resident of the United States Virgin Islands. A has created a revocable United States Virgin Islands trust. A proposes to transfer appreciated real estate that is located in the Virgin Islands and stocks and securities in domestic corporations to the trust in 1980. A files an income tax return with, and pays the tax into, the treasury of the United States Virgin Islands. The trust is a foreign trust for purposes of section 7701(a)(31) of the Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1491 of the Code provides that an excise tax will be imposed on the transfer of property by a citizen or resident of the United States, or by a domestic corporation or partnership, or by an estate or trust which is not a foreign estate or trust, to a foreign corporation as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital, or to a foreign estate or trust, or to a foreign partnership. The excise tax imposed is equal to 35 percent of the excess of (1) the fair market value of the property transferred over (2) the sum of (A) the adjusted basis (for determining gain) of such property in the hands of the transferor, plus (B) the amount of the gain recognized to the transferor at the time of the transfer. Section 1491 is part of Chapter 5 of Subtitle A of the Code, which relates to income taxes.

The Naval Appropriations Act of 1921, 48 U.S.C.A. section 1397 (1976), provides that the income tax laws in force in the United States of America, and those which may hereafter be enacted, shall be held to be likewise in force in the Virgin Islands of the United States, except that the proceeds of such taxes shall be paid into the treasuries of said islands.

Section 28(a) of the Revised Organic Act of the Virgin Islands, 48 U.S.C.A. section 1642 (Supp. 1979), Pub. L. 517, 1954-2 C.B. 595, provides that the proceeds of customs duties, the proceeds of the United States income tax, the proceeds of any taxes levied by the Congress on the inhabitants of the Virgin Islands, and the proceeds of all quarantine, passport, immigration, and naturalization fees collected in the Virgin Islands, less the cost of collecting all of said duties, taxes, and fees, shall be covered into the treasury of the Virgin Islands, and shall be available for expenditure as the Legislature of the Virgin Islands may provide. The Revised Organic Act further provides that the term "inhabitants of the Virgin Islands" as used in this section shall include all persons whose permanent residence is in the Virgin Islands, and such persons shall satisfy their income tax obligations under applicable taxing statutes of the United States by paying their tax on income derived from all sources, both within and outside the Virgin Islands, into the treasury of the Virgin Islands.

The income tax laws in force in the Virgin Islands are the same as the United States income tax laws although the United States and the Virgin Islands are separate and distinct taxing jurisdictions. This duplication or "mirror" tax scheme was established for the Virgin Islands by the Naval Appropriations Act of 1921. In construing the Internal Revenue Code, as in effect in the Virgin Islands, it is necessary in some sections of the law to substitute the words "Virgin Islands" for the words "United States" in order to give the law the proper effect. Rev. Rul. 73-315, 1973-2 C.B. 225, and Rev. Rul. 80-40, 1980-1 C.B. 175.

United States citizens domiciled in the Virgin Islands, who qualify as inhabitants of the Virgin Islands, as defined in section 28(a) of the Revised Organic Act of the Virgin Islands (for example, a permanent resident), are required to satisfy their income tax obligations to the United States by filing their returns with, and paying tax on income derived from all sources, both within and without the Virgin Islands, into the treasury of the Virgin Islands. Rev. Rul. 60-291, 1960-2 C.B. 407.

While section 1491 of the Code may impose an excise tax on the transfer of appreciated property by a United States citizen to a foreign trust, it is part of the income tax laws of the United States within the meaning of the Naval Appropriations Act of 1921, since it is part of Chapter 5 of Subtitle A of the Code, which is entitled "Income Taxes," and it was specifically enacted as a tax on transfers to avoid income tax. See H. Rep. No. 708, 72nd Cong., 1st Sess. 51 (1932); S. Rep. No. 665, 72nd Cong., 1st Sess. 56 (1932). Thus, it is part of the Virgin Islands tax code. A transfer of appreciated property by a United States citizen, who is a permanent resident of the Virgin Islands, to a Virgin Islands trust is a domestic transaction that is not subject to section 1491 of the Virgin Islands code.

HOLDING

Section 1491 of the Code is part of the "income tax laws" of the United States within the meaning of the Naval Appropriations Act of 1921, and thus part of the Virgin Islands tax code. A satisfies all United States income tax obligations by filing a return with, and paying the taxes due into, the treasury of the Virgin Islands, in accordance with the Revised Organic Act of the Virgin Islands. Therefore, section 1491 of the Code does not apply to A's transfer of appreciated Virgin Islands real estate and stocks and securities in domestic corporations to A's revocable Virgin Islands trust. Further, section 1491 of the Virgin Islands code does not apply to A's transfer since it is a domestic transaction for Virgin Islands purposes.

The amount includible in the individual's gross estate is the sales price of the property less the "points" assumed by the seller, and the "points" are not deductible under section 2053(a)(3) or (a)(4) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-319

ISSUE

Under section 2031(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, should the contract sales price of a decedent's residence be reduced by the points that the decedent agreed to pay a mortgage lender under a contract of sale executed prior to the decedent's death?

FACTS

On June 1, 1977, the decedent, D, entered into an arm's length written sales agreement with A. Pursuant to the agreement, D's residence was to be conveyed to A within 90 days for 80*x* dollars. A was to pay 20*x* dollars as a down payment. In addition, A was to obtain a home mortgage loan of 60*x* dollars.

With respect to the fee payable in connection with the acquisition of the mortgage (normally measured as a percentage of the face amount of the mortgage, each one percent being referred to as a "point"), the contract stated that A was to pay one point. Any additional amount, not exceeding five points, was to be borne by D. D and A agreed that the points assumed by D would be deducted from the proceeds that would be paid to D. A secured a loan commitment providing for the payment of six points.

D died on June 20, 1977. After D's death, the executor completed the sale to A according to the terms of the agreement. The cost of the points assumed by D was 3*x* dollars. Consequently, the amount received by the executor upon the sale of the property was 77*x* dollars.

Under applicable local law, ownership of real property is regarded as vested in the seller at the time of death if the seller died after executing a contract of sale but before actual conveyance of the property. Local law also provides that, unless and until the contract of sale is consummated, the seller is not obliged to pay the points. When the contract is consummated, the points are merely an offset to the consideration. Therefore, the seller is never personally obligated to pay the points.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2031(a) of the Code provides generally that the value of a decedent's gross estate shall be determined by including the value, at the time of death, of all property, real or personal, tangible or intangible, wherever situated. In computing the value of the taxable estate, section 2053(a)(3) and (a)(4) allows as deductions from the value of the decedent's gross estate amounts for claims against the estate and mortgages and indebtednesses in respect of property, subject to certain limitations.

The value of property includible in the gross estate is the fair market value at the time of the decedent's death. Generally, the fair market value of the decedent's property can be established by a sale of the property around the date of the decedent's death if the consideration for the property was arrived at by arm's length negotiations. See, for example, Estate of Ballas v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1975-103.

In the present situation, the interest includible in D's gross estate is the real property because D was regarded as the owner of the property under local law. Inasmuch as D and A negotiated the sale of the residence in an arm's length transaction immediately before the date of D's death, the value agreed upon by D and A is regarded as the fair market value of the property.

For purposes of the federal income tax, points paid by a seller of a residence as a condition to the acquisition of a mortgage loan by the buyer of the residence reduce the amount realized by the seller. See Rev. Rul. 68-650, 1968-2 C.B. 78. This principle is applicable in determining the fair market value of a decedent's residence for purposes of section 2031(a) of the Code. Consequently, if a contract of sale negotiated by the decedent is regarded as establishing the value of the residence and the decedent, as seller, agreed or local law provides that the points assumed by the decedent would be an offset to the sale price, the fair market value of the residence is computed by reducing the sale price by the cost of the points.

Because the points offset the amount actually received in exchange for the property pursuant to a contract entered into by the decedent prior to the decedent's death and neither the decedent nor the property would be liable for the payment of such points, the amount of these points is not deductible under section 2053(a)(3) or (a)(4) of the Code.

HOLDING

The amount includible under section 2031(a) of the Code with regard to D's residence is 77*x* dollars, and no deduction is allowable under section 2053 (a)(3) or (a)(4) with regard to the points.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER D, PART 48.—MANUFACTURERS AND RETAILERS EXCISE TAXES

Excise tax on coal

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the excise tax on coal. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Black Lung Benefits Revenue Act of 1977 [Pub. L. 95-227, 1978-1 C.B. 494]. The regulations provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with the Act and affect all producers who mine or reclaim coal in the United States.

DATE: The regulations are effective for coal sold or used by the producer in other than a mining process after March 31, 1978.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On August 27, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 48) under section 4121 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (44 FR 50065). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 2 of the Black Lung Benefits Revenue Act of 1977 (Pub. L. 95-227; 92 Stat. 11) [supra]. A public hearing was held on January 10, 1980. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

SUMMARY OF
FINAL REGULATIONS

Under section 4121 of the Code, an excise tax is imposed on the sale or use of coal by the producer. The proposed regulation defined the term "producer" as the person who owns the coal immediately after extraction from the mine. One commentator disagreed with this approach and requested that the Treasury adopt a rule apportioning the excise tax between the royalty owner and the operator of the mine. The requested change has not been made regarding the definition of the term "producer" because the tax imposed under section 4121 is on the first sale of coal by the producer. However, the definition of the term "producer" has been expanded to include any person who extracts coal from coal waste refuse piles. Several examples have been added to illustrate the application of the definition of the term "producer."

Several comments were received criticizing the method used in determining the existence of lignite. The proposed regulation defined lignite in accordance with the standard specification for the classification of coals by rank of the American Society for Testing and Materials (Annual Book of ASTM Standards, Part 26, D 388). The criticism was based on the high cost involved and the inaccurate results that may be obtained. Despite these criticisms the legislative history is clear that the ASTM classification is to be used. Therefore, the regulation has not been revised as it relates to the definition of lignite.

Paragraph (c) of § 48.4121-1 of the proposed regulations has been revised to clarify two other issues raised at both the public hearing and in the written comments. The first issue clarified is that silt waste is not subject to the excise tax on coal. The second issue is that in determining whether all or a portion of a particular mine contains lignite, all the facts and circumstances will be considered. For example, the Service will examine the contract price, contract specifications and will also determine whether lignite is commonly found in the area. Furthermore, to claim the exemption, the producer must maintain records which clearly identify the portion of the mineral from the mine that is lignite.

The final issue raised at the hearing and in the comments was the inequity that arises when the small mining company sells raw coal to a cleaning plant and must pay the tax based upon the uncleaned weight. After carefully considering this problem, the proposed regulation has not been revised because under section 4121, the tax is imposed on the first sale of coal, not upon the first sale after the coal has been cleaned.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Robert H. Waltuch of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Parts 48 and 139 are amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. § 48.4121-1 is added to read as set forth below.

§ 48.4121-1 Imposition and rate of tax on coal.

(a) Imposition of tax.—(1) In general. Section 4121(a) imposes a tax on coal mined at any time in this country if the coal is sold or used by the producer after March 31, 1978 (see section 4218 and the regulations under that section for rules relating to the use of coal being treated as a sale of coal). For purposes of this section, the term "producer" means the person in whom is vested ownership of the coal under state law immediately after the coal is severed from the ground, without regard to the existence of any contractual arrangement for the sale or other disposition of the coal or the payment of any royalties between the producer and third parties. The term includes any person who extracts coal from coal waste refuse piles or from the silt waste product which results from the wet washing (or similar processing) of coal. However, the excise tax does not apply to a producer who sells the silt waste product without extracting the coal from it, or to the producer who uses the silt waste product without extracting the coal from it. Furthermore, the excise tax does not apply to the sale or use of the silt waste product after any coal has been extracted from it.

(2) Examples. Paragraph (a)(1) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, a limited partnership, is the owner of land on which a coal mine is located. A contracts with XYZ Company to extract the coal for a set price per ton. XYZ Company is an independent contractor and has no ownership interest in the coal mined. Under state law, A is the owner of the coal immediately after severance. After XYZ extracts the coal from the mine, A sells the coal. A is the producer of the coal and is responsible for the payment of the excise tax.

Example (2). A, a limited partnership, is the owner of land on which a coal mine is located. A leases the land to XYZ Company, and XYZ Company extracts coal from the mine and sells it. Under state law, XYZ is the owner of the coal immediately after the coal is severed from the ground. XYZ Company is the producer and must pay the excise tax. This is true even though the lease agreement requires XYZ to pay a royalty to A.

Example (3). XYZ Company purchases a coal waste refuse pile from B and extracts the coal from the waste refuse pile and sells the coal. XYZ is the producer and must pay the excise tax.

Example (4). XYZ Company is a producer of coal and operates its own cleaning plant. After wet washing the coal, it sells the coal and the silt waste product. The sale of the coal is subject to the excise tax whereas the sale of the silt is not.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (4) except that before selling the silt waste product XYZ Company extracts a small quantity of finely sized coal from the silt waste product and then sells both the finely sized coal and the silt waste product. The sale of the finely sized coal is subject to the excise tax whereas the sale of the silt is not.

(b) Rate of tax.—(1) Underground mines; surface mines. The rate of tax imposed on coal from underground mines located in the United States is the lower of 50 cents per ton (2,000 pounds), or 2 percent of the sale price. The rate of tax imposed on coal from surface mines located in the United States is the lower of 25 cents per ton (2,000 pounds) or 2 percent of the sale price. If a sale or use includes a portion of a ton, the tax is applied proportionately. Thus, if 1,200 pounds of coal from an underground mine are sold for $35.00, the tax is 30 cents.

(2) Combination. If a single mine yields coal from both surface and underground mining, the producer must determine the rate (50 cents or 25 cents per ton) for each ton of coal mined. It is presumed that coal is mined from underground mines (50 cents per ton) unless the producer keeps sufficient records to establish to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the coal was mined from a surface mine.

(c) Exemptions.—(1) Lignite or imported coal. The excise tax on coal does not apply to lignite or imported coal. Lignite is defined in accordance with the standard specification for classification of coals by rank of the American Society for Testing and Materials (Annual Book of ASTM Standards, Part 26, D 388). The procedures specified in D 388 must be followed. If a producer extracts both taxable coal and lignite, then the producer must maintain adequate records to establish the portion of the mineral mined that is exempt from the tax. In determining whether all or a portion of the mineral extracted is lignite, the Service will consider all the facts and circumstances. For example, if a producer sells lignite and coal, the Service will examine all the facts and circumstances, including the contract price, contract specifications, and the amount of lignite extracted as it compares to the amount of lignite sold.

(2) Other exemptions not applicable. There are no exemptions for sales for further manufacture, for export, for use as supplies for vessels or aircraft, for the use of a State or local government, or for the use of a nonprofit educational organization. Furthermore, the Secretary does not have discretion to exempt sales of coal for use of the United States from the tax. There is also no exemption from the coal excise tax when the coal is used in further manufacture of another article that is subject to manufacturers excise tax. For example, if a producer of coal converts coal into gasoline which the producer then sells, the producer is liable for the coal excise tax when the coal is converted into gasoline and also liable for the manufacturers excise tax on gasoline when the gasoline is sold.

(d) Definitions and special rules.—(1) Coal produced from surface mine. Coal is treated as produced from a surface mine if all of the geological matter (e.g. trees, earth, rock) above the coal is removed before the coal is mined. In addition, both coal mined by auger and coal that is reclaimed from coal waste refuse piles are treated as produced from a surface mine.

(2) Coal produced from underground mine. Coal is treated as produced from an underground mine if it is not produced from a surface mine.

(3) Coal used by the producer. For purposes of this section, the term "coal used by the producer" means use by the producer in other than a mining process. A mining process is determined the same way it is determined for percentage depletion purposes. For example, a producer who mines coal does not "use" the coal and thereby becomes liable for the tax merely because, before selling the coal, the producer breaks it, cleans it, sizes it, or applies one of the other processes listed in section 613(c)(4)(A) of the Code. In such a case, the producer will be liable for the tax only when he sells the coal. On the other hand, a producer who mines coal does become liable for the tax when he uses the coal as fuel, as an ingredient in making coke, or in another process not treated as "mining" under section 613(c).

(4) Tonnage sold and sales price. For purposes of determining both the amount of coal sold by a producer and the sales price of the coal, the point of sale is f.o.b. mine, or f.o.b. cleaning point if the producer cleans the coal before selling it. This is true even if the producer sells the coal on the basis of a delivered price. Accordingly, f.o.b. mine or cleaning point is the point at which the number of tons sold is to be determined for purposes of applying the applicable tonnage rate, and the point at which the sales price is to be determined for purposes of the tax under the 2 percent rate.

(5) Constructive sale price. If a producer uses coal mined by the producer in other than a mining process, a constructive sale price must be used in determining the tax under the 2 percent rate. This constructive price is determined under sections 613(c) and 4218(e) of the Code, and is based on sales of like kind and grade of coal by the producer or other producers made f.o.b. mine (if the coal is used without first being cleaned) or f.o.b. cleaning plant (if the coal is cleaned before it is used). Normally, this constructive price will be the same as the constructive price used in determining the producer's percentage depletion deduction.

(e) Due date of tax returns; payment of tax, and tax deposits. For information relating to the due date of tax returns and the time and place for the payment of the tax see § 48.6011(a)-1, § 48.6151-1 and § 48.6071(a)-1 of the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations. The return form is Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return. For information relating to tax deposits, see § 48.6302(c)-1 of the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations and Form 720 (Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return) and the accompanying instructions.

Par. 2. Section 139.4121-1 is revoked.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On March 24, 1980, the Federal Register published proposed regulations relating to disclosure of return information to and by the Bureaus of the Census and Economic Analysis of the Department of Commerce for certain statistical purposes under section 6103(j)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. A public hearing was requested, but the request was withdrawn. After considering the two comments received, those proposed regulations are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

These regulations provide rules governing disclosures of return information to certain officers and employees of the Department of Commerce for statistical purposes and related activities authorized by section 6103(j)(1) of the Code.

The regulations describe in detail the particular return information which the Service will disclose to officers and employees of the Bureaus of the Census and Economic Analysis for use in statistical programs and related activities authorized by law. The regulations also prescribe the procedures to be followed with respect to requested disclosures of return information and the limited extent to which such return information can be redisclosed and provide that the confidentiality of return information disclosed as provided by the regulations must be protected to the satisfaction of the Service.

Two comments were received with respect to the proposed regulations. One objected on principle to the disclosure of any return information to the Bureaus of the Census and Economic Analysis. This objection fails to recognize that section 6103(j)(1) of the Code specifically authorizes such disclosures.

The second comment came from the Bureau of the Census and relates to a technical flaw in the proposed regulations. Prior to February 21, 1980, the temporary disclosure regulations authorized the disclosure of return information to the Bureau for purposes of conducting statistical programs "authorized by law." This authority permitted Bureau access to return information for both mandated statistical programs described in chapter 5 of Title 13, United States Code, and discretionary statistical programs conducted by the Bureau at the request of other agencies and persons under the authority of chapter 1 of Title 13. On February 21, 1980, however, the temporary regulations were amended to restrict Bureau use of return information to mandated statistical programs under chapter 5. At the time of this amendment, the fact was overlooked that the Bureau was in the process of conducting an important chapter 1 study requested by another Federal agency and was using employment tax data for this purpose. The effect of the amendment was to deny the Bureau further access to employment tax data to complete the study.

Because the Bureau undertook this chapter 1 study in reliance on regulatory authority in existence at the time, these final regulations effectively permit the Bureau to continue using employment tax data in order to complete its chapter 1 study. See § 301.6103 (j)(1)-1(b)(5).

Finally, these final regulations make minor technical amendments to § 301.6103(j)(1)-1(b)(3)(ii) and (iii), as proposed, to authorize disclosure of a consolidated return indicator and to conform the description of return information to be disclosed to business related information readily available from Form 1040, Schedule F.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations was David E. Dickinson of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to the regulations are hereby adopted:

REGULATIONS ON PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION (26 CFR PART 301)

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Business or Rental Use of Dwellings

Announcement 80-151 [1]

The provisions of the Internal Revenue Code will continue to govern the extent to which taxpayers may claim deductions for the business or rental use of dwellings.

On October 1, 1980, Congressional Joint Resolution 610, involving continuing appropriations for various departments of the Federal Government for the fiscal year 1981, became law. Section 123 of that Joint Resolution provides that:

"No funds appropriated by this Act may be used to implement or enforce provisions of any regulation or ruling with respect to section 280A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 which relate to—

(1) the rental of a dwelling unit to a member of the family of a taxpayer,

(2) the determination of the principal place of business of the taxpayer, or

(3) the circumstances under which use of the dwelling unit for repairs and maintenance constitutes personal use by the taxpayer."

Because this section prohibits implementing or enforcing any regulation or ruling in the described areas, existing Internal Revenue Code section 280A will govern the items referred to in the Joint Resolution. Therefore, taxpayers may claim deductions relating to these items to the extent they are permitted under the provisions of the Code.

In determining whether the rental of a dwelling unit to a member of the family of the taxpayer constitutes personal use for purposes of section 280A of the Code, subsection (d) (2) of that section provides:

". . . the taxpayer shall be deemed to have used a dwelling unit for personal purposes for a day if, for any part of such day, the unit is used—

(A) for personal purposes by the taxpayer or any other person who has an interest in such unit, or by any member of the family (as defined in section 267(c) (4)) of the taxpayer or such other person;"

Section 267(c) (4) provides,

"The family of an individual shall include only his brothers and sisters, (whether by the whole or half blood), spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants;"

Section 280A(d) concerning use of a dwelling unit for repairs and maintenance provides,

"The Secretary shall prescribe regulations with respect to the circumstances under which use of the unit for repairs and annual maintenance will not constitute personal use under this paragraph." (emphasis supplied)

Section 280A(c) (1) (A) provides no definition of "the taxpayer's principal place of business" in determining whether deductions may be claimed.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Announcement Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issue or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the tax court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

Rev. Rul. 80-321 [1]

ISSUE

What are the federal tax consequences to both an employer and an employee where the employee's "lifetime services" are assigned to a trust in the circumstances described below?

FACTS

In March, 1980, the taxpayer, a U.S. citizen, was approached by the promoter of a trust arrangement under which an assignment of the taxpayer's "lifetime services" would be made to the trust. Shortly thereafter, the taxpayer paid the promoter a fee and entered into the trust arrangement.

Prior to the assignment of the taxpayer's lifetime services to the trust, the taxpayer was employed in the United States by the M corporation, a domestic corporation. M treated the taxpayer's salary as wages subject to withholding of federal income tax and FICA taxes (imposed by the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, chapter 21, subtitle C, Internal Revenue Code). M corporation also made direct payments of the FICA tax on employers due because of the taxpayer's employment. After the assignment to the trust, the promoter, as trustee of the trust, and M corporation entered into a "services contract" requiring the trust to provide services to M corporation for a monthly fee equal to what would otherwise be the taxpayer's gross monthly salary. As a result, instead of paying salary to the taxpayer, M corporation made monthly payments under the "services contract" without withholding federal income tax or FICA tax from the payments. M also discontinued its payments of the employer's FICA tax due because of the taxpayer's employment.

The trust, after the subtraction of the trustee's fees, paid the income to the taxpayer and to other persons or accumulated it.

The taxpayer continued to perform the same tasks for the M corporation, under the same conditions, with the same amount of control, as before the assignment of "lifetime services" was made.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the term "gross income" includes, among other things, compensation for services.

Under section 3401 of the Code, the term "wages" means, with certain exceptions not relevant to this case, all remuneration "for services performed by an employee for his employer," and the term "employer" means the person for whom an individual performed any service as the employee of such person. Section 3402(a) imposes a general requirement that every employer making payment of wages shall deduct and withhold federal income tax from the wages.

Section 3101 of the Code imposes FICA tax on an individual on wages received with respect to employment. Section 3102 provides for deducting such tax from the wages of the employee. Section 3111 imposes FICA tax on an employer on wages paid with respect to employment.

Section 3121(a) of the Code provides that for purposes of the FICA taxes the term "wages" means all remuneration for employment with certain exceptions not relevant in this case. Section 3121(b) provides that for purposes of the FICA taxes the term "employment" means any service of whatever nature performed by an employee for a person employing such employee.

Section 31.3121(d)-1 (relating to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act) and section 31.3401(c)-1 (relating to collection of income tax at source on wages) of the Employment Tax Regulations provide that, generally, the relationship of employer and employee exists when the person for whom the services are performed has the right to control and direct the individual who performs the services not only as to the result to be accomplished by the work, but also as to the detail and means by which the result is accomplished.

Rev. Rul. 75-257, 1975-2 C.B. 251, deals with a "family estate trust," to which a taxpayer assigned "lifetime services." The revenue ruling concludes that the attempt to assign "lifetime services" to a trust is inffective as a means of avoiding the taxpayer's personal income tax liability on income the taxpayer has earned. Similar conclusions were reached in Vnuk v. Commissioner, Civil No. 79-1925 (8th Cir., July 11, 1980), aff'g T.C.M. 1979-164; Wesenberg v. Commissioner, 69 T.C. 1005 (1978); Morgan v. Commissioner, T.C.M. 1978-401; and Horvat v. Commissioner, T.C.M. 1977-104, aff'd 582 F.2d 1282 (7th Cir. 1978), cert. denied 440 U.S. 959 (1979). The conclusion of Rev. Rul. 75-257 is equally applicable to the facts of this case.

The payments made by M after the taxpayer attempted the assignment of "lifetime services" were wages. M did not lose its status as employer by virtue of the contract requiring direct payments to the trust. Accordingly, the wages paid with respect to the taxpayer's services in the form of the lifetime services fee are subject to income tax withholding requirements and FICA taxes to the same extent as the wages paid directly to the taxpayer before the taxpayer entered into the contract.

HOLDINGS

(1) The taxpayer's assignment of "lifetime services" is ineffective as a means of avoiding the taxpayer's income tax liability with respect to payments made by M in connection with the taxpayer's services.

(2) The payments by M under the lifetime services contract are wages for the purposes of federal income tax withholding requirements and FICA taxes. M has failed properly to withhold such taxes with respect to the taxpayer's employment. M has also failed properly to pay the employer's FICA tax.

The holdings of this revenue ruling are equally applicable when the lifetime services are assigned to a foreign trust.

Section 83.—Property Transferred in Connection with Performance of Services

26 CFR 1.83-1: Property transferred in connection with the performance of services.
(Also Sections 61, 162; 1.61-1, 1.162-7.)

Suits leased for corporate executives. A corporation leases custom-tailored suits for its executives for a two-year period and, at the end of the lease term, returns the suits to the lessor, who sells them for a nominal amount. The corporation is charged a rental fee and a consulting fee, which together equal the normal purchase price of the suits. The fair market value of the suits is includible in the executives' gross incomes, and the corporation may deduct the entire amount paid to lease the suits.

Rev. Rul. 80-322 [1]

ISSUE

What are the federal income tax consequences to a corporation and its executives when the corporation "leases" suits for its executives, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

Corporation X offers to "lease" business suits for use by executives of its corporate customers. Forty percent of the cost to a customer will be billed as consulting fees for X's advice on the appropriate number and style of suits and which executives should receive suits. X represents that the customer can deduct the consulting fee as a business expense in the year it is paid. A customer cannot "lease" suits from X without obtaining the consulting services.

The "leases" are for a two-year period, and at the end of the lease term the suits will be returned to X, who will sell them for a nominal amount. In April 1980 Corporation Y "leases" from X ten suits, five of which are to be custom tailored for A, an executive of Y. Upon the execution of the agreement, Y pays X $50x$ dollars (the full amount called for by the contract), of which $20x$ dollars is billed as a consulting fee for the advice given by X and $30x$ dollars is billed as the rental for the suits. Each suit is appropriate for ordinary wear and could be purchased for approximately $5x$ dollars. Y and A are calendar-year taxpayers.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code defines gross income as income from whatever source derived, except as otherwise provided.

Section 83(a) of the Code provides that when property is transferred to a person in connection with the performance of services, the person who performed the services must include in gross income the excess of (1) the fair market value of the property at the time the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in the property are transferable or not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, over (2) any amount paid for the property. The taxable year of inclusion is generally the first taxable year in which the rights of the person receiving the property are transferable or not subject to a substantial risk for forfeiture.

Section 83(h) of the Code provides that, in the case of a transfer of property, a deduction is allowed under section 162 to the person for whom the services were performed. Section 1.83-6(a)(1) of the regulations provides that the amount of the deduction is equal to the amount includible as compensation in the gross income of the person who performed the services, but only to the extent the amount meets the requirements of section 162 and the regulations thereunder.

Section 162(a)(1) of the Code provides in general that there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered.

Y purportedly leased the suits from X. Whether an agreement is a lease or a sale depends upon the intent of the parties as evidenced by the provisions of the agreement, read in light of the facts and circumstances existing at the time the agreement was executed. See Rev. Rul. 55-540, 1955-2 C.B. 39. The fact that the suits were custom tailored for particular individuals and have little value at the end of the "lease term" establishes that Y has for federal income tax purposes purchased, rather than leased, the suits.

The advice provided by X as part of the arrangement consisted of services that are typically provided, at no additional cost, to customers by tailors and other sales representatives in the course of selling suits. The amount designated as consulting fees is properly treated as part of the purchase price of the suits, so that the cost of the ten suits is the total amount paid by Y to X.

[1] Also released as News Release IR-80-114, dated October 30, 1980.

An amount paid by an employer to an employee for reimbursement of the employee's cost of acquiring uniforms is includible in the employee's gross income under section 61 of the Code. See Rev. Rul. 72-110, 1972-1 C.B. 24. Similarly, an amount paid by an employer to an employee to defray the cost of a wardrobe is includible in the employee's gross income. See Rev. Rul. 68-20, 1968-1 C.B. 55.

Because Y has provided additional compensation to its executives by furnishing suits to them, they must include in gross income, under section 83(a) of the Code, the fair market value of the suits. The fair market value is equal to the purchase price. One-half the purchase price, or 25*x* dollars, is attributable to the suits provided to A. Pursuant to section 83(h), Y may deduct the total amount paid to X as a business expense under section 162(a)(1).

The cost of acquisition and maintenance of clothing is deductible by an employee as a business expense under section 162 of the Code only if the clothing is specifically required as a condition of employment and is not a type adaptable to general or continued usage. See Rev. Rul. 70-474, 1970-2 C.B. 34. Thus, because the business suits are appropriate for ordinary wear, the executive may not deduct the fair market value of the suits as a business expense.

HOLDINGS

1. Under section 83(a) of the Code, A must include in gross income for 1980 the fair market value of the suits provided to A in the amount of 25*x* dollars. A may not deduct this amount as a business expense under section 162.

2. Under section 162(a)(1) of the Code, Y may deduct in 1980 the total amount paid to X for the suits provided to Y's executives.

Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses

26 CFR 1.162-7: Compensation for personal services.

The federal income tax consequences to a corporation and its executives when the corporation "leases" suits for its executives. See Rev. Rul. 80-322, page 7.

Section 165.—Losses

26 CFR 1.165-1: Losses.

Whether an investment prospectus, cancelled checks, and confirmation statements are sufficient to substantiate a loss deduction claimed by the taxpayer under the circumstances described. See Rev. Rul. 80-324, page 20.

Section 351.—Transfer to Corporation Controlled by Transferor

26 CFR 1.351-1: Transfer to corporation controlled by transferor.

Whether a limited partnership interest that is transferred in a section 351 exchange is transferred subject to its share of partnership liabilities for purposes of sections 357(c) and 358(d) of the Code. See Rev. Rul. 80-323, this page.

Section 357.—Assumption of Liability

26 CFR 1.357-2: Liabilities in excess of basis.
(Also Sections 351, 358, 741, 751, 752; 1.351-1, 1.358-1, 1.741-1, 1.751-1, 1.752-1.)

Transfer to controlled corporation; limited partnership interest; partnership liabilities. A limited partnership interest that is transferred in a transaction qualifying under section 351 of the Code is transferred subject to its share of partnership liabilities for purposes of sections 357(c) and 358(d). The transferor recognizes gain to the extent that the transferor's share of partnership liabilities exceeds the adjusted basis of the interest transferred.

Rev. Rul. 80-323 [1]

ISSUE

Is a limited partnership interest that is transferred in a section 351 exchange transferred subject to its share of partnership liabilities for purposes of sections 357(c) and 358(d) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

P, a widely held corporation, is engaged directly and through S, its wholly owned subsidiary, in the business of acquiring film rights and exhibiting motion pictures. S is the general partner in a limited partnership also engaged in acquiring film rights and exhibiting motion pictures. The limited partnership was formed and began business activities in 1971. In its operation, the limited partnership has incurred bona fide indebtedness. At all times since the inception of the limited partnership, the fair market value of its assets has exceeded the sum of its liabilities. In many instances, however, the share of nonrecourse partnership liabilities allocated to a limited partner exceeds the limited partner's adjusted basis of the partnership interest.

For valid business reasons, an offer was made to the limited partners to transfer their partnership interests to Newco, a corporation to be organized for the purpose of the offer, in exchange for Newco stock. Limited partners holding, in total, a 35 percent interest in the partnership's capital and profits accepted the offer. No Newco stock other than the shares to be issued pursuant to the offer will be issued. The proposed transaction will qualify as a transfer of property to a controlled corporation within the meaning of section 351 of the Code.

The principal production of motion picture property owned by the partnership began before September 11, 1975.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 741 of the Code provides that in the case of a sale or exchange of an interest in a partnership gain or loss will be recognized to the transferor partner. However, section 1.741-1(c) of the Income Tax Regulations refers to section 351 for nonrecognition of gain or loss upon the transfer of a partnership interest to a corporation controlled by the transferor.

[1] Also released as News Release IR-80-114, dated October 30, 1980.

Section 351(a) of the Code provides that no gain or loss will be recognized if property is transferred to a corporation solely in exchange for its stock and immediately after the exchange the transferor or transferors are in control of the corporation. Under section 357(c), if the sum of the amount of liabilities assumed by the corporation and the amount of liabilities to which the property is subject exceeds the transferor's total adjusted basis of the property transferred, then the excess will be considered as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset or of property that is not a capital asset, as the case may be.

Section 1.752-1(e) of the regulations provides that where none of the partners has any personal liability with respect to a partnership liability (as in the case of a mortgage on real estate acquired by the partnership without the assumption by the partnership or any of the partners of any liability on the mortgage), then all partners, including limited partners, shall be considered as sharing such liability under section 752(c) of the Code in the same proportion as they share the profits.

Section 1.752-1(d) of the regulations provides that where there is a sale or exchange of an interest in a partnership, liabilities shall be treated in the same manner as liabilities in connection with the sale or exchange of property not associated with partnerships. For example, if a partner sells his interest in a partnership for $750 cash and at the same time transfers to the purchaser his share of partnership liabilities amounting to $250, the amount realized by the seller on the transaction is $1,000.

Each transferring limited partner's share of partnership nonrecourse liabilities shall be considered as a liability to which the partnership interest is subject for purposes of section 357(c). Consequently, each such limited partner will recognize gain as provided in section 357(c) of the Code to the extent that the partner's share of nonrecourse partnership liabilities exceeds the adjusted basis of the interest transferred. That gain will be ordinary or capital pursuant to the application of sections 741 and 751.

As provided in section 358(d) of the Code, the amount of the liabilities to which each transferred partnership interest is subject will be treated as money received by the transferor partner on the exchange, and, therefore, pursuant to section 358(a)(1), the basis in the Newco stock received will be the same as the basis of the partnership interest exchanged therefor, decreased by the share of the partnership liabilities allocated to the partnership interest and increased by the gain recognized, if any.

HOLDING

Each partnership interest exchanged for Newco stock will be transferred subject to its share of partnership liabilities, and gain will be recognized to the extent that each partner's share of partnership liabilities exceeds the adjusted basis of the interest transferred.

The holding in this ruling does not preclude the application of section 357(b) of the Code, if warranted.

Section 1034.—Rollover of Gain on Sale of Principal Residence

26 CFR 1.1034-1: Sale or exchange of residence.

Residence; replacement period; suspension of running of time; Puerto Rico. An individual who is transferred to Puerto Rico for a two-year period does not qualify under section 1034(k) of the Code for the suspension of the running of the period of time within which a new residence must be purchased in order for the nonrecognition of gain provisions to apply to the gain from the sale of the individual's old residence.

Rev. Rul. 80-326

ISSUE

Does a taxpayer, under the circumstances described below, qualify under section 1034(k) of the Internal Revenue Code for the suspension of the running of the period of time within which a new residence must be purchased in order for the nonrecognition provisions of section 1034(a) to apply to the gain realized from the sale of an old residence?

FACTS

The taxpayer, a civilian employee of the federal government, was transferred to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico for a two-year tour of duty. Prior to the transfer, the taxpayer sold the taxpayer's principal residence and realized a gain from the transaction. The taxpayer proposes to apply the nonrecognition provisions of section 1034(a) of the Code to the gain realized from the sale of the principal residence since the taxpayer plans to purchase a replacement residence at a cost in excess of the adjusted sales price of the old residence within 18 months after the completion of the taxpayer's tour of duty in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1034(a) of the Code provides that if property ("old residence") used by the taxpayer as a principal residence is sold by the taxpayer and, within a period beginning 18 months before the date of such sale and ending 18 months after such date, property ("new residence") is purchased and used by the taxpayer as a principal residence, gain (if any) from such sale shall be recognized only to the extent that the taxpayer's adjusted sales price (as defined in section 1034(b)) of the old residence exceeds the taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence.

Section 1034(k) of the Code provides that the running of any period of time specified in section 1034(a) shall be suspended during any time that the taxpayer (or the taxpayer's spouse if the old residence and the new residence are each used by the taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse as their principal residence) has a tax home (as defined in section 913(j)(1)(B)) outside the United States after the date of the sale of the old residence; except that any such period of time as so suspended shall not extend beyond the date four years after the date of the sale of the old residence.

Section 913(j)(1)(B) of the Code provides that an individual shall not be treated as having a tax home in a foreign country for any period for which the taxpayer's abode is within the United States.

Section 913(j)(1)(E) of the Code provides that the term "United States," when used in a geographical sense, includes possessions of the United States.

Section 5b.913-3(d) of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations provides that the term "foreign country" means any territory under the sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States. It does not include a possession or territory of the United States.

For purposes of section 1034(k) of the Code the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico is treated as a possession or territory of the United States. Thus, an individual residing in Puerto Rico is not considered to have a tax home outside the United States within the meaning of that section. See section 7701(c), which provides that for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code the term "possession of the United States" generally includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and Rev. Rul. 78-23, 1978-1 C.B. 79, which holds that for purposes of section 274(h), relating to deductions of an individual for attending foreign conventions, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico is treated as a possession of the United States.

HOLDING

The taxpayer does not qualify under section 1034(k) of the Code for the suspension of the running of the period of time within which a new residence must be purchased in order for the nonrecognition provisions of section 1034(a) to apply to the gain realized from the sale of the taxpayer's old residence.

26 CFR 31.3402(a)-1: Requirement of withholding.

Section 4042.—Tax on Fuel Used in Commercial Transportation on Inland Waterways

26 CFR 48.4042-1: Tax on fuel used in commercial waterway transportation.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER D, PART 48.—MANUFACTURERS AND RETAILERS EXCISE TAXES

Excise tax on fuel used in commercial waterway transportation

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final rulemaking.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the new excise tax on the use of fuel in commercial waterway transportation. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by section 202 of the Inland Waterways Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-502, 1978-2 C.B. 393]. The regulations affect all operators of commercial vessels used on certain inland and intracoastal waterways.

EFFECTIVE DATE: These regulations apply to fuel consumed after September 30, 1980.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

Section 202 of the Inland Waterways Revenue Act of 1978 (the "Act"), Pub. L. 95-502, 92 Stat. 1996, imposes an excise tax on the use of liquid fuel in commercial waterway transportation. It taxes only fuel used by certain types of commercial vessels along particular inland and intracoastal waterways.

On June 9, 1980, the Federal Register published a proposed amendment to the Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR 48) under section 4042 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (Code) (45 FR 38411). The amendment was proposed to conform the regulations to the amendment of the Code made by the Act. A correction to the initially published proposal was published on July 29, 1980 (45 FR 50368). A public hearing on the proposed regulations was held on September 25, 1980. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendment, final regulations are adopted by this Treasury decision.

These regulations meet the Treasury criteria for significant regulations.

SUMMARY OF COMMENTS AND SUBSTANTIVE REVISIONS

Twenty-two organizations submitted comments in response to the invitation in the notice. Several organizations objected to implementation of the Act on constitutional grounds, claiming the Act conflicts with the tax uniformity clause, the ports preference clause, and the due process clause. See generally U.S. CONST. art. 1, § 8, cl. 1; U.S. CONST. art. 1, § 9, cl. 6; U.S. CONST. amend. V.

Several commentators expressed concern that the statement regarding the general purpose of the fuel tax, contained in the supplementary information to the proposal, might be misapplied. They were concerned that the statement could be construed to impose a restriction on the ultimate uses of the tax collected, a result which was not intended. The statement was not substantive. As a result of the comments, it has been deleted from the supplementary information to these final regulations.

The tax only applies to vessels used in commercial transportation. Several commentators requested clarification of whether commercial transportation vessels will be subject to the tax while fleeting barges into a single tow and while used to dislodge a tow grounded on a sandbar. The final regulations clarify that they are. See § 48.4042-1 (f)(1). Congress intended to tax fuel consumed in vessels used for commercial waterway transportation, but not to limit the tax to fuel consumed by vessels while actually transporting property. Vessel operators seeking a ruling as to whether other uses of vessels constitute commercial waterway transportation, within the meaning of § 48.4042-1(f)(1), should consult Rev. Proc. 80-20, 1980-26 I.R.B. 7.

Only fuel used on waterways specified in section 206 of the Act [Pub. L. 95-502, 1978-2 C.B. 393, 394] is taxable. Several comments pointed out ambiguities in the descriptions of three of the specified waterways; namely, the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway, the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway, and the Illinois Waterway. Those descriptions are clarified by the final regulations to better apprise operators of where fuel consumption is taxable. See § 48.4042-1(g)(6), (g)(11), and (g)(12).

By imposing a tax on the use of liquid fuel, Congress intended to impose a tax similar to a preexisting tax on liquid fuel used in motor vehicles (Code section 4041), which had been interpreted to apply only to propulsion fuels. Accordingly, § 48.4042-2(a)(1), as proposed, provided that only fuel used in the propulsion system of the vessel is taxed. That section has been modified in response to several requests to define what constitutes a propulsion system. The final regulations clarify that a propulsion system means any engine generating movement of a vessel, including bow thrusters used for steering.

Several commentators expressed concern that § 48.4042-2(b) might be interpreted to require vessel operators to install fuel gauges and that § 48.4042-2(c) might be interpreted to require operators to maintain a second set of records duplicating records already contained in vessel logs and invoices of fuel purchases. Such expenditures are not required by the regulations.

Many comments pointed out situations where, because of an operator's circumstances, maintaining certain records listed in § 48.4042-2(c)(1) would serve little or no purpose—such as (1) requiring fuel refining firms operating barges to maintain records of fuel acquired for all purposes and (2) requiring records of arrival and departure times for a vessel used exclusively in taxable waterways. Section 48.4042-2(c)(1) has been changed to clarify that a vessel operator is only required to maintain records sufficient to establish to the satisfaction of the district director the amount of fuel used for taxable purposes.

Several comments pointed out the fact that many vessels do not have identification numbers, but rather are assigned names. Section 48.4042-2(c)(1) has been changed to allow operators to maintain records for each vessel under either a vessel name or identification number.

Several commentators requested clarification of whether interim deposits will be required and whether filing can be delayed until a later date when the operator is allowed until that later date to report another tax with the Form 720—such as the windfall profits tax. The final rules, §§ 48.4042-2(d) and 48.6302(c)-1(f), clarify that interim deposits are not required. See Rev. Proc. 80-23, 1980-26 I.R.B. 30, for the extension currently allowed taxpayers using Form 720 to report taxes subject to different reporting deadlines.

Many changes were requested which would be contrary to Congress' intent or the language of the statute itself and for that reason have not been made. Those requests include: collecting the tax from persons selling fuel; making lessees and charterers pay the tax regardless of who operates the vessel; excluding fuel used in the propulsion engine to create energy for nonpropulsion purposes; excluding fuel used by private operators transporting property destined for a State or local government's use; excluding fuel used by tugs to move LASH and SEABEE barges regardless of whether the tow is comprised exclusively of such barges.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is John R. Harman of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly 26 CFR Part 48 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. There are added immediately after § 48.4041-14 the following new sections:

§ 48.4042-1 Tax on fuel used in commercial waterway transportation.

(a) In general. Section 4042(a) imposes an excise tax on the use of liquid fuel in the propulsion system of commercial transportation vessels while traveling on certain inland and intracoastal waterways (see § 48.4042-1(f)). The tax applies generally to all types of vessels, including ships, barges, and tugboats. It is in addition to all other taxes imposed on the sale or use of fuel.

(b) Amount of tax. The tax imposed by section 4042(a) shall be determined from the following table:

If the use occurs—	The tax is—
After Sept. 30, 1980 and before Oct. 1, 1981	4 cents a gallon
After Sept. 30, 1981 and before Oct. 1, 1983	6 cents a gallon
After Sept. 30, 1983 and before Oct. 1, 1985	8 cents a gallon
After Sept. 30, 1985	10 cents a gallon

(c) Person liable for tax. The person operating the vessel in which the propulsion fuel is consumed is the user of liquid fuel for purposes of section 4042(a). Thus, a person who operates (or whose employees operate) a vessel is responsible for filing returns and paying the tax. If a vessel owner (or lessee) contracts with an independent contractor to operate the vessel, the independent contractor is the user of liquid fuel for purposes of section 4042(a), regardless of who purchases the fuel.

(d) Time of use. Fuel is not taxed by section 4042(a) when put into a vessel's tanks. For purposes of section 4042(a), fuel is used when it is actually consumed by a vessel's engine.

(e) Liquid fuels. For purposes of section 4042(a), liquid fuel includes any liquid fuel, including—

(1) Diesel fuel, or

(2) Bunker C residual fuel oil, or

(3) Special motor fuel as defined in paragraph (f) of § 48.4041-7, or

(4) Gasoline as defined in paragraph (b) of § 48.4082-1.

(f) Commercial waterway transportation—(1) In general. For purposes of section 4042(a) and § 48.4042-2(c)(1), the term "commercial waterway transportation" means the use of a vessel on the waterways specified in paragraphs (g)(1) through (26) of this section if—

(i) Use of the vessel is in the business of transporting property for compensation or hire, or

(ii) Use of the vessel is in transporting property in the business of the owner, lessee, or operator of the vessel (whether or not a fee is charged).

Except for the operation of certain fishing vessels, the operation of all vessels satisfying the requirements of paragraphs (f)(1)(i) or (1)(ii) of this section will be deemed "commercial waterway transportation," regardless of whether the vessel is actually engaged in the transportation of property on a particular voyage. Thus, "commercial waterway transportation" includes the operation of vessels while moving empty of cargo, while awaiting passage through locks, while dislodging vessels grounded on a sandbar, while moving to or from a repair facility, while maneuvering around loading and unloading docks, and while fleeting barges into a single tow.

(2) Fishing vessels exception. A vessel does not transport property in the business of the owner, lessee, or operator, for purposes of paragraph (f)(1)(ii) of this section, by merely transporting fish or other aquatic animal life caught on the voyage. The tax imposed by section 4042(a) does not apply to fuel used by a fishing vessel while traveling to a fishing site, while engaged in fishing, or while returning from the fishing site with its catch. However, the tax applies to fuel used by a commercial vessel along the taxable waterways while traveling to pick up aquatic animal life caught by another vessel and while transporting the catch of such other vessel.

(g) Specified waterways. Only fuel used on those waterways specified in section 206 of the Inland Waterways Revenue Act of 1978 (specified waterways) is taxable. The specified waterways are as follows:

(1) Alabama-Coosa Rivers: From junction with the Tombigbee River at river mile (hereinafter referred to as RM) 0 to junction with the Coosa River at RM 314.

(2) Allegheny River: From confluence with the Monongahela River to form the Ohio River at RM 0 to the head of the existing project at East Brady, Pennsylvania, RM 72.

§ 48.4042-2 Special rules.

(a) Dual use of liquid fuels—(1) Dual use by the propulsion engine. The tax imposed by section 4042(a) applies to all taxable liquid used as a fuel in the propulsion system of the vessel, regardless of whether the engine (or other propulsion system) is used for a purpose other than propulsion of the vessel. For purposes of this section, any engines generating movement of a vessel (including bow thrusters used for steering) are part of the propulsion system. The tax does not apply to fuel consumed in engines which are not used to generate movement of a vessel. When the propulsion engine operates special equipment by means of a power take-off or power transfer, the tax applies to all liquid fuel consumed by that engine. For example, the tax applies to all fuel used in the engine operating an alternator, a generator, or pumps, if that engine is used to generate movement of a vessel.

(2) Common tank. If the liquid fuel consumed by a nonpropulsion engine is drawn from the same tank as fuel consumed by a propulsion engine, a reasonable determination of the quantity of fuel used in such a separate engine will be acceptable for purposes of excluding from taxation a portion of the fuel consumed by the vessel. The determination of the amount of fuel consumed by the nonpropulsion engine may be based primarily on the operating experience of the person using the fuel; however, in order to exclude fuel from taxation under the rule set out in this paragraph (a)(2), the taxpayer must maintain records which will support the allocation used.

(b) Voyages crossing boundaries of the specified waterways. Fuel consumed by a vessel traveling along the specified waterways is taxable only to the extent of fuel consumed for propulsion while on the specified waterways. Generally, the operator may calculate the amount of fuel consumed while on the specified waterways during a particular voyage by multiplying total fuel consumed in the propulsion engine by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the time spent operating on the specified waterways; the denominator is the total time spent operating on the specified and nonspecified waterways during the voyage. This calculation may not be used when it is unreasonable. It may be determined to be unreasonable by:

(1) Better evidence of fuel consumed (e.g., readings from an accurate fuel gauge or records from similar voyages); or

(2) The existence of factors causing a substantial discrepancy between the rate of fuel consumption on the specified and nonspecified waterways.

(c) Records required. (1) All operators of vessels used in commercial waterway transportation must maintain records sufficient to establish to the satisfaction of the district director the amount of fuel used for taxable purposes. Those records may include, when relevant to establish liability:

(i) Quantity of fuel and date of acquisition of all liquid fuels acquired for both taxable and nontaxable purposes, whether delivered to storage tanks or tanks on a vessel;

(ii) Date and quantity of fuel pumped into tanks on each vessel;

(iii) Identification number or name of each vessel using fuel; and

(iv) Departure time, departure point, route traveled, destination, and arrival time for each vessel.

(2) Vessel operators seeking a tax exemption provided by section 4042 (c) must maintain records which will support any exemption claimed. Where applicable, the records shall contain:

(i) The draft of the vessel on each voyage (for exemption under section 4042(c)(1));

(ii) The type of vessel in which fuel is consumed and the type of vessel in which cargo is transported (for exemption under section 4042(c)(1), (2) or (4)); and

(iii) The ultimate use of cargo transported (for exemption under section 4042(c)(3)).

(d) Date for filing return. In general, the return (Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return) must be filed and the tax paid by the last day of the first month following the quarter in which tax liability has accrued. Thus, for the first taxable quarter (October through December 1980) the return is due and the tax must be paid by January 31, 1981. Notwithstanding any provisions in this part to the contrary, the tax imposed by section 4042 (a) need not be deposited with a government depository.

§ 48.4042-3 Certain types of commercial waterway transportation excluded.

(a) Deep draft ocean-going vessels—(1) In general. Under section 4042 (c)(1), there is no tax imposed by section 4042(a) if:

(i) The vessel was designed primarily for use on the high seas; and

(ii) The vessel has a draft of more than 12 feet on the voyage for which the fuel tax exclusion is sought (e.g. 12 feet 1 inch).

(2) Meaning of "designated primarily for use on the high seas." Section 4042(c)(1) requires a determination of the primary of the design features rendering the vessel useful for service on the high seas, as opposed to the features which render the vessel useful for service on all less turbulent waters. Thus, whether a ship is "designed primarily for use on the high seas" must be determined from all the facts, including structural features and equipment. If the predominant use of a vessel is on the high seas, it shall be presumed to be "designed primarily for use on the high seas." If the predominant use of a vessel is on waters other than the high seas, it shall be presumed not to be "designed primarily for use on the high seas."

(3) Meaning of "high seas." For purposes of this section, "high seas" shall mean waters other than the territorial waters of the United States or any other country. Thus, the high seas shall not include the internal waters of any country, the Great Lakes, harbors, or narrow coastal indentations.

(4) Twelve-foot draft—(i) Definition. For purposes of section 4042(c) (1), "draft" shall mean the maximum vertical distance between the mean water line and the bottom of the keel. In cases where a vessel has a skeg or other appendage extending locally below the line of the keel, the draft shall be measured from the deepest appendage. A separate determination of draft must be made for each voyage when the vessel has its greatest load of cargo and fuel. For purposes of this determination, the term "voyage" means a round trip voyage. Therefore, if a vessel travels into the specified waterway system to pick up cargo and has a draft sufficient to qualify for the exclusion when loaded, then for purposes of section 4042(c)(1) the vessel satisfies the 12 foot draft requirement for the entire voyage. Similarly, if a vessel loaded with cargo travels into the specified waterway system with a draft sufficient to qualify for the exclusion provided by section 4042(c) (1), then the fuel consumed on the entire voyage may be excluded, regardless of the vessel's draft after the cargo is unloaded.

(ii) Example. The following example illustrates the application of paragraph (a)(4)(i) of this section:

Example. A ship with a design draft of 20 feet (maximum certified draft when fully loaded) travels into a taxable waterway with only a partial load, such that the draft is 12 feet. The ship unloads and departs the waterway empty. The portion of the fuel consumed for propulsion of the vessel on the specified waterway is taxable because only vessels with a draft greater than 12 feet are eligible for the section 4042(c)(1) exemption from tax.

(b) Commercial passenger vessels. Under section 4042(c)(2), the tax imposed by section 4042(a) does not apply to fuel consumed by vessels used primarily for the transportation of persons. Thus, commercial passenger vessels while being operated as passenger vessels are not subject to tax, even if such vessels in fact transport property in addition to transporting passengers. Similarly, ferry boats carrying passengers are not subject to tax, even if such vessels carry the passengers' automobiles.

(c) Exemption for State or local governments—(1) In general. Under section 4042(c)(3), there is no tax imposed by section 4042(a) if:

(i) The vessel is being used by a State or local government; and

(ii) The vessel is being used in transporting property in the State or local government's business.

(2) State or local government. For purposes of paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section a "vessel is being used by a State or local government" if it is operated by any State, the District of Columbia, or any political subdivision of a State. If a private party is contracted to haul for a State or local government, the vessel is not "being used by a State or local government." Similarly, if a person other than a State or local government is contracted to supply vessel operators, the fuel consumed by the vessel is not used "by a State or local government," regardless of ownership of the vessel. However, when a local government leases barges and employees of the local government operate the barges, the vessel is being used by the local government.

(3) Government business. The test for whether a vessel is being used "in transporting in a State or local government's business," within the meaning of paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section, is whether the ultimate use of the cargo is for a function which is ordinarily carried out by governmental units. For example, when the cargo transported is salt to be spread on icy roads, the vessel is being used "in transporting in a State or local business" because the use to which the cargo will be put (road maintenance) is a function ordinarily performed by governmental units. Fuel consumed in a vessel transporting property for compensation or in furtherance of a business not ordinarily carried out by a governmental unit is not exempt from taxation by section 4042(c)(3).

(d) Ocean-going barges. Under section 4042(c)(4), the tax imposed by section 4042(a) does not apply to fuel consumed by tugs moving exclusively barges released by ocean-going carriers solely to pick up or deliver international cargoes. The tax exemption provided by section 4042(c)(4) applies to LASH barges, SEABEE barges, and all other ocean-going barges carried aboard ocean-going vessels. There is no exemption under section 4042(c)(4) while:

(1) One or more of the barges in the tow is not a LASH barge, SEABEE barge, or other ocean-going barge carried aboard an ocean-going vessel; or

(2) One or more of the barges in the tow is not on an international voyage; or

(3) Part of the cargo in the tow is not being transported internationally.

Par. 2. Section 48.6302(c)-1 is amended by adding a new paragraph (f) as set forth below.

§ 48.6302(c)-1 Use of Government depositaries.

* * * * *

(f) Special rule for the tax imposed by section 4042(a). For purposes of the computations provided by this section, the tax imposed by section 4042(a) shall be disregarded.

ISSUE

In the situations described below what price adjustments, if any, are taken into account in determining base prices under section 4989(d)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

Situation 1

On December 1, 1979, P, a purchaser of crude oil, circulated publicly among sellers and buyers of crude oil in a certain geographical area a written offer to purchase newly discovered oil of a particular grade and quality at a specific price, effective for all purchases in the geographical area on and after November 1, 1979. On January 1, 1980, P publicly circulated a written adjustment to the above price, effective for all purchases on and after December 1, 1979.

Situation 2

The facts are the same as in Situation 1 except that the written adjustment of January 1, 1980, was effective with respect to only two of the fields in the geographical area and was circulated publicly only among buyers and sellers of crude oil in those fields.

[1] Also released in News Release IR-80-116, dated November 3, 1980.

Situation 3

The facts are the same as in Situation 1 except that the adjustment of January 1, 1980, was made orally and written confirmation of the adjustment was not circulated until January 16, 1980.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 4986(a) of the Code imposes an excise tax on the windfall profit from taxable crude oil removed from the premises during each taxable period. Section 4986(b) provides that the tax imposed by this section shall be paid by the producer of the crude oil.

Section 4988(a) of the Code defines the term "windfall profit" as the excess of the removal price of the barrel of crude oil over the sum of the adjusted base price of the barrel and the amount of the severance tax adjustment.

Section 4989(a) of the Code defines the term "adjusted base price" as the base price for the barrel of crude oil plus an amount equal to the base price multiplied by the inflation adjustment for the calendar quarter in which the crude oil is removed from the premises, such amount to be rounded to the nearest cent.

Section 4989(d)(2) of the Code provides that for months beginning before October 1980 (or such earlier date as may be provided in the regulations) the base prices for tier 2 and tier 3 oil shall be the product of—

(A)(i) the highest posted price for December 31, 1979, for uncontrolled crude oil of the same grade, quality, and field, or

(ii) if there is no posted price described in clause (i), the highest posted price for such date for uncontrolled crude oil at the nearest domestic field for which prices for oil of the same grade and quality were posted for such date, multiplied by

(B) a fraction the denominator of which is $35, and the numerator of which is—

(i) $15.20 for purposes of determinitng base prices for tier 2 oil, and

(ii) $16.55 for purposes of determining base prices for tier 3 oil.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, no price which was posted after January 14, 1980, shall be taken into account.

Section 4991(d) of the Code provides that tier 2 oil is any oil from a stripper well property within the meaning of the June 1979 energy regulations, and any oil from an economic interest in a National Petroleum Reserve held by the United States. Section 4991(e) defines tier 3 oil as (a) newly discovered oil, (b) heavy oil and (c) incremental tertiary oil.

Section 150.4989-1(c)(2) of the Temporary Excise Tax Regulations under the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980, as amended by T.D. 7720, 1980-42 I.R.B. 12, 45 F.R. 63263, provides that for purposes of determining the highest posted price for December 31, 1979, "posted price" means a written statement of crude oil prices constituting an offer to purchase oil at that price circulated publicly among sellers and buyers of crude oil in a particular field in accordance with historic practices. Although the formality of a printed price bulletin such as is published by major purchasers is not necessary for a price to be a valid posted price, the formality of a publicly circulated written offer is necessary. The requirement that the offer be in writing and publicly circulated eliminates oral offers and offers made only to specified producers.

That section further provides that in determining the "highest posted price," a producer should first determine which offers qualify as posted prices for December 31, 1979. An offer does not constitute a posted price for December 31, 1979, unless the offer was initially made on or before December 31, 1979, and was in effect for oil purchased on that date. However, in determining the highest posted price for December 31, 1979, a valid posted price that was adjusted on or before January 14, 1980, shall be considered to be an offer made at the price as adjusted so long as the adjusted price applies to all oil purchased pursuant to the initial offer.

An offer made on or before December 31, 1979, to purchase crude oil at a specific price that is adjusted after December 31, 1979, constitutes a posted price for December 31, 1979, at the price as adjusted, provided that 1) the initial offer meets all the requirements for a valid posted price, 2) the adjustment is in effect for December 31, 1979, 3) the adjustment meets all the requirements for a valid posted price for the field or area to which it applies on or before January 14, 1980, and 4) the adjustment applies to all oil in the applicable field or area purchased during the effective period of the adjustment.

HOLDING

Situation 1

P's adjusted price of January 1, 1980, constitutes a "posted price for December 31, 1979," for the named geographical area for purposes of determining base price under section 4989(d)(2) of the Code.

Situation 2

P's adjusted price of January 1, 1980, constitutes a "posted price for December 31, 1979," for purposes of determining base price in the two fields subject to the adjustment. P's initial offer price of December 1, 1979, constitutes a "posted price for December 31, 1979," for purposes of determining base price in the remainder of the geographic area.

Situation 3

Since P's adjusted price was made orally and was not reduced to writing until after January 14, 1980, the adjusted price does not constitute a "posted price for December 31, 1979." Rather, P's price circulated on December 1, 1979, is a "posted price for December 31, 1979," in the geographic area for purposes of determining base price.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER D, PART 150.—TEMPORARY EXCISE TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE CRUDE OIL WINDFALL PROFIT TAX ACT OF 1980

Tax deposits and refunds based on the net income limitation

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Amendment of temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document amends temporary excise tax regulations relating to the windfall profit tax on domestic crude oil imposed by title I of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 [Pub.L. 96-223, 1980-3 C.B. 2]. The new temporary regulations provide rules to be followed by producers of domestic crude oil. In addition, the text contained in the temporary regulations set forth in this document serves as the text of the proposed regulations cross-referenced in the notice of proposed rulemaking in the Proposed Rules section of the issue of the Federal Register for November 5, 1980, 45 F.R. 73467.

DATES: These temporary regulations are effective with respect to oil removed after February 29, 1980.

BACKGROUND

On April 4, 1980, the Federal Register published temporary regulations (45 FR 23384) under sections 4986, 4987, 4988, 4989, 4991, 4992, 4993, 4994, 4995, 4996, 4997, 6050C, 6076, and 6402 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The temporary regulations were required to implement various sections of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980. Certain amendments to the temporary regulations were published on April 25, 1980 (45 FR 27929). This document contains amendments to §§ 150.4995-3, 150.4997-1, and 150.6402-1 of those temporary regulations (relating to windfall profit tax deposits, returns, and refunds).

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Numerous commentators on the proposed windfall profit tax regulations published on April 4, 1980 expressed concern over the operation of the tax deposit and refund rules in situations involving the application of the net income limitation on windfall profit provided in section 4988(b). Several commentators suggested that in order to avoid overpayments of tax, the deposit rules should be amended to clarify that producers may take the net income limitation into account in depositing their own tax under § 150.4995-3(a) or (f) when the first purchaser is not required to withhold. This suggestion has been adopted, and § 150.4995-3(a) and (f) is amended to specifically provide that the net income limitation may be taken into account by producers depositing their own tax liability. The amendment is effective with respect to oil removed after February 29, 1980. Therefore, producers may reduce future deposits if more than the tax imposed by section 4986, computed with regard to the net income limitation, has been deposited for past periods. However, refund claims may not be filed until after the end of the producer's taxable year (for Federal income tax purposes).

Most of the commentators recognized that section 4995(a)(2)(B) precludes the first purchaser from taking the net income limitation into account in determining the amount to be withheld from producers. However, it was requested that the regulations be amended to expedite refunds to producers from whom tax has been overwithheld due to the net income limitation.

These regulations amend § 150.6402-1 to permit refund claims to be filed as soon as the statute permits and the amount of the overpayment can be determined. Producers whose taxable year (for Federal income tax purposes) is the calendar year may file a claim for credit or refund any time after the last day of February following the year of removal (the date that section 4995(a)(4)(B) deems the tax to have been paid). Producers whose taxable year is not the calendar year may file two claims for credit or refund each year. First, after the last day of February following the calendar year of removal, the producer may file a claim for credit or refund of overpayments attributable to the portion of the calendar year that is within the taxable year that ended during that calendar year. Second, after the end of the following taxable year, the producer may file a claim for credit or refund of overpayments attributable to the remainder of the calendar year.

WAIVER OF PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS OF TREASURY DIRECTIVE

The expeditious adoption of the provisions contained in this document is necessary because of the need for immediate guidance to taxpayers liable for the windfall profit tax on domestic crude oil. For this reason, Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has determined that the provisions of paragraphs 8 through 14 of the Treasury Department directive implementing Executive Order 12044 must be waived.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is David B. Cubeta of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, part 150, Temporary Excise Tax Regulations under the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980, is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 150.4995-3 is amended by revising so much of paragraph (a)(1) as precedes subdivision (i), by revising so much of paragraph (f)(1) as precedes subdivision (i), and by redesignating paragraphs (g) and (h) as (h) and (i) and inserting new paragraph (g) immediately after paragraph (f). These revised, redesignated, and added provisions read as follows:

§ 150.4995-3 Depositary requirements.

(a) Deposits by integrated oil companies other than independent refiners—(1) In general. Every integrated oil company (as defined in § 150.4996-1(g)) other than an independent refiner (as defined in § 150.4996-1(h)) that is either liable as a producer for the tax imposed by section 4986 (unless such tax is required by § 150.4995-1 to be deducted and withheld by the purchaser) or is required as a purchaser to deduct and withhold tax pursuant to § 150.4995-1 shall make deposits with respect to semimonthly periods (as defined in subparagraph (3)(i) of this paragraph). The amount to be deposited for each semimonthly period is the amount of tax imposed by section 4986 (computed with regard to the net income limitation provided in section 4988(b), if applicable) that is not required to be withheld under § 150.4995-1 on oil removed from the premises during that semimonthly period for which the company is liable as a producer, plus the amount required to be withheld by the company as a purchaser pursuant to § 150.4995-1 from payments that have been or will be made for oil removed from the premises during that semimonthly period. The deposits shall be made on or before the depositary date (as defined in subparagraph (3)(ii) of this paragraph) for the semimonthly period in which the oil is removed. These depositary requirements will be considered to have been met for a semimonthly period with respect to estimated deposits, including deposits based upon the producer's estimate of the effect of the net income limitation provided in section 4988(b), only if—

* * * * *

(f) Deposits by producers of tax due on oil not subject to withholding—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (a) (relating to certain integrated oil companies), every producer shall deposit for each calendar month the tax imposed by section 4986 (computed with regard to the net income limitation provided in section 4988(b), if applicable) on the removal in that month of oil that is not subject to withholding under § 150.4995-1. The deposits shall be made not later than 45 days after the close of the month in which the oil was removed (or deemed removed under section 4988(c)(4)) from the premises. These deposit requirements will be considered to have been met for a month with respect to estimated deposits, including deposits based upon the producer's estimate of the effect of the net income limitation provided in section 4988(b), only if—

* * * * *

(g) Special rules applicable if the net income limitation is taken into account in depositing tax—(1) Reporting requirements. For the requirement that the producer file quarterly and annual statements if windfall profit tax deposits have been based on an application of the net income limitation provided in section 4988(b), see § 150.4997-1.

(2) Treatment of deposits by a producer in excess of liability due to the net income limitation—(i) In general. Under §150.6402-1, a producer who deposits for a taxable period an amount that exceeds the tax imposed by section 4986 but does not exceed the tax imposed by section 4986 computed without regard to the net income limitation provided by section 4988(b) may not claim a credit or refund of the excess until the end of the producer's taxable year (for Federal income tax purposes) with respect to which the limitation is computed. However, the excess (if any) of a producer's deposits for a semimonthly period (calendar month in the case of producers depositing under paragraph (f) of this section) over the tax imposed by section 4986 (computed with regard to the net income limitation) for that period (or month) shall be applied in order of time to each of the producer's succeeding semimonthly periods (or months), to the extent that the amount by which the taxes for that period (or month) exceed the deposit for such subsequent period (or month), until such excess is exhausted. The preceding sentence shall not apply to any amount for which the producer files a claim for credit or refund pursuant to § 150.6402-1. Furthermore, no amount shall be applied to a deposit for a subsequent semimonthly period (or month) that occurs in a taxable period beginning in a different taxable year (for Federal income tax purposes).

(ii) Examples. The rules of this paragraph and their relationship to the rules of § 150.6402-1 may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, whose taxable year (for Federal income tax purposes) ends September 30, is the producer of oil from property X. For each taxable period (calendar quarter) within his taxable year ending September 30, 1981, A's windfall profit tax liability, determined without taking the net income limitation into account, is $1,000. The purchaser of A's oil is not required to withhold any windfall profit tax, and for the last taxable period of 1980 A has deposited $1,000. At the beginning of the first taxable period of 1981, A determines that the net income limitation will reduce the windfall profit tax with respect to the oil removed from property X during the taxable year ending September 30, 1981, by approximately 10 percent. Therefore, A concludes that the tax paid for the preceding taxable period (calendar quarter) exceeds his liability for tax for that period, although the exact amount of the excess cannot be determined until the taxable year ends. Under § 150.6402-1, A may not claim a refund for the amount of any such excess until the taxable year ends on September 30, 1981. However, paragraphs (a) and (f) of § 150.4995-3 do not require deposit of more than the tax imposed by section 4986. Therefore, A may estimate the effect of the net income limitation in determining the amount of windfall profit tax to be deposited for each taxable period. Furthermore, the amount by which the tax deposited by A for a preceding deposit period exceeds the actual liability for that period is treated as deposited for the next period. Accordingly, A deposits a total of $800 for the first taxable period of 1981 and $900 for each of the next two taxable periods.

Thus, at the end of the four taxable periods ending within A's taxable year, A has made the following deposits:

$1,000	$800	$900	$900

After September 30, 1981, A computes his net income limitation for property X and determines that his actual tax liability was $850 for each taxable period. A has satisfied the deposit requirements and is entitled to file a claim for credit or refund of $200.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that A overestimates the effect of the net income limitation and deposits a total of $600 for the first taxable period of 1981 and $800 for each of the next two taxable periods. After September 30, 1981, A's deposits are as follows:

$1,000	$600	$800	$800

$150 of the deposits for October, November, and December 1980 is treated as carried over to and deposited in the next taxable period, bringing the total deposit required for Jan.-Mar. 1981 to $700 (the amount equal to the $850 actual liability less $150 carried from the preceding period). However, due to the overestimation of the effect of the net income limitation, A has not deposited the total liability for that period or the next two taxable periods. Therefore, A is liable for $200 in undeposited tax (the amount equal to $3,400 total liability less $3,200 total deposits) plus interest and penalties (unless A's error was due to reasonable cause).

(h) Government depositories. * * *

(i) Depositary forms. * * *

Par. 2. Section 150.4997-1 is amended by revising the portion of paragraph (a) that follows subparagraph (2) to read as follows:

§ 150.4997-1 Returns and recordkeeping.

(a) Returns. * * *

Every producer taking the net income limitation provided by section 4988 (b) into account in making windfall profit tax deposits shall file quarterly and annual statements in accordance with forms and instructions provided for that purpose. See § 150.6076-1 for the rules relating to the time for filing the returns required by this section.

* * * * *

Par 3. Section 150.6402-1 is amended by revising paragraphs (b) and (c) and by adding new paragraphs (e) and (f) immediately after paragraph (d). These added and revised paragraphs read as follows:

§ 150.6402-1 Credit or refund of overpayment of windfall profit tax.

(b) Overpayments not attributable to amounts deducted and withheld—(1) In general. If, for any taxable period, a producer has paid more than the amount of tax imposed by section 4986 (computed without regard to the net income limitation on windfall profit provided in section 4988 (b)) that is attributable solely to tax paid on crude oil not subject to withholding, the producer may file a claim for refund of that overpayment on or after the date for filing the return of such tax for such taxable period under section 6076 or may claim credit for such overpayment against any liability for a tax imposed by Chapter 1 or 45 in accordance with the forms and instructions provided for that purpose.

(2) Net income limitation. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(1), if, for any taxable period, a producer has paid more than the amount of tax imposed by section 4986 (computed with regard to the net income limitation provided in section 4988(b)) that is attributable solely to tax paid on crude oil not subject to withholding, the producer may file a claim for credit or refund of that overpayment only after the end of the producer's taxable year (for Federal income tax purposes) with respect to which the limitation is computed. At that time, the producer may claim a credit or refund of the overpayment as provided in paragraph (b)(1) of this section.

(c) Overpayments attributable to amounts deducted and withheld—(1) In general. Under section 4995(a) (4), the producer of oil is treated as having paid any amount withheld on the last day of the first February after the calendar year in which the oil was removed from the premises. Therefore, if the sum of the producer's liability for the tax imposed by section 4986 (computed without regard to the net income limitation provided in section 4988(b)) on oil subject to withholding under § 150.4995-1 for all taxable periods of a calendar year is less than the amount deducted and withheld from the producer under § 150.4995-1 with respect to oil removed during the calendar year, an overpayment of tax exists after such last day of February. The producer may file a claim for refund of the overpayment or may claim credit for the overpayment against any liability for a tax imposed by chapter 1 or 45 in accordance with the forms and instructions provided for that purpose. The producer shall attach to the claim a copy of all Forms 6248 furnished to the producer pursuant to § 150.4997-2.

(2) Net income limitation. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(1), if the sum of the producer's liability for the tax imposed by section 4986 (computed with regard to the net income limitation provided in section 4988 (b)) on oil subject to withholding under § 150.4995-1 for any taxable period is less than the sum of the amounts deducted and withheld from the producer under § 150.4995-1 with respect to oil removed in that taxable period, the excess may be claimed as a credit or refund only after the later of—

(A) The last day of the first February after the end of the taxable period, or

(B) The last day of the producer's taxable year (for Federal income tax purposes) with respect to which the limitation is computed.

Thereafter, the producer may file a claim for credit or refund of the overpayment as provided in paragraph (c) (1) of this section.

(e) Examples. The rules of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Under § 150.4995-1, the purchaser of oil from producer A is not required to deduct and withhold any tax from payments made to A. Consequently, A deposited a total of $1,100 for a certain taxable period. After the end of the taxable period, it is determined that the tax imposed by section 4986, computed without regard to the net income limitation, is $1,000. A estimates that, due to the net income limitation, the actual liability is only $900. Under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, A may file a claim for credit or refund of $100 (the amount by which the $1,100 deposit exceeds the $1,000 tax imposed by section 4986, computed without regard to the net income limitation). Under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, A may claim credit or refund of any overpayment due to the application of the net income limitation only after A's taxable year (for Federal income tax purposes) has ended. However, see § 150.4995-3(g)(2) for rules relating to estimated tax deposits.

Example (2). Producer B's taxable year for income tax purposes is the calendar year. Due to the application of the net income limitation, the amount of windfall profit tax withheld from B exceeds B's liability for each of the four taxable periods of the calendar year. B may file a claim for credit or refund of the overwithheld tax after the last day of February following the end of the calendar year.

Example (3). Producer C's taxable year for income tax purposes ends on June 30. Due to the application of the net income limitation, C's windfall profit tax has been overwithheld for each of the four taxable periods within C's taxable year ending June 30, 1981. C may claim credit or refund after June 30, 1981, for the overpayment attributable to oil removed during the last two taxable periods of calendar year 1980 (July-September and October-December 1980), because by that time C has been deemed, under section 4995(a)(4), to have paid the tax with respect to those taxable periods, and the taxable year in which the oil was removed has ended. However, C must wait until after February 28, 1982, to claim credit or refund for the overpayment attributable to oil removed during the first two taxable periods of calendar year 1981 (January-March and April-June 1981).

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (3), except that the purchaser of C's oil made an error and overwithheld tax during the last taxable period of calendar year 1980. The error remained unadjusted when the purchaser furnished C the annual information statement under § 150.4997-2. After February 28, 1981, C may file a claim for credit or refund of the amount overwithheld due to the withholding error. However, C may not claim a credit or refund for the overpayment due to the application of the net income limitation until the dates specified in example (3).

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (3), except that C's taxable year ends on August 31, and the overpayment due to the net income limitation relates to C's taxable year ending August 31, 1981. C may claim a credit or refund after August 31, 1981, for the overpayment attributable to oil removed during the last two taxable periods of calendar year 1980. After February 28, 1982, C may claim credit or refund for the overpayment attributable to oil removed during the first three taxable periods of calendar year 1981. However, that claim may only reflect overpayments due to the application of the net income limitation for oil removed through August 1981 because the last month of the third taxable period of 1981 (September 1981) is in C's next income tax year.

(f) Cross-reference. For examples illustrating the interrelationship of § 150.4995-3 (relating to depositary requirements) and this section, see § 150.4995-3(g)(2)(ii).

There is need for the immediate guidance provided by the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Evidence of loss; confirmation statements from foreign broker. Rev. Rul. 80-324 [1]

ISSUE

Are an investment prospectus, cancelled checks, and confirmation statements sufficient to substantiate a loss deduction claimed by the taxpayer under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

A taxpayer, responding to an investment prospectus, invested money with a foreign investment firm (a foreign corporation) located in a foreign country. The money was to be used to engage in certain transactions involving futures contracts in United States Government interest-bearing certificates. These futures transactions were carried out on a foreign exchange not subject to regulatory supervision similar to that existing in the United States. During the taxable year, a foreign broker, on behalf of the taxpayer, purportedly covered a "short position" on some of these certificates, which resulted in a loss to the taxpayer. To discharge the resulting liability to the broker, the taxpayer allegedly borrowed money from the foreign corporation and purportedly assumed personal liability to repay this debt.

On the federal income tax return for the year in question, the taxpayer claimed a 100,000*x* dollar loss deduction on account of this transaction. Upon audit of the taxpayer's return, the taxpayer, to substantiate this loss, presented (1) the investment prospectus of the foreign corporation, (2) a cancelled check in the amount of 12,500*x* dollars made payable to the foreign corporation (and with which the taxpayer claimed to have opened the trading account), and (3) confirmation certificates prepared by the foreign corporation evidencing the claimed loss. The foreign investment corporation's records of the taxpayer's transactions are not available for examination by the Internal Revenue Service because the foreign country's secrecy laws preclude such examination.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 165(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that there shall be allowed as a deduction any loss sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

Section 1.165-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides, in part, that to be allowable as a deduction under section 165(a) of the Code, a loss must be evidenced by closed and completed transactions, fixed by identifiable events, and actually sustained during the taxable year. This provision further provides that only a bona fide loss is allowable.

Section 6001 of the Code provides that every person liable for any tax imposed by the Code, or for the collection thereof, shall keep records as the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary's delegate may from time to time prescribe.

Section 1.6001-1(a) of the regulations provides that any person subject to income tax shall keep such permanent books of account or records, including inventories, as are sufficient to establish the amount of gross income, deductions, credits, or other matters required to be shown by such person in any return of such tax or information.

Thus, on audit, a taxpayer can be required to supply sufficient information to permit the Service to determine the bona fides of any claimed deduction or credit. A taxpayer is not relieved of his obligation to establish the bona fides of any claimed deduction or credit because the transaction giving rise to the deduction or credit is carried out through a foreign investment vehicle (foreign partnership, corporation, or trust, for instance) that operates in a foreign jurisdiction whose laws or practices prohibit or restrict disclosure to the Service.

HOLDING

Because the foreign futures transactions are not subject to regulatory supervision equal to that provided in the United States, the Service is not required to assume the existence of these transactions merely because the taxpayer produces some documentation (e.g., investment prospectus, cancelled checks, and confirmation statements) purporting to evidence such transactions.

Rev. Proc. 80-51

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide general procedures under section 1.446-1(e) of the Income Tax Regulations for obtaining the consent of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to requests for changes in methods of accounting for federal income tax purposes.

This revenue procedure modifies and/or supersedes Rev. Proc. 70-27, 1970-2 C.B. 509; Rev. Proc. 71-16, 1971-1 C.B. 682; Rev. Proc. 71-16 Amendment I, 1971-2 C.B. 527; Rev. Proc. 72-24, 1972-1 C.B. 749; Rev. Proc. 74-51, 1974-2 C.B. 507; Rev. Proc. 75-18, 1975-1 C.B. 687; and Rev. Proc. 76-8, 1976-1 C.B. 547.

.01 Section 446(e) of the Internal Revenue Code and section 1.446-1(e) of the regulations provide that in order to change a method of accounting for federal income tax purposes, the taxpayer must obtain the consent of the Commissioner. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(i) requires that in order to obtain such consent, an application must be made within 180 days after the beginning of the taxable year in which the proposed change is requested to be made. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) authorizes the Commissioner to prescribe administrative procedures setting forth the limitations, terms, and conditions deemed necessary to permit a taxpayer to obtain consent to a change in its method of accounting in accordance with section 446(e).

.02 Section 481(a) of the Code requires that those adjustments necessary to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted be taken into account when the taxpayer's taxable income is computed under a method of accounting different from the method used to compute taxable income for the preceding taxable year. Section 481(c) and section 1.481-5 of the regulations provide that the adjustment required by section 481(a) may be taken into account in determining taxable income in the manner and subject to the conditions agreed to by the Commissioner and the taxpayer.

.03 Methods of accounting should clearly reflect income on a continuing basis, and the Internal Revenue Service administers its discretion under sections 446(e) and 481(c) of the Code so that, in general, any distortion of income on an annual basis is minimized. When there is a change in method of accounting, income for the year preceding the year of change must be determined under the method of accounting that was then employed, and income for the year of change and the following years is determined under the new method of accounting. The section 481(a) adjustment, while necessary to prevent duplications or omissions of income or deductions, by its nature is distortive since it does not reflect the economic income of the year. An adjustment period for the section 481(a) adjustment is provided for in sections 5.05 and 5.06 of this revenue procedure and is intended to reduce the possibility of a change in method of accounting from itself creating a material distortion in income in the year of change and to reduce any distortion when it does exist. Also, amounts attributable to changes in methods of accounting are taken into account in determining earnings and profits in a manner consistent with the provisions of this revenue procedure.

.04 While the adjustment period is designed to ameliorate, at least in part, the otherwise distortive effect of the section 481(a) adjustment, the Service believes that in order to further compliance with proper methods of accounting, situations exist when allowing an adjustment period of more than 1 year is not appropriate. In such cases, a period of only 1 year is available. (See section 4.012 of this revenue procedure.) Similarly, the Service believes that certain situations exist when it is not appropriate to allow more than a 5-year period. (See section 5.11.) In addition, the Service believes as a general matter that it is appropriate that the adjustment period not be greater than the period that gave rise to the section 481(a) adjustment. (See section 5.06.)

SEC. 3. CHANGES

.01 This revenue procedure contains several major changes and amplifications in the procedures for obtaining the Commissioner's consent to a change in method of accounting. These changes and amplifications are made to encourage compliance with proper methods of accounting when a taxpayer is determining taxable income in accordance with one or more methods of accounting that are proscribed by the Code, regulations, decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, revenue rulings and revenue procedures. This section highlights the major changes and amplifications.

.02 Section 4.012 provides new procedures that preclude a taxpayer that is using a Category A method of accounting from applying for a change in such method of accounting under this revenue procedure after the taxpayer is contacted in any manner by a representative of the Service for the purpose of scheduling an examination. A Category A method of accounting is defined in section 6.02 as a method of accounting that is specifically not permitted by the Code, regulations, or by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

.03 Section 5, in general, amplifies the procedures to be followed in requesting consent to change a method of accounting.

.04 Section 5.02 expands the rules and procedures to be followed when a taxpayer files an application for change in method of accounting before and after the first 180 days of the taxable year for which the change is requested. Early applications filed up to 6 months before the beginning of the taxable year of change will be processed in accordance with section 5.03 of this revenue procedure. Late applications not accepted by the Service under the provisions of section 1.9100-1 of the regulations may be considered to apply to the subsequent taxable year.

.05 Section 5.06 explains the section 481(a) adjustment periods for the purpose of taking into account the appropriate adjustment resulting from the change in method of accounting. These adjustment periods are similar to the "spread periods" referred to in Rev. Proc. 80-5, 1980-1 C.B. 582. The period of years over which a section 481(a) adjustment is to be made now depends upon the facts and circumstances in each case. However, the adjustment period may not exceed 10 taxable years and in some cases may be 1 taxable year.

.06 Section 5.10 eliminates the 20-year adjustment period provided for by Rev. Proc. 71-16, Rev. Proc. 71-16, Amendment I, and Rev. Proc. 72-24, with respect to the discontinuance of the last-in, first-out (LIFO) inventory method. The adjustment period over which the section 481(a) adjustment is to be taken will be determined under the rules set forth in section 5.06. The adjustment period will not exceed 10 taxable years and once the change has been made to discontinue the use of the LIFO inventory method the taxpayer will be required to stay on the new method of accounting for a period of at least 10 taxable years unless the Commissioner consents to a change at an earlier time.

.07 Sections 5.11, 10.02 and 11.03 modify and supersede Rev. Proc. 74-51 and allow an adjustment period for the section 481(a) adjustment of up to 5 taxable years with respect to certain changes to the full absorption method of inventory costing prescribed by section 1.471-11(a) of the regulations. During the transition period prescribed by section 1.471-11(e)(3), taxpayers were allowed an adjustment period not to exceed the lesser of 10 taxable years commencing with the year of transition or the number of years the taxpayer had been on the inventory method from which it was changing. Since the transitional rules of section 1.471-11(e) do not apply to taxable years beginning after September 19, 1975, the Service issued Rev. Proc. 74-51 to prevent taxpayers from applying under Rev. Proc. 70-27 for an adjustment period that would tend to frustrate the purpose of the transitional rules. Rev. Proc. 74-51 modified Rev. Proc. 70-27 to provide that it will not apply to a taxpayer changing to the full absorption method of inventory costing as required by section 1.471-11(e)(1)(i). Now, applications filed in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rev. Proc. 75-40, 1975-2 C.B. 571, will be allowed an adjustment period of up to 5 taxable years.

.08 Section 5.12 modifies the procedures that apply to taxpayers under examination by providing that a taxpayer using a Category B method of accounting (defined in section 6.03) may change its method of accounting while under examination. However, certain conditions (such as year of change) are imposed, and in the case of certain types of changes of methods of accounting (generally those designated by a revenue ruling or revenue procedure) the adjustment period is limited to 5 taxable years.

.09 Section 5.121 changes the year of change for which a change is granted with respect to taxpayers under examination. If the method being changed involves an issue raised by the Service during such examination, the year of change will be the most recent taxable year that is being examined by the Service, but not later than the most recent taxable year for which a federal income tax return has been filed as of the date such examination began.

.10 Section 11 is a new provision that sets forth the effective dates. Generally the provisions of this revenue procedure will be effective on December 1, 1980. However, except for changes in method of accounting to which Rev. Proc. 80-5 and Rev. Proc. 74-51 applied, the provisions of sections 4.012 and 5.12 are effective with respect to applications for change in accounting method (Form 3115) filed on or after December 1, 1982. Special effective dates are provided with respect to the elimination of the 20-year adjustment period provided when LIFO is discontinued and for the allowance of a 5-year adjustment period when changing the full absorption method of inventory costing.

SEC. 4. SCOPE

.01 This revenue procedure applies to Form 3115, Application for Change in Accounting Method, filed by all taxpayers except those cases:

1 Under examination by the Service in which the year or years under examination encompass the taxable year in which the erroneous method was initiated by the taxpayer or in which the taxpayer changed to a method of accounting without consent of the Commissioner;

2 In which the method to be changed is a Category A method of accounting (as defined in section 6.02 of this revenue procedure), and the taxpayer has been contacted in any manner by a representative of the Service for the purpose of scheduling an examination of its federal income tax return(s) and such examination has not been completed (but see section 4.02);

3 When at the time of filing Form 3115 the taxpayer is:

(a) Under examination by the district director, except as provided in sections 4.02, 5.12 and 7.03 of this revenue procedure;

(b) Under consideration by an appeals office of the Service with respect to an examination; or

(c) Before any federal court with respect to an income tax issue, unless the taxpayer has obtained an agreement from counsel for the Government that there is no objection to the proposed change in method of accounting;

4 Involving a termination of a taxpayer's use of the LIFO inventory method by the Service (see section 3.01 of Rev. Proc. 79-23, 1979-1 C.B. 564); or

5 In which there is pending a criminal investigation or proceeding concerning, (a) directly or indirectly the taxpayer's federal tax liability, or (b) the possibility of false or fraudulent statements made by the taxpayer with respect to its federal tax liability.

.02 Section 4.01 2 will not apply during a 90-day period following the date of issuance by the Service of either a letter stating that there is no change in the tax liability or a basic report form (a report of Individual Income Tax Examination Changes, a report of Income Tax Examination Changes, a report of Income Tax Audit Changes, or an Unagreed and Excepted Agreed report) signifying notice of results of an examination by the Service of the taxpayer's liability for certain taxable years. The examination of cases placed or held in suspense under subsection 4559 of the Internal Revenue Manual should be completed for all issues not in suspense and a partial agreement requested. The issuance of a basic report form in such cases begins the 90-day period specified above. However, section 4.01 2 will be applied and the 90-day rule set forth above will not apply with respect to a Category A method of accounting that is included as an item of adjustment as a result of the examination by the Service or the method of accounting (Category A) issue is placed in suspense by the Service.

.03 Should a Category B method of accounting (defined in section 6.03 of this revenue procedure) be an issue that is placed in suspense by the Service and the taxpayer desires to change such Category B method of accounting to a proper method of accounting, the taxpayer may file an application for change in accounting method under the provisions of this revenue procedure.

.04 If section 4.012 applies, the change in method of accounting shall be made by the district director.

.05 Except as provided in section 5.12, this revenue procedure does not provide for retroactive changes for a taxable year for which a federal income tax return has been filed.

.06 The Service reserves the right to decline to process an application for change in accounting method filed under this revenue procedure in situations in which it would not be in the best interest of sound tax administration to permit the requested change. In this regard the Service will consider whether such change in method of accounting would clearly and directly frustrate compliance efforts of the Service in administering the income tax laws.

Sec. 5. Procedures

.01 Submission of application for change in method of accounting.

In general, an application for a change in method of accounting should be filed on Form 3115 within 180 days after the beginning of the taxable year for which the change in method of accounting is requested to be made.

.02 Late applications for change in method of accounting.

1 The purpose of the 180-day rule is to provide the Service adequate time to process the numerous applications prior to the original due date of taxpayers' returns. A Form 3115 that is not filed within the 180-day period may, under section 1.9100-1 of the regulations, nevertheless be considered as timely filed upon the showing of good cause in accordance with the requirements of Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B 578. However, for purposes of this revenue procedure, applications received beyond 9 months after the beginning of the year of change will be considered to jeopardize the interests of the Government (see section 1.9100-1(a)(3) of the regulations and section 2 of Rev. Proc. 79-63) except in very unusual and compelling circumstances.

2 If a Form 3115 has been filed after the 180-day period and the Service does not grant relief under section 1.9100-1 of the regulations, the taxpayer may choose to have the application apply to the subsequent taxable year under the procedures prescribed in section 5.03 below. Such choice must be made within 30 days after the issuance by the Service of a denial of relief under section 1.9100-1, by filing a statement with the National Office addressed in accordance with section 7.01 of this revenue procedure. If such choice is timely made and the requirements of section 5.03 are met, the application will be considered a qualified application timely filed for purposes of this revenue procedure at the time Form 3115 was filed for which relief under section 1.9100-1 was requested.

.03 Early applications for change in method of accounting.

A qualified application for a change in method of accounting filed within a 6-month period before the beginning of the year of change will be considered as being timely filed for purposes of this revenue procedure. To qualify, (a) the Form 3115 must be complete in all respects except for the amount of the adjustment under section 481(a) for the year of change, and (b) the amount of such section 481(a) adjustment be furnished to the Service within the first 90 days after the beginning of the year of change. The filing of a qualified application for change in method of accounting in this manner will be considered to be an application for a change in method of accounting at the time of the original filing of the Form 3115. The processing order of a Form 3115 filed under the provisions of this subsection will be determined by the date all information (including the amount of the section 481(a) adjustment) has been furnished. In order to assist in the processing of Forms 3115 filed under this early filing procedure, and to insure proper handling, reference to this special procedure should be made a part of the Form 3115 by putting at the top of the Form 3115: "FILED UNDER SEC. 5.03 of REV. PROC. 80-51."

.04 Processing applications (Form 3115).

In processing applications for change in method of accounting the Service will consider all facts and circumstances. Such consideration will include:

1 Whether the method of accounting requested is consistent with the Code, regulations, revenue rulings, revenue procedures and decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States;

2 Whether the use of that method will clearly reflect income;

3 The taxpayer's reason(s) for the change; and

4 The tax effect of the adjustment under section 481(a) of the Code.

.05 Approval.

Approval of an application for change in method of accounting will normally be conditioned on the taxpayer proposing and agreeing as one of the conditions to the change to take the adjustment required under section 481(a) of the Code ("adjustment") into account in computing taxable income and earnings and profits (see Rev. Proc. 79-47, 1979-2 C.B. 528) over a period considered appropriate by the Commissioner, and proposing and agreeing to those other terms and conditions deemed appropriate by the Commissioner to clearly reflect, or prevent a distortion of, income. Such an approved change shall be considered to be a change in method of accounting initiated by the taxpayer.

.06 Section 481(a) adjustment period.

1 The appropriate period for taking into account an adjustment, whether positive or negative, referred to in section 5.05 ("adjustment period") is generally determined as follows:

(a) When the entire net amount of an adjustment is attributable to the taxable year immediately preceding the year of change (first preceding year), the total net adjustment is to be taken into account in computing taxable income for the year of change. The amount attributable to the taxable year immediately preceding the year of change is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount of the adjustment that would have been required under section 481(a) if the same change in method of accounting had been made in such preceding year.

(b) When (a) does not apply and 67 percent or more of the net amount of an adjustment is attributable to the 1-taxable year period, 2-taxable year period, or 3-taxable year period immediately preceding the year of change, the highest percent attributable to such 1, 2, or 3-taxable year period is to be taken into account ratably over a 3-taxable year period beginning with the year of change. Any remaining balance is to be taken into account ratably over an additional period equal to the remainder of the number of taxable years the taxpayer has used the method of accounting that is being changed. However, the total adjustment period shall not exceed 10 taxable years. This subparagraph 5.06 1(b) only applies if the taxpayer has used the method being changed for more than 3 taxable years. If the method of accounting being changed has been used for no more than 4 taxable years, 75 percent shall be substituted for 67 percent. An amount attributable to such 1, 2, or 3-taxable year period is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the same change had been made at the beginning of such preceding 1, 2, or 3-taxable year period.

(c) In all other situations in which (a) and (b) above do not apply, the total net adjustment is to be taken into account ratably over the number of taxable years (not to exceed 10) the taxpayer has used the method of accounting that is being changed.

2 In applying sections 5.061(a) or (b), if a taxpayer's books and records do not contain sufficient information to compute the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-taxable year period immediately preceding the year of change, the taxpayer may reasonably estimate such amounts and attach and sign (or have signed by an officer who has personal knowledge of the facts) the following statement to the Form 3115:

Under penalty of perjury, I hereby certify that:

(a) the books and records of [name of the taxpayer] do not contain sufficient information to permit a computation of the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1-taxable year period, 2-taxable year period, or 3-taxable year period immediately preceding the year of change as required by section 5.061(b) of Rev. Proc. 80-51.

(b) Based on the information that is contained in such records, to the best of my information and belief, the entire amount of the section 481(a) adjustment for the year of change [indicate either "is" or "is not," as the case may be] attributable to the taxable year immediately preceding the year of change, and 67 percent [or "75 percent," in applicable cases] or more of the section 481(a) adjustment for the year of change [indicate "is" or "is not," as the case may be] attributable to the 1-taxable year period, 2-taxable year period, or 3-taxable year period immediately preceding the year of change.

3 A cooperative within the meaning of section 1381(a) of the Code shall generally take the total net amount of an adjustment into account in computing taxable income for the year of change. See Rev. Rul. 79-45, 1979-1 C.B. 284. The Service in its discretion may, however, require the adjustment to be taken into account ratably over a period of taxable years when it determines such action is appropriate.

If a taxpayer elects the LIFO method of inventory valuation during the adjustment period referred to in section 5.06, the balance of the unamortized section 481(a) adjustment referred to in sections 5.05 and 5.06 attributable to a change in inventory valuation from a method with respect to which an adjustment under section 472(d) of the Code would have been required, must be taken into account in full in computing taxable income in the year for which such election is made. This subsection shall only apply to the portion of the unamortized section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the portion of the inventory with respect to which LIFO is elected.

.08 Reduction in Inventory Value.

1 If the change in method of accounting involves a change in method of inventory valuation and on the last day of any taxable year during the adjustment period referred to in section 5.06 the value of the taxpayer's inventory to which the section 481(a) adjustment relates is reduced by more than 33⅓ percent of such inventory value at the beginning of the first taxable year in the adjustment period (see sections 5.05 and 5.06), the balance of the net section 481(a) adjustment must be taken into account in full in determining taxable income in the year of such inventory reduction.

2 Section 5.081 shall not apply if the taxpayer has shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that such reduction is attributable to a strike, involuntary conversion, or involuntary interruption of the availability of goods. This paragraph 5.082 shall apply only if the taxpayer has obtained the consent of the Commissioner. Such consent must be requested no later than 90 days after the end of the taxable year in which section 5.081 would otherwise apply.

.09 Ceasing to engage in the trade or business.

1 With respect to a corporation:

If the taxpayer ceases to engage in the trade or business, to which the adjustment (sections 5.05 and 5.06) relates, at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period referred to in section 5.06, the taxpayer shall take into account in such year the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income. See Rev. Rul. 80-39, 1980-1 C.B. 112, which holds that if a division of a corporation, for which a change in method of accounting had been granted, ceases to operate the trade or business for which the change in method was granted, the remaining section 481(a) adjustment applicable to the business conducted by that division of the corporation must be taken into income in the year the corporation ceases to engage in that trade or business. For purposes of this condition, the taxpayer is not considered to have ceased the trade or business if such cessation is the result of a transaction to which section 381 of the Code applies, but in such case the acquiring corporation shall continue to be subject to this revenue procedure as though it were the acquired corporation.

2 With respect to a partnership:

In the event a partnership terminates or ceases to engage in the trade or business (within the meaning of section 708 of the Code), to which the adjustment (sections 5.05 and 5.06) relates, at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period referred to in section 5.06, the balance of the adjustment not previosuly taken into account in computing ordinary income shall be taken into account in such year. A partnership ceasing to engage in the trade or business includes the incorporation of such trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 applies (see Rev. Rul. 77-264, 1977-2 C.B. 187).

3 With respect to a sole proprietor:

If the taxpayer ceases to engage in the trade or business, to which the adjustment (sections 5.05 and 5.06) relates, at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period referred to in section 5.06, the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income shall be taken into account in such year. A sole proprietor ceasing to engage in the trade or business includes the incorporation of such trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 of the Code applies (see Rev. Rul. 77-264). A sole proprietorship does not cease to engage in that trade or business when the individual taxpayer sells a partial interest in the proprietorship and continues to be actively engaged in the management of the business that is subsequently operated as a partnership. The section 481(a) adjustment remaining at the time the partnership is formed is taken into account by the partnership as though there had been no change in ownership (see Rev. Rul. 66-206, 1966-2 C.B. 206).

.10 Discontinuance of LIFO.

Rev. Proc. 71-16, Rev. Proc. 71-16 Amendment I and Rev. Proc. 72-24 concern a taxpayer's request to discontinue the use of the LIFO inventory method. Such a change is a change in method of accounting within the meaning of sections 446 and 481 of the Code and is subject to the provisions of this revenue procedure. Consent to discontinue the use of the LIFO inventory method and change to another acceptable method of inventory accounting that the Service determines will clearly reflect income normally will be granted subject to the requirements of section 1.472-6 of the regulations and the provisions of this revenue procedure, provided the taxpayer agrees to:

1 an adjustment period determined in accordance with the rules set forth in section 5.06 of this revenue procedure;

2 not to elect the LIFO inventory method of accounting for a period of at least 10 taxable years beginning with the year of change, unless consent is granted by the Commissioner to change the method of accounting at an earlier time based on a showing of extraordinary circumstances; and

3 to comply with any other terms and conditions that may be prescribed by the Commissioner (see section 5.05).

.11 Full absorption method of inventory costing.

With respect to applications filed by manufacturers and producers for consent to change to the full absorption method of inventory costing prescribed by section 1.471-11(a) of the regulations, the adjustment period otherwise determined in section 5.06 shall not exceed 5 taxable years.

.12 Taxpayer under examination.

A taxpayer that has been contacted by a representative of the Service for the purpose of scheduling an examination of its federal income tax return may obtain consent to change its method of accounting under this revenue procedure provided the method to be changed is a Category B method as defined in section 6.03 of this revenue procedure. Consent to make the requested change will normally be granted provided the taxpayer proposes and agrees:

1 That the year of change shall generally be,

(a) if the method being changed involves an issue raised by the Service during such examination, the most recent taxable year that is being examined by the Service during the examination of the taxpayer's returns, but not later than the most recent taxable year for which a federal income tax return has been filed as of the date the examination began, or,

(b) in other cases, the applicable taxable year that would apply at the time the application is filed if the taxpayer had not been under examination;

2 If the method to be changed has been designated by a revenue ruling or revenue procedure that was published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin more than 2 years prior to the date the

Form 3115 is filed, as a change in method of accounting with respect to which section 5.12 2 applies, the adjustment period otherwise determined under section 5.06 shall not exceed 5 taxable years; and

3 To comply with any other terms and conditions that may be prescribed by the Commissioner (see section 5.05).

.13 Examples of the rules prescribed in section 5.061 with respect to the section 481(a) adjustment.

Example A:

Z timely files an application to change its method of accounting for a specific item of expense to a method that the Service determines will clearly reflect income beginning with the taxable year ending December 31, 1981 (year of change). Z has used the method of accounting that is being changed for 12 taxable years. The adjustment required under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change is $60,000. If Z had made the requested change in method of accounting for the taxable years ended December 31, 1978, 1979 or 1980, the amount of the adjustment would have been $42,000, $5,400 or $48,500, respectively. The percent of the section 481(a) net adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-taxable year period preceding the year of change is determined as follows:

1-Taxable Year Period

Adjustment as of January 1, 1981	$60,000
Less: Hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1980	48,500
Amount attributable to 1-taxable year period	$11,500

Percent of adjustment attributable to 1-taxable year period: $\frac{$11,500}{60,000} = 19\%$

2-Taxable Year Period

Adjustment as of January 1, 1981	$60,000
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1979	5,400
Amount of adjustment attributable to the 2-taxable year period	$54,600

Percent of adjustment attributable to the 2-taxable year period:

$$\frac{$54,600}{60,000} = 91\%$$

3-Taxable Year Period

Adjustment as of January 1, 1981	$60,000
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1978	42,000
Amount of adjustment attributable to the 3-taxable year period	$18,000

Percent of adjustment attributable to the 3-taxable year period:

$$\frac{$18,000}{60,000} = 30\%$$

Because 91 percent of the adjustment is attributable to the 2 taxable year period preceding the year of change, Z will take such 91 percent of the adjustment ($54,600) into account ratably over 3 taxable years beginning with the year of change (the taxable year ending December 31, 1981) and the remaining balance of the adjustment ($5,400) into account ratably over the next 7 taxable years beginning with the taxable year ending December 31, 1984.

Example B

Y timely files an application to change its method of accounting for valuing inventory to a method that is in accord with the provisions of section 1.471-4 of the regulations, beginning with its taxable year ending November 30, 1981. The information furnished shows that Y used its present method of valuing inventory for 9 taxable years prior to the year of change and that the net adjustment required under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change is $300,000. The information furnished further shows that had the change been made for the taxable year ending November 30, 1980, the adjustment required under section 481(a) would have been zero or a negative amount. Thus, the entire amount of the adjustment is attributable to the taxable year immediately preceding the proposed year of change. Under these circumstances and based on the provisions of section 5.061(a) of this revenue procedure, Y will take the entire $300,000 net adjustment into account in computing its taxable income for the taxable year ending November 30, 1981. If the information furnished had shown that had the change been made for the taxable year ending November 30, 1980, the adjustment required under section 481(a) would have been $300,000 and had the change been made for the taxable year ending November 30, 1979, the adjustment required under section 481(a) would be zero or a negative amount, the $300,000 would be taken into account ratably over the 3 taxable years beginning with the taxable year ending November 30, 1981.

Example C

W timely files an application to change its method of accounting for reporting income from long-term contracts from the percentage of completion method to the completed contract method, beginning with its taxable year ending September 30, 1981. The information furnished shows that W used the percentage of completion method for 4 taxable years prior to the year of change and the net negative adjustment required under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change is $55,000. The information furnished further shows that the highest percent of the net negative adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-taxable year peiod preceding the proposed year of change was 63 percent. Under these circumstances and based on the provisions of section 5.061(c) of this revenue procedure, W will take the $55,000 adjustment into account ratably over 4 taxable years beginning with the taxable year ending September 30, 1981.

Example D

The taxpayer, a wholesaler, has for the past 10 years omitted freight-in from the computation of inventories and now desires to correct this practice. The year of change is the taxable year beginning January 1, 1981. The value of the taxpayer's inventory as of December 31, 1980 (the end of the year preceding the year of change), was $365,000, which did not include freight-in. The amount of freight-in omitted from that inventory was $45,000. The value of the inventory as of January 1, 1981 (the beginning of the year of change), computed in accordance with the new method of accounting to be adopted by the taxpayer is $410,000. The change in method of accounting is treated as a change initiated by the taxpayer, and thus the net section 481(a) adjustment is $45,000 ($410,000 — $365,000).

The hypothetical section 481(a) adjustments that would have been required if made in the 1, 2, or 3-taxable year period immediately preceding the year of change are as follows:

1-taxable year period (Ending December 31, 1980)	$30,000
2-taxable year period (Ending December 31, 1979)	$25,000
3-taxable year period (Ending December 31, 1978)	$35,000

Computation of percentage of adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-taxable year period preceding the year of change.

	1-taxable year period	2-taxable year period	3-taxable year period
Section 481(a) adjustment as of 1-1-81	$45,000	$45,000	$45,000
Less: Hypothetical section 481(a) adjustment	30,000	25,000	35,000
Amount attributable to each taxable year period	$15,000	$20,000	$10,000
Percentage of adjustment attributable to each taxable year period	$\frac{$15,000}{$45,000} = 33\%$	$\frac{$20,000}{$45,000} = 44\%$	$\frac{$10,000}{$45,000} = 22\%$

Under the provisions of section 5.06 1(c) of this revenue procedure the $45,000 will be taken into income over 10 taxable years beginning January 1, 1981. Thus, the taxable income for the year ended December 31, 1981, based on the foregoing and the amounts indicated below, should be computed as follows:

Sales		$800,000
Inventory at beginning of year (freight-in of $45,000 included)	$410,000
Purchases (including freight-in)	585,000
	$995,000
Inventory at end of year including freight-in	335,000
Cost of Goods Sold		660,000
Gross Profit		140,000
Less deductions		85,000
		55,000
Agreed-to section 481(a) adjustment to be taken over the adjustment period of 10 years (1/10 × $45,000)		4,500
Taxable income December 31, 1981		$ 59,500

.01 Year of change.

The taxable year for which a change is effective is the year of change. The year of change is the first taxable year for taking the adjustment referred to in section 5.06 of this revenue procedure into account and for complying with any other terms and conditions set forth in the Commissioner's consent letter (see section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) of the regulations). See also section 5.12 of this revenue procedure.

.02 Category A method of accounting.

A Category A method of accounting is a method of accounting that is specifically not permitted to be used by the taxpayer by the Code, regulations, or by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. Examples of methods within Category A are:

1 Methods of inventory valuation listed in sections 1.471-2(f)(1) through (7) of the regulations.

2 A write-down of goods in inventory that does not comply with section 1.471-2(c) of the regulations. For example, goods are written down without being sold or offered for sale.

3 A write-down of any goods in inventory that does not comply with section 1.471-4(b) of the regulations. For example, see Rev. Rul. 77-364, 1977-2 C.B. 183, in which a taxpayer determined the market value of goods in inventory by dividing the inventory into classes based upon sales activities and then reducing the value of each class by a percentage of cost assigned thereto.

4 The write-down of what is regarded as "excess" inventory by a taxpayer to a net realizable value although such inventory has not been scrapped, sold, or offered for sale at the reduced price. (Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner, 439 U.S. 522 (1979), 1979-1 C.B. 167, and section 1.471-4(b) of the regulations.)

5 In the absence of a specific statutory or regulatory exception, the use of the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting for the sale of merchandise when such merchandise is an income-producing factor and therefore inventories are required. (Section 1.446-1(c)(2) and Example 1 of section 1.446-1(e)(2)(iii) of the regulations.)

6 The use of a long-term contract method of accounting for income from contracts that clearly do not involve building, installation, construction or manufacturing. (Section 1.451-3(b) of the regulations.)

7 The use by a manufacturer of a method of inventory costing that does not conform to the requirements of section 1.471-11 of the regulations relating to the full absorption method of inventory costing.

8 The use of a method of accounting other than that prescribed by section 447 of the Code by a farming corporation subject to that section.

9 The use, in taxable years beginning on or after September 19, 1979, of a method of accounting under section 1.163-4(a) of the regulations, which provides for the deduction of interest as original issue discount, with respect to obligations with a term of 1 year or less. (Section 1.1232-3(b)(1)(iii).)

.03 Category B method of accounting.

Category B methods are all methods other than those specifically not permitted to be used by the taxpayer by the Code, regulations or decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

.04 Filed.

For purposes of this revenue procedure, a Form 3115 is filed at the time it is mailed (under the rules of section 7502 of the Code) or delivered to, and received by, the Service.

SEC. 7. APPLICATION

.01 A taxpayer wishing to invoke the provisions of this revenue procedure should complete and file a current Form 3115 with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: T:C:C:1, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, and request the application of Rev. Proc. 80-51. The taxpayer must provide all the information required on such application (current Form 3115) and state that it proposes to take the adjustment into account over the appropriate period required by section 5.06 above. If the Service receives an application that is not properly completed in accordance with the instructions on the Form 3115, it will notify the taxpayer. Such notification will specify those items that need to be corrected and, when appropriate, transmit a current blank Form 3115 for the taxpayer's use. For example: The General Instructions contained on page 4 of the Form 3115 require a taxpayer to set forth all relevant facts regarding its present and proposed methods (as set forth in the application), including an explanation of why the taxpayer believes the application should be approved. In its notification, the Service will allow the taxpayer a reasonable period of time, ordinarily not more than 30 days, in which to submit the necessary information. If such information is submitted within the period of time granted by the Service, the application will be considered properly completed as of the date of original filing. If the information is not submitted within the time allowed, the application will be closed. If the information is received after the application is closed, it will be reopened and treated as a new application filed as of the date the information is received. The preceding four sentences shall not apply in the case of early applications submitted in accordance with section 4.03 of this revenue procedure.

.02 The signature of the individual or person preparing the application for the taxpayer must appear in the space at the bottom of page 1 on the Form 3115. An application made by an agent on behalf of a taxpayer must be accompanied by a power of attorney authorizing the agent to sign for the taxpayer. If the agent is also authorized to represent the taxpayer before the Service, receive the original or a copy of correspondence concerning the request, or perform any other act(s) regarding the application on behalf of the taxpayer, the power of attorney must reflect such authorization(s). If the taxpayer is a member of an affiliated group that has elected to file a consolidated federal income tax return, a Form 3115 submitted on behalf of the taxpayer must be signed by a duly authorized officer of the common parent. (See section 1.1502-77 of the regulations.)

.03 A request for the application of this revenue procedure under section 5.12 of this revenue procedure shall be made by the taxpayer in a letter addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: T:C:C:1. This request together with a properly completed current Form 3115 should be sent to the district director for the district in which the return is being examined. The district director will forward the application and pertinent comments to the National Office and suspend examination action on the accounting method issue pending completion of action by the National Office on the taxpayer's request. The district director should verify that the amount of the section 481 (a) adjustment is correct, that it has not been reduced by an amount attributable to taxable years prior to 1954, and that the adjustment period and year of change have been determined in accordance with section 5.12. The Form 3115 should not be sent to the National Office unless the taxpayer and district director are in agreement with respect to the year of change, the amount of the section 481(a) adjustment and the adjustment period. If the taxpayer and district director cannot agree as to these items, a technical advice request may be submitted to the National Office in accordance with Rev. Proc. 80-26, 1980-1 C.B. 671.

.04 Sections 9 (specifically subsections 9.10, 9.11, 9.15 and 9.21), 11, 15, 16 and 17 of Rev. Proc. 80-20, 1980-2 C.B. 633, pertaining respectively to Instructions to Taxpayers, Conference in the National Office, Withdrawal of Requests, Oral Advice to Taxpayers, and Effect of Rulings, are applicable to applications for changes in accounting methods (Form 3115) filed under this revenue procedure.

.01 Conferences in the National Office.

1 The taxpayer should state in writing at the time the Form 3115 is filed under this revenue procedure whether the taxpayer or the taxpayer's authorized representative desire a conference if an adverse response is contemplated by the Service. If a conference is not specifically requested in writing at the time the taxpayer files Form 3115 under this revenue procedure or in a later written communication, the Service will presume that the taxpayer does not desire a conference.

2 If the taxpayer specifically states in writing that a conference is desired if an adverse response is contemplated by the Service, a conference will be arranged in the National Office prior to the Service's formal reply to the taxpayer's application. See section 11, Rev. Proc. 80-20.

.02 Other offices of the Service.

The provisions of this revenue procedure are not intended to preclude an appropriate representative of the Service (including an appeals officer) from settling a particular taxpayer's case involving an accounting method issue by means of agreeing to terms and conditions in the best interest of the Government. In such case, the terms and conditions used for this purpose may not contain a provision that:

1 Permits an adjustment period of more than 10 taxable years or more years than the method has been used by the taxpayer, whichever is shorter;

2 Permits an adjustment period of more than 5 taxable years when the change is to the full absorption method of inventory costing; or

3 Establishes the year of change as a year later than the year specified in section 5.121(a).

However, the terms and conditions may be more restrictive than those provided by this revenue procedure.

SEC. 9. INQUIRIES

Inquiries in regard to this revenue procedure should refer to its number and be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: T:C:C:1, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

SEC. 10. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

.01 Rev. Proc. 74-11, 1974-1 C.B. 420 (pertaining to changes in method of depreciation accounting); Rev. Proc. 64-51, 1964-2 C.B. 1003 (pertaining to procedures for changing the method of accounting for bad debts from the specific charge-off method to the reserve method) as amplified by Rev. Proc. 70-15, 1970-1 C.B. 441 and as modified by Rev. Proc. 77-39, 1977-2 C.B. 573; and Rev. Proc. 80-5, 1980-1 C.B. 582 (pertaining to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner), are not affected by this revenue procedure. Form 3115 submitted by the taxpayer with respect to Rev. Proc. 74-11 is to be filed with the appropriate Internal Revenue Service Center and is not to be sent to the National Office.

.02 Rev. Proc. 76-8, and Rev. Proc. 74-51 are modified and superseded effective December 1, 1980.

.03 Rev. Proc. 72-24 is superseded effective December 1, 1980.

.04 Rev. Proc. 71-16 and Rev. Proc. 71-16 Amendment I are modified and superseded effective for applications for changes in accounting method (Form 3115) filed after December 1, 1980.

.05 Section 4.03 of Rev. Proc. 70-27 and section 2.03 of Rev. Proc. 75-18 are superseded effective December 1, 1982. All other provisions of Rev. Proc. 70-27 and Rev. Proc. 75-18 are superseded effective December 1, 1980.

Sec. 11. Effective Date

.01 The provisions of section 4.012 (taxpayer using a Category A method of accounting scheduled for an examination) and section 5.12 (taxpayer under examination, Category B method of accounting involved) of this revenue procedure are effective with respect to applications for change in accounting method (Form 3115) filed on or after December 1, 1982. However, the provisions of section 4.01 2 are effective with respect to Forms 3115 filed on or after December 1, 1980 with respect to changes in method of accounting to which: (1) Rev. Proc. 80-5 (which waives the 180-day rule and grants consent to taxpayers' applications to change from a method of accounting for inventory valuation of excess inventory, which is not in accordance with the prescribed method, to such prescribed method for the first taxable year ending on or after December 25, 1979) applies, or (2) Rev. Proc. 74-51 (full absorption inventory costing) applied.

.02 The provisions of section 5.10 (concerning discontinued use of the LIFO inventory method) are effective with respect to applications for change in accounting method (Form 3115) filed on or after December 1, 1980.

.03 The provisions of section 5.11 (concerning changes to the full absorption method) are effective with respect to changes granted after December 1, 1980. However, taxpayers who applied for and received the Commissioner's consent to change to the full absorption method of inventory costing prescribed by section 1.471-11(a) of the regulations and, pursuant to Rev. Proc. 74-51, an adjustment period of only 1 year was provided, may resubmit an application by March 1, 1981, requesting the adjustment period under section 5.06 (limited to 5 taxable years). This subsection 11.03 shall apply only if the taxable year the change to the full absorption method was originally granted is an open year under provisions of section 6501 of the Code and the taxpayer's change to the full absorption method of inventory costing was not in connection with an examination by the Service of the taxpayer's federal income tax return. Taxpayers that contemplate resubmitting an application under this subsection 11.03 may wish to protect the period of limitations for the year in which the change in method of accounting was first granted.

The application, a new Form 3115, should be filed with the National Office (see section 7 of this revenue procedure), together with a copy of the previous Form 3115 and a copy of the letter granting the full absorption change in method of accounting. As a condition to the granting of a revised Commissioner's consent letter, the taxpayer must propose and agree to pay the additional federal income tax due for the taxable years involved in the adjustment period. Upon the receipt of a revised Commissioner's consent letter granted pursuant to this subsection 11.03, the taxpayer must file an amended federal income tax return for the year of change with the appropriate Internal Revenue Service Center. Such amended return must be accompanied by a copy of the revised Commissioner's consent letter and amended returns prepared in accordance with the Commissioner's revised consent letter for all taxable years during the adjustment period with respect to which the original return has already been filed at the time of the filing of the amended return for the year of change. In order to assist in the processing of these amended returns, the taxpayer should include a covering letter clearly indicating that the amended returns are being filed in accordance with the provisions of subsection 11.03 of Rev. Proc. 80-51 and put at the top of each amended return: "FILED UNDER SECTION 11.03 OF REV. PROC. 80-51."

.04 All other provisions of this revenue procedure are effective December 1, 1980.

Proposed Tax Shelter Advisory Committee

Announcement 80-155

The Treasury Department has invited public comment on the desirability of establishing an advisory committee on issues concerning tax shelter opinions.

Proposed amendments to the regulations governing practice before the Internal Revenue Service for the purpose of setting standards for opinions used in tax shelter promotions were published in the Federal Register of September 4, 1980.

Treasury is considering the establishment of a committee to advise the Director of Practice on issues arising in the review of tax shelter opinions for compliance with the standards contained in the regulations. The committee would be established under the Federal Advisory Committee Act and would comprise a representative cross-section of individuals outside the government who are conversant with the tax shelter area.

Persons wishing to submit comments on the desirability of such an advisory committee and suggestions as to the scope of its duties, and any other relevant matters for the Treasury's consideration, are invited to write in triplicate, by December 19, 1980, to the Director of Practice, Department of the Treasury, Washington, D.C. 20220.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individual has been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

INCOME TAX

Investment credit; engraved plates and right to reproduce and distribute books. Limited partners in a partnership that purchased engraved plates and the right to reproduce and distribute books made from the plates may claim investment credit based only on the distinct cost of the engraved plates.

Rev. Rul. 80-328, page 9.

Arbitrage bonds; contemporaneous issuance of notes and bonds. Factual situations illustrate circumstances under which a political subdivision's short-term notes that are issued contemporaneously with long-term bonds will be arbitrage bonds.

Rev. Rul. 80-329, page 14.

Charitable contributions; bibles. A promoter offers investors a choice of two plans to purchase bibles and donate them to charities. Under one plan, investors purchase the bibles and donate them to charity 12 months later. The investors are told that they may deduct the "retail" price, which is three times as high as the purchase price. Under the other plan, investors purchase the bibles at the "retail" price, put down the same amount as the purchase price in the first plan, and execute promissory notes for the balance. Principal and interest on the notes is payable in 12 years. The investors then donate the bibles to charity. The deduction is limited to the cash paid in the second plan.

Rev. Rul. 80-330, page 6.

National Historic Preservation Act of 1966. Payments received by a taxpayer under section 101 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 are includible in the taxpayer's gross income.

Rev. Rul. 80-331, page 7.

Surplus campaign funds transferred to office account. Surplus campaign funds transferred to an officeholder's office account are includible in gross income for the year the funds are transferred. Amounts disbursed from the office account for ordinary and necessary expenses of serving as an officeholder are deductible under section 162(a) of the Code, provided the expenses otherwise qualify under that section and are not reimbursable.

Rev. Rul. 80-332, page 8.

Gross income; members of religious organization; outside earnings remitted to organization. A member of a religious organization who has taken a vow of poverty and is instructed by the organization's superiors to obtain outside employment must include the remuneration remitted to the organization in gross income. Another member of the organization who has taken a vow of poverty and is instructed to perform services in the business office of the church that supervises the organization is not required to include the remuneration remitted to the organization in gross income. Rev. Rul. 77-290 amplified.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

(Also Section 38; 1.38-1.)

Investment credit; engraved plates and right to reproduce and distribute books. Limited partners in a partnership that purchased engraved plates and the right to reproduce and distribute books made from the plates may claim investment credit based only on the distinct cost of the engraved plates.

Rev. Rul. 80-327 [1]

ISSUE

Is a partnership entitled to use as its basis for the investment tax credit the amount paid to acquire engraved plates and the right to reproduce and distribute books made from the plates, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

In March 1979 P, a corporation, contracted with certain book publishers to acquire the engraved plates necessary to print the text of hardcover and softcover books for 32 different literary works and the rights to print, publish, distribute, and sell the books in the English language. P paid 1,080*x* dollars in cash for these assets.

In August 1979 P offered to sell to individuals 24 units of a limited partnership, X, in which P would be the general partner. The purchase price of each unit of the limited partnership was 45*x* dollars, payable with a cash downpayment of 30*x* dollars and a promissory note of 15*x* dollars. The investor was personally liable on the promissory note, which was payable to P on February 15, 1980, with interest at the rate of 10 percent per annum.

P represented that each partner would be entitled to (1) a share of the investment tax credit based upon the purchase price of 1,080*x* dollars and (2) a share of the partnership losses, subject to the amount each is at risk within the meaning of section 465 of the Internal Revenue Code.

X acquired the engraved plates and the publication rights from P. From each set of plates, a number of books were printed and distributed for sale prior to December 31, 1979. A, who purchased one of the partnership units, deducted on A's 1979 income tax return a share of the partnership losses limited to A's at risk amount of 30*x* dollars and claimed a share of the investment tax credit based on the investment in the book properties.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 38 of the Internal Revenue Code allows a credit against federal income tax for qualified investment in "section 38 property" as defined in section 48. Section 48(a)(1) provides that only certain tangible property, which is depreciable and has a useful life of 3 years or more qualifies as section 38 property. Section 1.48-1(f) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that intangible property does not qualify as section 38 property.

The investment tax credit is allowed only for tangible property. Engraved plates are tangible property that is necessary to produce hardcover and softcover books. The legal right to print, publish, distribute and sell books is an item of property separate and distinct from the plates necessary for the mechanical production of those books. The particular plates in question do not, in themselves, carry the right to print the work. Similar plates could be produced once the legal right to print, produce, distribute and sell the work is acquired. The right to reproduce and distribute hardcover and softcover books in the English language is one of several reproduction rights that emanate from the copyright of a literary work. That right is an intangible. See Rev. Rul. 70-403, 1970-2 C.B. 3. The investment tax credit, therefore, is applicable only to the tangible assets, which are the engraved plates. Thus, the maximum basis for purposes of computing the credit would be the distinct cost of the engraved plates.

During 1979, A's amount at risk is limited to the cash invested of 30*x* dollars. A is not at risk with respect to the amount of the promissory note payable to P, because P has an interest in the activity other than that of a creditor. See Section 465(b)(3)(A) of the Code.

HOLDING

X may claim the investment tax credit based on the cost of the engraved plates only.

National Historic Preservation Act of 1966. Payments received by a taxpayer under section 101 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 are includible in the taxpayer's gross income.

Rev. Rul. 80-330

ISSUE

Are payments received by taxpayers pursuant to the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, section 101, 16 U.S.C. sections 470 to 470t (1976), as amended, includible in their gross incomes?

FACTS

Under 16 U.S.C. section 470a, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to establish a program of matching grants-in-aid to states for projects having as their purpose the preservation for public benefit of properties that are significant in American history, architecture, archeology, and culture. The term "project" means programs of state and local governments and other public bodies and private organizations and individuals for the acquisition of title or interests in, and for the development of, any district, site, building, structure, or object that is significant in American history, architecture, archeology, and culture, or property used in connection therewith, and for its development in order to assure the preservation for public benefit of any such historical properties. The term "historic preservation" includes the protection, rehabilitation, restoration, and reconstruction of districts, sites, buildings, structures, and objects significant in American history, architecture, archeology, or culture.

[1] Also released as News Release IR 80-118, dated November 14, 1980.

Upon approval of an application submitted to the Department of the Interior, grant funds, not exceeding 50 percent of the total cost of the project, are awarded by the Department to the state. The state distributes the federal funds to the persons responsible for the various programs for which the federal funds are awarded. Properties for which funds are provided must be included in or eligible for inclusion in the National Register of historic places.

A, a professional person, purchased a house that is included in the National Register and received grant funds from the state to restore the house, which A intended to use only as an office.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code and the Income Tax Regulations thereunder provide that, except as otherwise provided by law, gross income means all income from whatever source derived.

The Internal Revenue Service has consistently held that payments made under legislatively provided social benefit programs for the promotion of general welfare are not includible in the recipients' gross incomes. See, for example, Rev. Rul. 76-395, 1976-2 C.B. 16, concerning home rehabilitation grants received under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-383, 1974-2 C.B. 418, and Rev. Rul. 76-144, 1976-1 C.B. 17, concerning grants received under the Disaster Relief Act Amendments of 1974, Pub. L. 93-288, 1974-2 C.B. 414.

The payments in this case are distinguished from welfare program payments such as those involved in Rev. Rul. 76-395 and Rev. Rul. 76-144. The ultimate recipients of the payments in this case can be governmental units and other organizations exempt from federal income taxation and they can be taxpayers, including individuals, corporations, and unincorporated entities. Payments made to individuals can be made with respect to the individual's personal residence, and they can be made with respect to property used in the individual's trade or business or for the production of income. Thus, the payments are not based on an individual recipient's personal financial status, health, educational background, or employment status, nor are they intended to improve the living conditions of low-income homeowners. Rather, the purpose of the payments is to preserve historically significant structures. Thus, the payments are not made under a social benefit program for the promotion of general welfare.

HOLDING

The payments received by A are includible in A's gross income under section 61 of the Code. Because the house is used in A's trade or business, A is entitled to a deduction under section 191, concerning amortization of certain rehabilitation expenditures for certified historic structures, or section 167(o) concerning depreciation with respect to such structures.

26 CFR 1.61-1: Gross income.

Surplus campaign funds transferred to office account. Surplus campaign funds transferred to an officeholder's office account are includible in gross income for the year the funds are transferred. Amounts disbursed from the office account for ordinary and necessary expenses of serving as an officeholder are deductible under section 162(a) of the Code, provided the expenses otherwise qualify under that section and are not reimbursable.

Rev. Rul. 80-331

ISSUE

What are the federal income tax consequences to an officeholder of transfers of excess campaign funds to an office account?

FACTS

The transfer of excess campaign funds to an office account is specifically permitted under the Federal Election Campaign Act (FECA), 2 U.S.C. section 439a (1976), which is implemented by regulations issued by the Federal Election Commission (FEC), 11 CFR 113.

Section 113.2 of the FEC regulations provides, in part, that excess campaign funds may be used to defray any ordinary and necessary expenses incurred in connection with the recipient's duties as a holder of federal office.

Section 113.1(e) of the FEC regulations provides that the term "excess campaign funds" means amounts received by a candidate as contributions that the candidate determines are in excess of any amount necessary to defray the candidate's campaign expenditures.

Section 113.1(b) of the FEC regulations provides, in part, that the term "office account" means an account established for the purposes of supporting the activities of a federal officeholder that contains excess campaign funds and funds donated for the purpose of supporting the activities of the officeholder. An office account does not include (1) an account used exclusively for funds appropriated by Congress, (2) an account of the officeholder that contains only the personal funds of the officeholder, or (3) an account containing only appropriated funds and personal funds of the officeholder.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61(a) of the Internal Revenue Code and the Income Tax Regulations thereunder provide that, except as otherwise provided by law, gross income means all income from whatever source derived.

Section 162(a) of the Code provides that a taxpayer may deduct all the ordinary and necessary expenses incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business.

Section 527(a) of the Code provides that a political organization is subject to income taxation only to the extent provided in section 527.

Section 527(e)(1) of the Code provides that the term "political organization" means a party, committee, association, fund, or other organization (whether or not incorporated) organized and operated primarily for the purpose of directly or indirectly accepting contributions or making expenditures, or both, for an exempt function.

Section 527(e)(2) of the Code provides that the term "exempt function" means the function of influencing or attempting to influence the selection, nominating, election, or appointment of any individual to any federal, state, or local public office or office in a political organization, or the election of presidential or vice-presidential electors, whether or not such individual or electors are selected, nominated, elected, or appointed.

Section 527(d) of the Code provides that an amount is not treated as diverted for the personal use of a candidate or any other person if any political organization contributes the amount to or for the use of another qualifying political organization or certain charitable organizations or deposits the amount in the general fund of the Treasury or in the general fund of any state or local government.

In discussing the provisions of section 527(d) of the Code, Rep. No. 93-1357, 93rd Cong., 2d Sess. 30 (1974), 1975-1 C.B. 517, 534, states: "As under present law, when amounts are diverted from a political organization by a candidate for his personal use, the amount diverted is taxable income to the candidate in the year in which the funds are diverted."

When excess campaign funds are transferred to an office account, they are diverted for the personal use of the officeholder because the transfer is not an expenditure for an exempt function as defined in section 527(e)(2) of the Code and because the transfer is not a contribution or deposit described in section 527(d).

HOLDINGS

(1) Excess campaign funds transferred to an officeholder's office account are includible in the gross income of the officeholder under section 61 of the Code for the year in which the funds are transferred.

(2) Amounts disbursed from the office account for ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred by the officeholder during the taxable year in carrying on the officeholder's trade or business as an officeholder are deductible under section 162(a) of the Code, provided the requirements of that section are otherwise satisfied and the expenses are not reimbursable.

Earnings of members remitted to religious organization. A member of a religious organization who has taken a vow of poverty and is instructed by the organization's superiors to obtain outside employment must include the remuneration remitted to the organization in gross income, and the remuneration is subject to FICA and income tax withholding. Another member of the organization who has also taken a vow of poverty and is instructed to perform services in the business office of the church that supervises the organization is not required to include the remuneration remitted to the organization in gross income, and the remuneration is not wages subject to FICA. An organization that is substantially dependent on wages earned by some of its members from outside employment does not qualify for exemption under section 501(d) of the Code. Rev. Rul. 77-290 amplified.

Rev. Rul. 80-332

ISSUE

Is Rev. Rul. 77-290, 1977-2 C.B. 26, applicable to members of an organization described in section 501(d) of the Internal Revenue Code?

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Rev. Rul. 77-290 holds that a member of a religious order, who has taken a vow of poverty and is instructed by the order's superiors to obtain employment with a law firm in the state is an agent of the law firm, not the religious order, and must include the remuneration remitted to the order in gross income. The remuneration is wages subject to the taxes imposed by the Federal Insurance Contributions Act and income tax withholding.

Rev. Rul. 77-290 also holds that another member of the same order who has also taken a vow of poverty and is instructed by the order's superiors to perform services in the business office of the church that supervises the order is an agent of the religious order and is not required to include the remuneration remitted to the order in gross income. In this situation the remuneration is not wages subject to the FICA and income tax withholding.

Section 501(d) of the Code provides for the exemption from federal income tax of religious or apostolic associations or corporations, if such associations or corporations have a common treasury or community treasury, even if such associations or corporations engage in business for the common benefit of the members.

HOLDING

Although Rev. Rul. 77-290 deals with members of religious orders, the reasoning set forth in Rev. Rul. 77-290 equally applies to members of organizations described in section 501(d) of the Code and of other religious organizations who have taken a vow of poverty.

Furthermore, it should be noted that if an organization is substantially dependent on wages earned by some of its members from outside employment, rather than on an internally operated business, it does not qualify for exemption from federal income tax under section 501(d) of the Code. See Rev. Rul. 78-100, 1978-1 C.B. 162.

Arbitrage bonds; contemporaneous issuance of notes and bonds. Factual situations illustrate circumstances under which a political subdivision's short-term notes that are issued contemporaneously with long-term bonds will be arbitrage bonds.

Rev. Rul. 80-328 [1]

ISSUE

Will notes of political subdivisions of states be arbitrage bonds within the meaning of section 103(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code in the situations described below?

FACTS

Situation 1

On November 14, 1980, authority M, a political subdivision of state O, proposes to issue $185x$ dollars of 5-year notes. Of the note proceeds, $176x$ dollars will be used to acquire newly created mortgages on single-family residences; $6x$ dollars will be deposited into a "reasonably required" reserve fund; and $3x$ dollars will be used to pay for the issuance costs of the notes. The notes will be issued at a yield of 7 percent. Note proceeds of $176x$ dollars are to be invested in United States Treasury Obligations at an unrestricted yield of 8.25 percent for a temporary period until used to acquire the mortgages. The mortgages to be acquired with the $176x$ dollars of note proceeds will have a yield of 8.5 percent while subject to the lien of the notes and 10.5 percent thereafter.

Also, on November 14, 1980, M will issue $204x$ dollars of 30-year bonds. Of the bond proceeds, $176x$ dollars will be deposited in a note retirement fund; $24x$ dollars will be deposited into a reasonably required reserve fund; and $4x$ dollars will be used to pay issuance costs of the bonds. The bonds were issued at a yield of 9 percent and will be invested at a yield of 9 percent in United States Treasury Obligations — State and Local Government Series (SLGS) until the note retirement date. On the note retirement date the mortgages that are not more than 90 days delinquent in payment of the principal and interest will be transferred from the lien of the notes to the lien of the bonds. At that time an amount of bond proceeds from the note retirement fund equal to the outstanding principal amount of the transferred mortgages will be used for retirement of an equivalent portion of the notes. Any amount remaining in the note retirement fund after the mortgages are transferred will be used to redeem a portion of the bonds. The trustee under the note indenture will either sell or foreclose on mortgages not transferred to the lien of the bonds.

Based on the national experience with mortgages and the issuer's prior experience with similar mortgage purchase programs, the issuer reasonably expects that more than 99 percent of the mortgages will be transferred to the lien of the bonds on note retirement date.

On November 14, 1980, authority N, a political subdivision of state P, proposes to issue $76x$ dollars of 3-year notes yielding 7 percent. The proceeds of the notes will be used to make construction mortgage loans to developers of various multi-family housing projects. The projects to be financed out of note proceeds will be eligible for housing assistance payments under section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, 42 U.S.C. section 1437f. N anticipates that construction of the projects will be completed within 3 years of the date of issue of the notes. Note proceeds will be invested for a temporary period pending disbursement in Treasury Obligations at an unrestricted yield of 8.50 percent.

In addition, N proposes to issue on December 1, 1980, $80x$ dollars of 30-year bonds yielding 9 percent. The note proceeds will not be expended until bonds are issued. Of the bond proceeds, $76x$ dollars will be deposited into the Bond Proceeds Account and $4x$ dollars will be deposited into the Debt Service Reserve Fund. All of the bond proceeds will be held as security for the bondholders until construction on the projects is completed, at which time proceeds in the Bond Proceeds Account will be used to pay the principal on N's notes. While the notes are outstanding, bond proceeds held in the Bond Proceeds Account will be invested in SLGS yielding 9 percent.

If a project is not completed within 3 years of the date of issuance of the notes, amounts in the Bond Proceeds Account will be used to redeem bonds on that date.

All mortgage loans will be insured under the cash payment mortgage insurance program administered by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA), whether the construction mortgage loans are provided by the notes or the bonds. This insurance program will provide for payments of approximately 99 percent of the principal amount of an outstanding mortgage loan in the event of default by a mortgagor.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on the obligations of a state, a territory, or a possession of the United States, or any political subdivision of the foregoing, or of the District of Columbia.

Section 103(c)(1) of the Code provides that, with certain minor exceptions, the interest on any arbitrage bond will not be excludable from gross income.

Section 103(c)(2) of the Code provides that the term "arbitrage bond" means any obligation that is issued as part of an issue all or a major portion (more than 15 percent) of the proceeds of which are reasonably expected to be used directly or indirectly (A) to acquire securities or obligations that may be reasonably expected at the time of issuance of such issue, to produce a yield over the term of the issue that is materially higher than the yield on obligations of such issue, or (B) to replace funds that were used directly or indirectly to acquire securities or obligations described in section 103(c)(2)(A).

Section 1.103-13(a)(2)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations provides, in part, that the determination whether an obligation is an arbitrage bond depends on the issuer's reasonable expectations, as of the date of issue, regarding the amount and the use of proceeds of the issue.

Section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations defines the term "materially higher" in those situations in which it is reasonably expected that the original proceeds of an issue will exceed the amount necessary for the governmental purpose or purposes of the issue by more than 5 percent of such amount. Any portion of the issue issued solely for the purpose of investing such portion at a materially higher yield as less than a major portion is not issued for a governmental purpose. The yield produced by acquired obligations acquired with the proceeds of such issue (including any acquired obligations held during the temporary periods described in section 1.103-14(b), any amounts invested in the reserve or replacement fund as defined in section 1.103-14(d), and any investments of less than a major portion of such proceeds as described in section 1.103-13(b)(1)) is materially higher than the yield produced by an issue of governmental obligations if the yield produced by the acquired obligations is higher than $Y+[($5,000 \times Y) \div P]$ where "Y" stands for the yield on the issue and "P" stands for the amount of the original proceeds of the issue. Nothing in this subdivision implies that a deliberate over-issuance of less than 5 percent will not be treated as an artifice or device under section 1.103-13(j).

Section 1.103-13(j) of the regulations provides that if an artifice or device is employed in connection with the issuance of a governmental obligation, such obligation will be considered an arbitrage bond within the meaning of section 103(c)(2) of the Code. For purposes of this section, the term "artifice or device" means a transaction or a series of transactions that attempts to circumvent the provisions of section 103(c) of the Code or sections 1.101-13, -14, or -15 of the regulations—(1) enabling the issuer to exploit the difference between tax-exempt and taxable interest rates to gain a material financial advantage and (2) increasing the burden on the market for tax-exempt obligations.

Section 1.103-13(j) of the regulations further provides that examples of increased burdens on the market for tax-exempt obligations include selling obligations that would not otherwise be sold, selling more obligations than would otherwise be necessary, and issuing obligations sooner or allowing them to remain outstanding longer than would otherwise be necessary.

As a general rule, the term "arbitrage bond" includes any obligation which is issued as part of an issue all or a major portion of the proceeds of which are reasonably expected to be used directly or indirectly to replace funds that were used directly or indirectly to acquire securities that may be reasonably expected to produce a yield that is materially higher than the yield on the obligations of such issue. When an issuer issues long-term bonds and short-term notes contemporaneously to provide for the same project, and the proceeds of the notes are used to finance the construction costs of the project while the bond proceeds are invested, the notes replace the bonds within the meaning of section 103(c)(2)(B) of the Code. Thus, the bond proceeds are replaced proceeds and have the same status and are subject to the same yield restrictions as the note proceeds. See Example (1) of section 1.103-14(e)(7) of the regulations. In Situation 1 and Situation 2, the bond proceeds will be invested in securities of a materially higher yield than the yield on the notes.

In addition, as a general rule, short-term notes are issued in connection with a project to provide interim financing until market conditions are conducive to the issuance of long-term bonds to provide permanent financing for that project. If an issuer reasonably expects to issue long-term bonds as permanent financing for the project at the commencement of the project, then interim financing in the form of short-term notes is not necessary for the purpose of providing the project. In Situation 1, M will issue short-term notes and long-term bonds. M's notes will not be issued to acquire the mortgage loans because permanent financing will already have been placed. In Situation 2, N will issue long-term bonds on a date certain on or before the commencement of its project of providing low-cost, multi-family housing. N will also issue short-term notes two weeks earlier than the date on which it reasonably expects to issue its bonds. Although N's notes will be issued before its bonds, the notes will not provide interim financing for N's project, because N reasonably expects to issue its long-term financing on a date certain on or before the commencement of its project. Thus, N's notes will not be issued to provide the project.

Consequently, in Situation 1, the issuance by M of 176*x* dollars of notes contemporaneously with the issuance of 204*x* dollars of bonds will exceed the amount necessary for the governmental purpose of acquiring newly created mortgages on single-family residences by more than 5 percent. Similarly, in Situation 2, the issuance by N of $76x$ dollars of notes that are issued contemporaneously with the issuance of the $80x$ dollars of bonds will exceed the amount necessary for the governmental purpose of providing low-cost family housing by more than 5 percent. Thus, M's notes and N's notes are an over-issuance within the meaning of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations. Because M and N have made an over-issuance the yield restrictions of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) apply to the investment of note proceeds. In Situation 1 and Situation 2 the applicable yield restrictions will be exceeded.

In Situation 1 and Situation 2, the issuance of the 7 percent notes contemporaneously with the issuance of the 9 percent bonds will permit M and N to exploit the difference between the tax-exempt and taxable interest rates to gain a material financial advantage within the meaning of section 1.103-13(j)(1) of the regulations. By using the proceeds of the 7 percent notes to provide the projects (instead of the proceeds of the 9 percent bonds) and investing the bond proceeds in taxable securities yielding 9 percent, during the term of the notes the overall cost of borrowing to M and N will be 2 percentage points lower than it would have been if the notes had not been issued and the bond proceeds had been used to provide the projects. This reduced cost of borrowing is a material financial advantage that M and N will be able to gain as a result of having issued notes at the tax-exempt rate of 7 percent to carry the investment of the bond proceeds in taxable securities yielding 9 percent. In other words, the economic effect of the contemporaneous issuance of the notes and bonds is the same as if M and N had used the proceeds of the 9 percent bonds to provide the projects, invested the proceeds of the tax-exempt notes yielding 7 percent in taxable securities yielding 9 percent during the term of the notes, and used the arbitrage profits on this investment to lower the overall cost of borrowing during the term of the notes by 2 percentage points. See also Rev. Rul. 80-13, 1980-1 C.B. 27, in which the issuance of unnecessary bonds and the investment of the bond proceeds at a materially higher yield is an artifice or device. Furthermore, by issuing both notes and bonds contemporaneously in an aggregate principal amount of approximately twice the actual cost of their respective projects to gain this financial advantage, M and N will have sold more obligations, and allowed them to remain outstanding longer, than otherwise would be necessary. Thus, both M and N will have entered into a series of transactions that will have the effect of increasing the burden on the market for tax-exempt obligations within the meaning of section 1.103-13(j)(2). Consequently, in both situations M and N will issue their notes in connection with an artifice or device within the meaning of section 1.103-13(j).

HOLDING

In Situation 1 and Situation 2 the notes will be arbitrage bonds within the meaning of section 103(c)(2) of the Code. Therefore, interest on M's notes and N's notes will not be excludable from the gross income of the noteholders under section 103(a)(1).

Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses

26 CFR 1.162-1: Business expenses.

26 CFR 1.162-2: Traveling expenses.

Commuting expenses; construction worker. The Service will not follow the Frederick decision, which held that daily commuting expenses incurred over a three-year period by a construction worker who reasonably expected to be laid off when winter came were ordinary and necessary business expenses.

Rev. Rul. 80-333

The Internal Revenue Service will not follow the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in Frederick v. United States, 603 F.2d 1292 (8th Cir. 1979), as a precedent in the disposition of similar cases.

In Frederick, the court held that the transportation expenses incurred over a three-year period by the taxpayer in traveling daily from the taxpayer's home to a missile site where the taxpayer was employed as a carpenter were deductible as ordinary and necessary business expenses. The court held that because the taxpayer expected to be laid off when winter came and only a very small crew was needed for indoor construction work, the taxpayer was reasonable in expecting to be employed on the project only for a temporary period of time.

The Eighth Circuit's approach conflicts in principle with a long line of judicial authority holding that such expenses are not deductible. See Commissioner v. Flowers, 326 U.S. 465 (1946), Peurifoy v. Commissioner, 254 F.2d 483 (4th Cir. 1957), aff'd per curiam, 358 U.S. 59 (1958), Boone v. United States, 482 F.2d 417 (5th Cir. 1973), and Babeaux v. Commissioner, 601 F.2d 730 (4th Cir. 1979). It is also contrary to the published position of the Internal Revenue Service on the matter. See Rev. Rul. 60-189, 1960-1 C.B. 60. Accordingly, similar cases that arise in all circuits other than the Eighth Circuit will be disposed of in conformity with established judicial doctrine and the prior published ruling, and the Service will continue to hold that such expenses are not deductible.

26 CFR 1.162-21: Fines and penalties.

Business expenses; settlement payment; Department of Energy consent order. A payment to the U.S. Treasury, under a consent order specifically precluding imposition of civil or criminal penalties, that is made in settlement of claims and disputes resulting from a Department of Energy examination of a taxpayer's books and records is not a fine or similar penalty for purposes of section 162(f) of the Code and is deductible as an ordinary and necessary business expense. Such a payment made pursuant to a consent order requiring the imposition of a penalty for willful violation of the petroleum pricing statutes, however, is not deductible.

Rev. Rul. 80-334

ISSUE

Is a payment made by a taxpayer to the United States Treasury in a settlement of claims and disputes resulting from the examination of the taxpayer's books and records by the Department of Energy a fine or similar penalty for purposes of section 162(f) of the Internal Revenue Code and therefore not deductible as a business expense under section 162(a)?

FACTS

The taxpayer, a domestic corporation dealing in petroleum products, is subject to the jurisdiction of the United States Department of Energy with respect to petroleum pricing. The taxpayer's books and records were examined by the Department of Energy to determine whether the taxpayer was in compliance with their regulations.

Section 205.199J(a) and (e) of the Department of Energy Regulations (10 CFR 202.199J), provides as follows:

> (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subpart, the DOE [Department of Energy] may at any time resolve an outstanding compliance investigation or proceeding, or a proceeding involving the disallowances of costs pursuant to § 205.119E with a Consent Order. A Consent Order must be signed by the person to whom it is issued, or a duly authorized representative, and must indicate agreement to the terms contained therein. A Consent Order need not constitute an admission by any person that DOE regulations have been violated, nor need it constitute a finding by the DOE that such person has violated DOE regulations. A Consent Order shall, however, set forth the relevant facts which form the basis for the Order.
> (e) Notwithstanding the issuance of a Consent Order, the DOE may seek civil or criminal penalties or compromise civil penalties pursuant to Subpart P concerning matters encompassed by the Consent Order, unless the Consent Order by its terms expressly precludes the DOE from so doing.

The taxpayer and the Department of Energy entered into a consent order to settle all claims and disputes resulting from the examination. The consent order specifically states that the Department of Energy has determined that the imposition of civil or criminal penalties would be inappropriate because the violation was unintentional, and that such penalties would not be sought from the taxpayer with respect to the period covered by the consent order.

The consent order requires the taxpayer to refund to its purchasers 5,000x dollars, of which 3,200x dollars is to be made available to purchasers of gasoline; 900x dollars to purchasers of No. 2 oils, 600x dollars to purchasers of general refinery products, and 300x dollars to purchasers of aviation jet fuel.

The first of three refund procedures set forth in the consent order provides that a specified portion of the 3,200x dollars will be refunded to purchasers of gasoline from the taxpayer's proprietary stations through a price reduction that will remain in effect until the specified amount has been refunded.

The second refund procedure involves refunds to nonretail and large volume retail customers of the taxpayer during the period covered by the consent order. These customers will be given the opportunity to obtain individual refunds by entering into a participation agreement with taxpayer within a specified time period.

Under the terms of a participation agreement a customer will receive the refund attributable to it under the consent order in return for its waiver and release of any and all claims against the taxpayer with respect to any possible regulatory violations that may have been committed during the period covered by the consent order. The agreement also will require the customer to submit to its own nonretail customers, if any, an application for secondary participation in the refund. The secondary participation agreement also will require the secondary participant to submit to its own nonretail customers, if any, a similar application for participation in the refund. This is to insure that the refund under this provision be passed on to the end-users or ultimate consumers.

If a customer fails to execute a timely participation agreement, the amount of the refund attributable to such customer is to be transferred to a common fund. Also, amounts withheld by or returned to the taxpayer because of the inability of its customers to pass through refunds in accordance with the terms of the participation agreements and secondary participation agreements to the end-users or ultimate consumers are to be deposited in this common fund. Interest earned on such fund will also be added as part of the fund.

The amount of any judgements or settlements paid by the taxpayer after the effective date of the consent order on account of alleged violations of federal petroleum price and allocation statutes or regulations committed during the period covered by the consent order will be subtracted from the common fund.

Subsequent to the expiration of a specified time period after the effective date of the consent order, there will be subtracted from the common fund an amount to serve as a reserve sufficient to cover the taxpayer's maximum creditable exposure to liability in civil actions based upon alleged regulatory violations during the period covered by the consent order.

The third refund procedure (this procedure will be invoked after the second refund procedure has been complied with) will distribute any monies remaining in the common fund, created as a result of the second refund procedure, through a price reduction on gasoline to purchasers from the taxpayer's proprietary stations until such fund is exhausted.

Under the terms of the consent order monies remaining in the reserve described above after the termination of all civil actions will be remitted to the United States Treasury. Thus, the unclaimed portion of the reserve fund would be paid to the United States Treasury, rather than to the party to whom the inventory item was sold because such party failed to take any action. The consent order does not indicate that the payment to the United States Treasury would be considered to be a fine or penalty. It is a method of closing out such reserve fund by a single payment. The other alternative for the disposition of the reserve fund would be to refund such amount through a price reduction on gasoline to purchasers from the taxpayer's proprietory stations until such reserve fund is exhausted.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 162(a) of the Code provides that there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business.

Section 162(f) of the Code provides that no deduction shall be allowed under section 162(a) for any fine or similar penalty paid to a government for the violation of any law.

Section 1.162-21(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that for purposes of section 1.162-21 a fine or similar penalty includes an amount—

> (i) paid pursuant to conviction or a plea of guilty or nolo contendere for a crime (felony or misdemeanor) in a criminal proceeding;
> (ii) paid as a civil penalty imposed by federal, state, or local law, including additions to tax and additional amounts and assessable penalties imposed by chapter 68 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954;
> (iii) paid in settlement of the taxpayer's actual or potential liability for a fine or penalty (civil or criminal); or
> (iv) forfeited as collateral posted in connection with a proceeding which could result in imposition of such a fine or penalty.

Section 162(f) was added to the Code by section 902(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1969, Pub. L. 91-172, 1969-3 C.B. 10, 147.

The legislative history of section 162(f) indicates that the purpose of adding section 162(f) to the Code was to codify the general court position with respect to fines and penalties. S. Rep. No. 91-552, 91st Cong., 1st Sess. 1645, 2311-12 (1969), 1963-3 C.B. 423, 597, provides as follows:

> First, the committee amendments provide that no deduction is to be allowed for any fine or similar penalty paid to a government for the violation of any law. This provision is to apply in any case in which the taxpayer is required to pay a fine because he is convicted of a crime (felony or misdemeanor) in a full criminal proceeding in an appropriate court. This represents a codification of the general court position in this respect.

The general court position referred to above is that set forth by the Supreme Court of the United States in Tank Truck Rentals v. Commissioner, 356 U.S. 30 (1958), Ct. D. 1819, 1958-1 C.B. 502, the only Supreme Court case on this subject. The rule announced by the Supreme Court in Tank Truck Rentals denied a deduction for any fine or penalty if the allowance of the deduction would severely frustrate a sharply defined national policy. The purpose of this rule was to prevent favorable tax treatment from "blunting the sting" of a validly imposed penalty by allowing the taxpayer a deduction for federal income tax purposes.

S. Rep. No. 91-552 further indicates:

> The provision for the denial of the deduction for payments in these situations [including fines or similar penalties] which are deemed to violate public policy is intended to be all inclusive. Public policy, in other circumstances, generally is not sufficiently clearly defined to justify the disallowance of deductions. [Emphasis added.]

The Senate Finance Committee, in explaining Section 310 of the Revenue Act of 1971, Pub. L. 92-178, 1972-1 C.B. 443, discussed section 162(f) of the Code. The Committee stated:

> In connection with the proposed regulations relating to the disallowance of deductions for fines and similar penalties (sec. 162(f)), questions have been raised as to whether the provision applies only to criminal "penalties" or also to civil penalties as well. In approving the provisions dealing with fines and similar penalties in 1969, it was the intention of the committee to disallow deductions for payments of sanctions which are imposed under civil statutes but which in general terms serve the same purpose as a fine exacted under a criminal statute. The provision was intended to apply, for example, to penalties provided for under the Internal Revenue Code in the form of assessable penalties (subchapter B of chapter 68) as well as to additions to tax under the internal revenue laws (subchapter A of chapter 68) in those cases where the government has the fraud burden of proof (i.e., proof by clear and convincing evidence). It was also intended that this rule should apply to similar type payments under the laws of a state or other jurisdiction. S. Rep. 92-437, 92nd Cong., 1st Sess. 73, 74 (1971), 1972-1 C.B. 559, 600.

Here, although the consent order provides for the balance remaining in the reserve fund to be paid over to the United States Treasury, the consent order initially requires the taxpayer to make refunds to the purchasers of its products on which the overcharge occurred because of the alleged pricing violation. A reserve fund was established by setting aside unrefunded monies (unrefunded because claims were not filed or monies were unable to be refunded because of the inability of its customers to pass through the refunds to the ultimate consumers) for the purpose of covering the taxpayer's liability in civil actions based upon alleged pricing violations. By requiring the taxpayer to make refunds to its customers and paying the remaining balance in the reserve fund to the United States Treasury, the consent order prohibited the taxpayer from retaining any part of the agreed amount of refund.

Therefore, the payment made to the United States Treasury by the taxpayer as a result of a consent order entered into by the taxpayer and the Department of Energy does not come within the provisions of section 162(f) of the Code. Also, the consent order specifically states that the Department of Energy has determined that the imposition of civil or criminal penalties would be inappropriate, and that such penalties would not be sought from the taxpayer with respect to the period covered by the consent order.

HOLDING

The payment made by the taxpayer in the instant case to the United States Treasury pursuant to a consent order in settlement of claims and disputes resulting from the examination of the taxpayer's books and records by the Department of Energy is not a fine or similar penalty for purposes of section 162(f) of the Code. Thus, such amount is deductible as an ordinary and necessary business expense under section 162(a).

However, where the consent order specifically states that the taxpayer is required to pay a penalty for willful or intentional violation of the petroleum pricing statutes such amount falls under the provision of section 162(f) of the Code and is not deductible as an ordinary and necessary business expense.

Section 170.—Charitable, Etc., Contributions and Gifts

26 CFR 1.170A-1: Charitable, etc., contributions and gifts; allowance of deduction.

Charitable contributions; bibles. A promoter offers investors a choice of two plans to purchase bibles and donate them to charities. Under one plan, investors purchase the bibles and donate them to charity 12 months later. The investors are told that they may deduct the "retail" price, which is three times as high as the purchase price. Under the other plan, investors purchase the bibles at the "retail" price, put down the same amount as the purchase price in the first plan, and execute promissory notes for the balance. Principal and interest on the notes is payable in 12 years. The investors then donate the bibles to charity. The deduction is limited to the cash paid in the second plan.

Rev. Rul. 80-329 [1]

ISSUE

What is the fair market value of bibles that are contributed to a charitable organization, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

P, a promotor, offers to sell bibles to individuals. Depending on when an investor desires the purported tax advantages, the investor has a choice of two purchase plans. If the investor is willing to wait 12 months for a charitable deduction, P advises that the customer can purchase bibles at a considerable discount from "retail" price and, by donating them to a qualified charitable organization more than 12 months after purchase, claim a charitable deduction based on the "retail" price. Under this plan, the purchase price is one-third of the "retail" price. See Rev. Rul. 80-233, 1980-35 I.R.B. 6, which holds that the charitable contribution is limited to the price at which similar lots of bibles were sold and were still being sold to others at the time of the contribution.

If the investor wants a charitable deduction within a year of purchase, P advises that the customer can purchase bibles at the "retail" price on a deferred payment basis and claim a charitable deduction based on the "retail" price, upon donating them to a qualified charitable organization. Under the latter plan, the investor pays for the bibles with cash in the amount of the discounted price and with a note for the balance. The note provides for interest at the rate of 8 percent per annum, and it matures in twelve years. Principal and interest are not due until the twelfth year.

In 1980 A contracted with P to purchase 500 copies of a single edition of a modern translation of the bible. A had the option to pay 100*x* dollars in cash under the first plan or to pay 100*x* dollars in cash and execute a promissory note for 200*x* dollars under the second plan. A, who wanted to make a charitable contribution in 1980, purchased the bibles under the second plan. On August 1, 1980, A donated the bibles to X, which was an organization described in section 170(c) of the Internal Revenue Code and for which the use of the books would be related to X's exempt purposes.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 170 of the Code provides, subject to certain limitations, a deduction for contributions and gifts to or for the use of organizations described in section 170(c), payment of which is made within the taxable year.

Section 1.170A-1(c)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides generally that if a charitable contribution is made in property other than money, the amount of the contribution is the fair market value of the property at the time of the contribution reduced as provided in section 170(e)(1) of the Code.

Section 170(e)(1)(A) of the Code provides that if a taxpayer contributes property that would have resulted in gain which would not have been long-term capital gain if the property had been sold at its fair market value on the date of contribution, the amount of the contribution must be reduced by the amount of such gain. Section 1222(3) defines "long-term capital gain" as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 1 year.

Section 1.170A-1(c)(2) of the regulations provides that fair market value is the price at which property would change hands between a willing buyer and a willing seller, neither being under any compulsion to buy or sell and both having reasonable knowledge of relevant facts.

The definition of fair market value depends upon a knowledgeable willing buyer and a knowledgeable willing seller. The most probative evidence of fair market value is the prices at which similar quantities of bibles are actually sold in arm's-length transactions. See Rev. Rul. 80-233. P was selling similar lots of bibles for either 100*x* dollars or 300*x* dollars. Neither the quantity nor the quality of the bibles varied with the price; rather, the difference between the two prices was solely at the discretion of the buyer. P was a willing seller for 100*x* dollars. The fair market value of the bibles is 100*x* dollars, the amount at which similar lots of bibles could be purchased from P by members of the general public.

If P were not offering bibles for 100*x* dollars, the fair market value of the bibles contributed would be determined by all the relevant facts and circumstances including the sales price of comparable bibles by others; the sales price by P of 300*x* dollars would not conclusively determine the value of the bibles.

HOLDING

The fair market value of the bibles contributed to X is 100*x* dollars.

Section 461.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Deduction

26 CFR 1.461-1: General rule for taxable year of deduction.

"Pay by phone" account; when deductible. The date to be used in determining when allowable deductions may be taken by a cash method taxpayer using a "pay by phone" account is the date the financial institution paid the amount, as reported on a monthly statement sent to the taxpayer.

Rev. Rul. 80-335

ISSUE

What is the date of payment when a taxpayer uses a "pay by phone" account maintained at a financial institution to pay creditors?

FACTS

A, who uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, maintains a "pay by phone" account with M, a financial institution, whereby A, by telephoning M, can authorize M to make payments to A's creditors as A's agent. According to the agreement between A and M, if A calls M before noon on a weekday that is not a holiday, M will pay the bill that afternoon. If the call is made after noon or on a weekend or holiday, the bill will be paid on the next working day. M pays the bills by charging A's account and either mailing checks to the creditors, transferring funds to the creditors' accounts if the creditors maintain them with M, or actually delivering checks to the creditors. At the end of the month, M mails to A a statement listing all the payments M has made for A during that month. The statement lists the names of the creditors, the amounts of the payments, the dates of the mailings, transfers or deliveries, and the balance remaining in A's account.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 461 of the Internal Revenue Code provides the general rule that the amount of any allowable deduction shall be taken for the taxable year that is the proper year under the method of accounting used by the taxpayer in computing taxable income.

Section 1.461-1(a)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that under the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, amounts representing allowable deductions are taken into account for the taxable year in which paid.

If a taxpayer, who uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, mails checks to creditors, the taxpayer is entitled to allowable deductions therefor on the day the checks are placed in the mail, provided the checks are subsequently paid by the bank. Estate of Witt v. Fahs, 160 F. Supp. 521 (S.D. Fla. 1956).

If the taxpayer, who uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, authorizes payment by the taxpayer's agent, payment occurs on the date the agent, on behalf of the taxpayer, delivers a check to the payee. See Commissioner v. Bradley, 56 F.2d 728 (6th Cir. 1932). In the present case M is acting as the agent of A, and therefore, if M mails checks to A's creditors, transfers funds to creditors' accounts, or actually delivers checks to creditors, the payments are made on the date of the mailings, transfers, or deliveries, as the case may be.

HOLDING

The date reported by M on the monthly statement indicating when payment was made is the date of payment by A for purposes of determining when an allowable deduction may be taken.

Holding period required for treatment of long-term capital gain or long-term capital loss; changes in terms relating to transactions in capital assets

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to changes in the holding period required for gains or losses on transactions in capital assets to be treated as long-term capital gains or long-term capital losses and to changes in certain terms relating to transactions in capital assets. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. The regulations affect the tax treatment of sales or exchanges of capital assets and provide the public with needed guidance.

DATES: The amendments pertaining to the change in the holding period from 6 months to 9 months are effective for taxable years beginning in 1977. The amendments pertaining to the change in the holding period from 9 months to 1 year are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977. The amendments pertaining to the new terms "capital gain net income" and "net capital gain" are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On April 9, 1980, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations, the Regulations on Capital Construction Fund, and the Regulations on Foundation Excise Taxes (26 CFR Parts 1, 3, and 53) under numerous sections of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (45 FR 24205). These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to sections 1402(a)(1) and (2), and 1901(a)(136)(A) and (B) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1731, 1787) [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 207, 263]. A public hearing was neither requested nor held. One written comment was received suggesting a technical amendment to the proposed regulation. The proposed amendments are adopted by this Treasury decision with one technical change.

EXPLANATION

Section 1402(b)(3) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [supra at 209] makes a technical amendment to section 631(a) (relating to gain or loss in the case of timber) by deleting the requirement that the holding period be satisfied before the beginning of the taxable year in which the timber was cut. Technical amendments are made to § 1.631(a)(4) and § 1.631-1(b)(1) to reflect this change.

The regulations adopted by this Treasury decision impose no new reporting burdens or recordkeeping requirements. Evaluation of the effectiveness of these regulations will be based upon comments received from members of Congress, offices within Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service, other governmental agencies, and the public.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Claudine Ausness of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing these regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Section 2035.—Adjustments for Gifts Made Within 3 Years of Decedent's Death

26 CFR 20.2035-1: Transactions in contemplation of death.

Transfers within 3 years of death; stock dividend declared during transferee's ownership. Prior to death a decedent gratuitously transferred 500 shares of stock in a publicly traded corporation to an individual. After the transfer, the corporation declared a stock dividend of one share for every two shares owned, giving the individual 750 shares. The decedent died during the next year. The fair market value of the 750 shares of stock is includible in the decedent's gross estate.

Rev. Rul. 80-336

ISSUE

For purposes of section 2035 of the Internal Revenue Code, what is includible in the gross estate if, within three years of death, the decedent transferred shares of stock upon which a stock dividend was declared during the transferee's ownership?

FACTS

In January 1979, D, the decedent, gratuitously transferred 500 shares of stock of X Corporation to A. The stock of X Corporation is publicly traded.

In December 1979, X Corporation declared a stock dividend of one share of stock for every two shares owned.

At D's death in 1980 A owned 750 shares of X Corporation stock. However, on the federal estate tax return, the executor included only 500 shares. The executor stated that the 250 shares acquired from the stock dividend were not part of the original transfer.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2035 of the Code provides, in part, that the value of all property that the decedent gratuitously transferred during the three-year period ending on the date of the decedent's death is includible in the decedent's gross estate.

The value of property includible in the gross estate under section 2035 is the fair market value as of the decedent's death. Neither income received subsequent to the transfer nor property purchased with such income is considered in determining the value of the property. Section 20.2035-1(e) of the regulations. Rather, only the value of the property originally transferred by the decedent is includible in the gross estate under section 2035. See Rev. Rul. 72-282, 1972-1 C.B. 306.

A stock dividend, in which common stock is proportionately distributed according to the number of common shares held, does not alter the fractional interests of the stockholders. In Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189, 202 (1920), 1920-3 C.B. 25, 27, a case involving the federal income tax, the Court quoted from a previous case in describing the nature of a stock dividend as follows:

> "A stock dividend really takes nothing from the property of the corporation, and adds nothing to the interests of the shareholders. Its property is not diminished, and their interests are not increased. . . . The proportional interest of each shareholder remains the same. The only change is in the evidence which represents that interest, the new shares and the original share together representing the same proportional interest that the original shares represented before the issue of the new ones. . . . In short, the corporation is no poorer and the stockholder is no richer than they were before."

Similarly, for estate tax purposes, the stock acquired through such a pro rata common stock dividend is regarded as part of the interest held in the corporation prior to the dividend. See Estate of Schlosser v. Commissioner, 277 F. 2d 268 (3rd Cir. 1960), cert. denied, 364 U.S. 819 (1960), considering the treatment of a common stock dividend for alternate valuation purposes and Rev. Rul. 80-142, 1980-1 C.B. 197, holding that, for purposes of section 2040 of the Code, a common stock dividend declared on jointly owned stock is considered the contribution of the tenant who originally created the tenancy. Compare McGehee v. Commissioner, 260 F. 2d 818 (5th Cir. 1958). In McGehee, the parties stipulated that the stock dividend was generated by profits that were earned after the transfer. In view of the analysis discussed above, the analysis of McGehee would not be followed even if the stock dividend could be attributed to post-transfer income.

In the present situation, since the common stock dividend was distributed to common shareholders on a pro rata basis, the X Corporation shares held by A at D's death represent the same fractional interest in the corporation transferred by D. Thus, the 250 shares are not distinguishable from the 500 original shares, for purposes of section 2035.

HOLDING

The fair market value of the 750 shares of X Corporation is includible in D's gross estate as property transferred by D within three years of death.

26 CFR 31.3121(k)-1: Waiver of exemption from taxes.
(Also 31.3121(b)(8)-2.)

Exempt organization; waiver certificate; constructive filing. An exempt organization that began withholding FICA taxes from its employees at the beginning of the year and filed Forms 941 and paid the tax for the first three quarters during the fourth quarter is deemed to have filed a waiver certificate under section 3121(k)(4) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-337

ISSUE

Is an exempt organization deemed to have filed a waiver certificate under section 3121(k)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code when it files a Form 941 covering three previous quarters and pays the taxes with respect to such periods?

FACTS

In January 1979 an organization exempt from income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code began withholding the taxes imposed under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act from the wages of its employees. The organization never filed a Form 941, Employer's Federal Quarterly Tax Return. In November of 1979 a new treasurer of the organization filed Forms 941 for the first three quarters and made a lump-sum payment of the withheld taxes and the employer taxes for those quarters. The organization had never filed a Form SS-15, Certificate Waiving Exemption from Taxes under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Services performed by an employee for an organization described in section 501(c)(3) of the Code are excepted from the definition of employment under section 3121(b)(8)(B) of the Code and remuneration for such services is not subject to the taxes imposed by the FICA. However, pursuant to section 3121(k), section 31.3121(k)-1 of the Employment Tax Regulations states that the organization may elect social security coverage by filing a Form SS-15.

Section 3121(k)(4) of the Code provides that if an exempt organization has not filed a certificate it will be deemed for purposes of section 3121(b)(8)(B) to have constructively filed a certificate covering employees for whom the payments were made if it paid the taxes during any period of not less than three consecutive calendar quarters. Although one payment was made in this case, that payment represents FICA taxes on wages for three consecutive quarters.

HOLDING

The organization is deemed to have filed a waiver certificate under section 3121(k)(4) of the Code.

SEC. 3. WAGE AND PENSION INFORMATION

.01 Section 8(b) of Pub. L. 94-202, 1976-1 C.B. 503, enacted in January 1976, authorized the combined reporting of FICA detailed information (previously reported quarterly on Form 941, Schedule A) and annual W-2 (Copy A), Wage and Tax Statement, information in one consolidated annual W-2 (Copy A) to the Federal Government. As a result, Forms W-2 and W-2P are to be filed with the Social Security Administration (SSA).

.02 SSA will accept magnetic media for filing Forms W-2 and W2P and has issued TIB-4a, Magnetic Tape Reporting, Submitting wage and tax data to Federal and State Agencies, TIB-4b, Magnetic Tape Reporting, Submitting Annuity, Pension, Retired Pay or IRA Payment to the Federal Government on Magnetic Tape, and TIB-4c, Diskette and Disk Cartridge Reporting, Submitting Wage and Tax Data to the Federal Government on Diskette and Disk Cartridge, for this purpose. Applications for filing Forms W-2 and W-2P on magnetic media appear in TIBs-4a, 4b, and 4c.

.03 Copies of Social Security Administration publications TIB-4a, 4b, and 4c are available from any Internal Revenue Service Center or local Social Security Administration office.

SEC. 4. APPLICATION FOR MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTING

.01 For the purposes of this revenue procedure, the payer is the organization making the payments and the transmitter is the organization which is preparing the tape file. Payers or transmitters who decide to file information returns, in the Forms 1099 and 1087 series, on magnetic tape must complete Form 4419, Application for Magnetic Media Reporting of Information Return (Exhibit "A" attached). Instructions for completing the application appear on the reverse side of the form.

.02 The Service will act on an application and notify the applicant of authorization to file within 30 days of receipt of the application. No magnetic tape returns may be filed with the Service until authorization to file is received.

.03 The Service will assist new filers with their initial magnetic tape submission by encouraging the submission of test tapes for review in advance of the filing season. Approved payers or transmitters who wish to submit a test tape should contact the magnetic media coordinator at the Service Center where the application was filed.

.04 Once authorization to file on magnetic tape has been granted to a payer or transmitter, it will remain in effect in succeeding years, provided that all the requirements of this revenue procedure are met and there are no equipment changes by the filer. If a filer discontinues filing on magnetic tape, a new application must be filed before this method of filing may be resumed.

.05 In accordance with Section 1.6041-7 of the Income Tax Regulations, medical payments from separate departments of a health care carrier may be reported as separate returns on magnetic tape. In this case, the headquarters office will be considered to be the transmitter and the individual departments of the company filing reports will be considered to be payers. A single application form covering all the departments which will be filing on magnetic tape should be submitted.

Sec. 5. Filing of Tape Reports

.01 A magnetic tape reporting package, which includes all the necessary transmittals, labels, and instructions, will be mailed to all approved filers between October and December of each year.

.02 Payers may submit a portion of their information returns on magnetic tape and the remainder on paper forms, provided there is NO DUPLICATE FILING. The magnetic tape records and paper forms must be filed at the same location, but in separate shipments. A Form 1096 must accompany paper submissions and a Form 4804 must accompany magnetic tape submissions.

.03 The affidavit which appears on Forms 1096 and 4804 must be signed by the payer. A transmitter, service bureau, or disbursing agent may, however, sign the affidavit on behalf of the payer if all of these conditions are met:

a. It has the authority to sign the affidavit under an agency agreement (either oral, written, or implied) that is valid under State law; and

b. It has the responsibility (either oral, written, or implied) conferred on it by the payer to request the taxpayer identifying numbers of payees reported on magnetic tape or paper returns; and

c. It signs the affidavit and adds the caption "For: [name of payer]".

.04 Although a duly authorized agent signs the affidavit, the payer is held responsible for the accuracy of the Form 4804 and will be liable for penalties for failure to comply with filing requirements.

.05 These requirements also apply to paper filers submitting Form 1096, Annual Summary and Transmittal of U.S. Information Returns. Paper filers are responsible for the filing of a correct, complete, and timely Form 1096. The failure of duly authorized "agents" of paper filers to comply with the filing requirements of Form 1096 and attachments does not relieve the payers of any penalties that may arise as a result of such failure to comply.

.06 If a portion of the returns are submitted on paper documents, include a statement on the Form 1096 that the remaining returns are being filed on magnetic tapes. Please note that Form 1096 instructions normally apply to the filing of information returns on paper; however, filers of magnetic tape must review the Form 1096 instructions and file Form 1096 if appropriate.

.07 Health care carriers, or their agents, filing Form 1099-MED per Section 4.05 above, may submit part of their returns on paper documents and part on magnetic tape if the records of some departments are not maintained on computer files. However, an information return is required if the aggregate amount paid to a health care service provider from all departments equals $600 or more. For example, Department A pays $200, Department B pays $300, and Department C pays $100 to the same health care service provider. The aggregate amount paid from all departments equals $600. The health care carrier or agent must submit either one information return for the aggregate amount of $600 or three separate returns, one from each department, indicating the amount paid by each department.

Sec. 6. Filing Dates

.01 Magnetic tape reporting to the Service for all types of Forms 1099 and 1087 must be on a calendar year basis.

.02 The dates prescribed for filing paper returns with the Service will also apply to magnetic tape filing. Tapes must be submitted to the Service Center by February 28. The copies of this information required to be furnished to recipients must be furnished by January 31.

Sec. 7. Extensions to File

.01 If a payer or transmiter is unable to submit its tape file by the date prescribed in Section 6.02 above, a letter requesting an extension must be filed before February 28. The letter should be sent to the attention of the magnetic media coordinator at the Service Center which will receive the tape file. The request should include the estimated number of returns which will be filed late and the reason for the delay.

.02 If an extension is granted by the Service, a copy of the letter granting the extension must be attached to the transmittal Form 4804 when the file is submitted.

Sec. 8. Processing of Tape Returns

.01 The Service will process tax information from the tapes. Tapes which are timely received by the Service will be returned to the filers by August 15 of the year in which submitted.

02. All tapes submitted must conform totally to this revenue procedure. If tapes are unprocessable, they will be returned to the filer for correction. Corrected tapes must be filed with the Service as soon as possible. Corrected files will be returned by the Service within six months of receipt.

Sec. 9. Corrected Returns

.01 If a large volume of corrected returns is necessary, and the payer or transmitter possesses the capability to provide such corrections on tape, they are encouraged to do so. The filer must contact the magnetic media coordinator for format and shipping instructions. A corrected Form 4804 must accompany the shipment and be marked "Magnetic Media Correction" on the upper portion of the form.

.02 If corrections are not submitted on tape, payers must submit them on official Forms 1099 or 1087 (Copy A) or on approved paper substitutes. Revenue procedures containing specifications for paper returns are available from most Internal Revenue Service offices.

.03 Form 1096 instructions are to be followed when paper returns are filed to correct returns submitted on magnetic media. An "X" must be entered in the box in the left margin and the caption "Magnetic Media Correction" must appear on the top of the form to the left of "FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY". Corrections must be sent to the attention of the magnetic media coordinator where the original tape file was filed.

SEC. 10. TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS

.01 Under Section 6109 of the Internal Revenue Code, recipients of dividends, interest, or other payments are required to furnish taxpayer identification numbers (TINs) to the payer. The number must be furnished to the payer whether or not the payee is required to file a tax return or is covered by Social Security.

.02 The Service expects that payers will keep to a minimum those statements submitted without TINs. It is particularly important that correct social security and employer identification numbers for payees be provided on magnetic media or paper forms submitted to the Service.

.03 For each omission of a required TIN, Section 6676 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the Service charge a $5 penalty, unless the payer or payee responsible for furnishing the number supplies an explanation, upon request from the Service, that establishes reasonable cause for not having done so.

.04 The TIN to be furnished the Service depends primarily upon the manner in which the account is maintained or set up on the record of the payer. The number to be provided must be that of the owner of record. If the account is recorded in more than one name, furnish the TIN and name of one of the holders of the record. The number provided must be associated with the name of the holder provided in the first name line of the Payee "B" Record of Part B of this procedure. For those engaged in a trade or business (including employee trusts, retirement systems, etc.) the TIN is the employer identification number, EIN (00-0000000). For individuals, it is a social security number, SSN (000-00-0000).

.05 Sole proprietors who are payers should show their employer identification numbers in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. However, the payer should use the social security number of a sole proprietor in the Payee "B" Record. The table below will help you determine the number to be furnished to the Service.

SEC. 11. EFFECT ON PAPER RETURNS

.01 Magnetic tape reporting of the information returns listed in Section 1 above applies only to the original (Copy A).

.02 Payers are permitted considerable flexibility in designing the copy of the information return to be furnished to the payee. The payer may combine the information return data with other reports or financial or commercial notices, or expand them to include other information of interest to a depositor, patron, or shareholder. This is permissible so long as all required information present on the official form is included and the payees' copies are conducive to proper reporting of income on tax returns. Payers must include the message "This information is being furnished on Form 1099 (or 1087) to the Internal Revenue Service" on the recipients' copies.

.03 If a portion of the returns is reported on magnetic tape and the remainder is reported on paper forms, those returns not submitted on magnetic tape must be filed on official forms or on paper substitutes meeting specifications in the revenue procedure on the reproduction of Forms 1099, 1087, and W-2G. Form 1099 BCD, 1099 F, and W-2G cannot currently be filed on magnetic tape.

PART B.—MAGNETIC TAPE SPECIFICATIONS

SECTION 1. GENERAL

.01 The magnetic tape specifications contained in this Part prescribe the required format and contents of the records to be included in the file. These specifications must be adhered to unless deviations have been specifically granted by the Service in writing.

.02 In most instances, the Service will be able to process any compatible tape files. Compatible tape files must meet any one set of the following:

(a) 7 channel BCD (binary coded decimal) with

(1) Either Even or Odd Parity and

(2) A density of 556 or 800 BPI

(b) 9 channel EBCDIC (Extended Binary Coded Decimal Interchange Code) with

(1) Odd Parity and

(2) A density of 800, or 1600.

(c) 9 channel ASCII (American Standard Coded Information Interchange) with

(1) Odd Parity and

(2) A density of 800 or 1600.

.03 Although the Service can process, after translation, tapes created at 6250 BPI, it is preferred that filers submit 1600 PBI tapes if possible. Payers/Transmitters must request permission from the service center magnetic media coordinator before submitting 6250 BPI tapes.

04. All compatible tape files must have the following characteristics:

(a) Type of tape—½ inch Mylar base, oxide coated; and

(b) Interrecord Gap—¾ inch.

.05 Service programs are capable of accommodating some minor deviations. Payers who can substantially conform to these specifications, but do require some minor deviations, must contact the magnetic media coordinator at the service center where the file will be submitted. Under no circumstances may tapes deviating from the specifications in this revenue procedure be submitted without prior written approval from the Service.

Sec. 2. Record Length

.01 The tape records prescribed in these specifications may be blocked or unblocked, subject to the following:

(a) A block must not exceed 4,000 tape positions.

(b) A record must be a minimum of 200 positions and a maximum of 360 positions.

(c) If the use of blocked records would result in a short block, all remaining positions of the block must be filled with 9's. Do not pad a block with blanks.

(d) All records except the Header and Trailer Labels, may be blocked.

.02 Provision is made in the Payee "B" Records for special data entries. These entries are optional. If the field is utilized, it must be present on all Payee "B" Records. The field is intended to serve one or both of these purposes:

(a) Contain information required by state or local governments. Filers who wish to use this option for satisfying state or local reporting requirements should contact their state or local department of revenue for filing instructions.

(b) Facilitate making all records the same length.

Sec. 3. Options for Filing

.01 For filing convenience, this procedure contains two options for using Header Labels and Payer/Transmitter "A" Records. For the purposes of this procedure the following conventions must be used:

Header Label:

1. Payers may use standard headers, provide they begin with 1HDR, HDR1, VOL1 or VOL2.
2. Consist of a maximum of 80 positions.
3. May not contain the letters A, B, C, D, E, or F in position 9.

Trailer Label:

1. Standard trailer labels may be used provided that they begin with 1EOR, 1EOF, EOR1, or EOF1.
2. Consist of a maximum of 80 positions.

Record Mark:

1. Special character used to separate blocked records on tape.
2. Can be written only at the end of a record or block.
3. For odd parity tapes, use BCD bit configuration 011010 ("A82").

Tape Mark:

1. Used to signify the physical end of the recording on tape.
2. For even parity, use BCD configuration 001111 ("8421").
3. May follow the header label and precede and/or follow the trailer label.

Option 1: When using this option, a correct Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, described in Sec. 4 below, is required as the first record on each reel. Filers using this option may have Header Labels preceding the "A" Record, however, headers are not required. The reel sequence number must appear in positions 3-5 of each "A" Record and must be incremented by 1 on each tape reel of the file after the first reel.

Option 2: Requires a Header Label as the first record on each reel. The Header Label must contain the reel sequence number and it must be incremented by 1 on each reel after the first reel. The "A" Record will contain the location of the reel sequence number in the Header Label. If your system generates a four-digit reel sequence number, ignore the first digit when determining the location for the purposes of the "A" Record.

Example: If your Header Label reel sequence is four digits (e.g. 0001) and is in position 28-31, enter 29 as the location in positions 3 and 4 of the "A" Record and also enter an "X" in position 5 of the "A" Record.

Example: If your Header Label reel sequence number is 3 digits (e.g. 001) and is in positions 10-12, enter 10 as the location in positions 3 and 4 of the "A" Record and also enter an "X" in position 5 of the "A" Record. This option requires a Trailer Label at the end of each reel. Also, ignore the "D" Record instructions in this Part if you use Option 2.

Sec. 4. Payer/Transmitter "A" Record

Identifies the payer and transmitter of the tape file and provides parameters for the succeeding Payee "B" Records. The Service's computer programs rely on the absolute relationship between the parameters in the "A" Record and the data fields in the "B" Records to which they apply.

The number of "A" Records appearing on a tape reel will depend on the number of payers and the different types of returns being reported. A transmitter may include Payee "B" Records for more than one payer on a tape reel, however, each separate payer's Payee "B" Record(s) must be preceded by an "A" Record. A single tape reel may also contain different types of returns, but the returns may not be intermingled. A separate "A" Record is required for each type of return being reported. An "A" Record may be blocked with "B" Records, however, the "A" Record must appear as the first record in the block.

SEC. 5. PAYEE "B" RECORDS

.01 Contains payment record from individual statements. All records must be fixed length. Records may be blocked or unblocked. A block may not exceed 4000 positions. Do not pad unused blocks with blank records.

.02 All payee records must contain correct payee name and address information entered in the fields prescribed in this Part.

.03 The Service must be able to identify the surname associated with the taxpayer identifying number (SSN or EIN) furnished on a statement. The specifications below include a field in the payee records called "Name Control" in which the first four alphabetic characters of the payee surname are to be entered by the payers. In addition, a blank must precede the identifying surname in the first name line of all Payee "B" Records unless the surname begins in the first position of the field.

.04 If payers are unable to provide the first four characters of the surname, the specifications permit the submission of statements on magnetic tape with the Name Control Field left blank; however, compliance with the following will facilitate the Service computer programs required to generate the Name Control.

(a) The surname of the payee whose taxpayer identifying number (SSN or EIN) is shown in the Payee "B" Record, must be the only name in the first name line.

(b) A blank must precede the surname unless the surname begins in the first position of the field.

(c) In the case of multiple payees, only the surname of the payee whose taxpayer identifying number (SSN or EIN) is shown in the Payee "B" Record, must be present in the first name line. Surnames of any other payees in the record must be entered in the second name line.

05. Provision is also made in these specifications for data entries required by state or local governments. This should minimize the Payer/Transmitter's programming burden should payers desire to report on tape to state or local governments.

Special Data Entries may be used to make all records the same length; however, the record length may not exceed 360 positions. Payers should contact their state or local revenue departments for their filing requirements.

NOTE 1: The first name of the Payee shown as beginning the tape position 101 must be shifted to the field immediately following the last payment amount field used. For example, if two payment amount fields are used, the first name line field would be shifted to position 51. 26 CFR 601.105: Examination of returns and claims for refund, credit, or abatement; determination of correct tax liability. (Also Part I, Sections 61, 3401, 6041; 1.61-2, 31.3401(a)-1, 1.6041-2.)

Rev. Proc. 80-53

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to set forth the procedures the Internal Revenue Service will follow to implement the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Central Illinois Public Service Company v. United States, 435 U.S. 21 (1978), 1978-1 C.B. 310.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 In Central Illinois, the Supreme Court of the United States held that cash reimbursements for lunch expenses of employees on nonovernight company travel were not wages for purposes of income tax withholding under section 3401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code. The reimbursements were includible in the gross incomes of the employees, but the Court indicated that the requirement to withhold income tax is narrower than the requirement to include in gross income and that the Service's regulations and rulings did not put the employer on notice that it was obligated to withhold income tax on such payments.

.02 Pub. L. No. 95-427, section 1, 1978-2 C.B. 363, 364, as amended by Pub. L. No. 96-167, section 1, 1980-1 C.B. 483, 484, provides that the Treasury Department (Internal Revenue Service) is precluded from issuing final regulations, under section 61 of the Code, that would govern the income tax treatment of fringe benefits, prior to June 1, 1981. In addition, no regulations relating to the treatment of fringe benefits under section 61 are to be proposed that would be effective prior to June 1, 1981. Pub. L. Nos. 95-427 and 96-167 relate only to the issuance of regulations. However, it was also Congressional intent that no revenue rulings or revenue procedures be issued if they altered, or deviated from, in any significant way, the historical treatment of fringe benefits. See H.R. Rep. No. 95-1232, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 5 (1978), 1978-2 C.B. 365, 366, and S. Rep. No. 96-433, 96th Cong., 1st Sess. 5 (1979), 1980-1 C.B. 486, 488, respectively.

.03 Section 6041 of the Code provides that all persons engaged in a trade or business and making payments in the course of such trade or business to another person of salaries, wages, compensations, remunerations, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income, of $600 or more, in any taxable year must file a return.

.04 Section 1.6041-2 of the Income Tax Regulations provides that payments of compensation other than wages, as defined in section 3401, including the cash value of payments made in any medium other than cash, to an employee by an employer in the course of the trade or business of the employer must be reported on Form W-2, Wage and Tax Statement, if the total of such payments and the amount of the employee's wages required to be reported on Form W-2 aggregates $600 or more in a calendar year. The employer may elect to report the compensation other than waegs on a separate Form W-2.

SEC. 3. TREATMENT OF FRINGE BENEFITS UNDER SECTIONS 61, 3401, AND 6041 OF THE CODE

.01 The Internal Revenue Service will continue to follow existing regulations, revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and case law in determining whether particular fringe benefits are compensation includible in gross income under section 61 of the Code.

.02 However, those fringe benefits that the Service will continue to treat as includible in gross income under .01 above will not be treated as wages under section 3401(a) of the Code, if

1 the payments are not the type of benefit treated as wages under the statute, a regulation, a revenue ruling, a revenue procedure, or a court decision; and

2 there is a reasonable basis for the belief that such benefits should not be considered as remuneration for services.

.03 Those fringe benefits that are includible in gross income as compensation under section 61 of the Code, but that are not treated as wages under section 3401(a), must be reported by employers as other compensation on a Form W-2 prepared for each employee if the total of such compensation paid to the employee and the amount of the employee's wages to be reported on Form W-2 aggregates $600 or more in a calendar year. Section 1.6041-2 of the regulations. For example, the cash reimbursements for lunch expenses of employees on non-overnight company travel must be reported, if the total of such compensation paid to the employee and the amount of the employee's wages to be reported on Form W-2 aggregates $600 or more in a calendar year.

SEC. 4. FEDERAL INSURANCE CONTRIBUTIONS ACT AND FEDERAL UNEMPLOYMENT ACT

.01 This revenue procedure has no effect upon the rules for determining whether fringe benefits are wages for purposes of the taxes imposed by the Federal Insurance Contributions Act and the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.

Rev. Proc. 80-54

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to modify and supersede Rev. Proc. 79-1, 1979-1 C.B. 481, by specifying revised conditions that must be present before the Internal Revenue Service will consider issuing advance rulings concerning the classification of organizations as liquidating trusts under section 301.7701-4 of the Procedure and Administration Regulations.

SEC. 2. SCOPE

The operating rules published in this revenue procedure are intended solely to assist taxpayers and their representatives in preparing ruling requests. These operating rules do not define, as a matter of law, the circumstances under which an organization will be classified as a liquidating trust for federal income tax purposes. That determination can be made only after examination of all the facts and circumstances in connection with the operation and activities of the trust. An organization will be considered a liquidating trust if it is organized for the primary purpose of liquidating and distributing assets transferred to it, and if its activities are all reasonably necessary to, and consistent with the accomplishment of that purpose. If the liquidation is unreasonably prolonged or if the liquidation purpose becomes so obscured by business activities that the declared purpose of liquidation can be said to be lost or abandoned, the status of the organization will no longer be that of a liquidating trust.

A ruling requested under this revenue procedure will usually be issued if the operating rules in Section 4 of this revenue procedure and the pertinent provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, Income Tax Regulations, revenue rulings and other revenue procedures are complied with.

The authority and general procedures of the National Office and the Offices of the District Directors of the Internal Revenue Service for the issuance of advance rulings and determination letters are outlined in Rev. Proc. 79-45, 1979-2 C.B. 508, and section 601.201 of the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR section 601.201 (1977)). See also Rev. Proc. 80-22, 1980-1 C.B. 654. Careful attention to all of the requirements of these documents will also serve to minimize delays in processing requests for rulings.

SEC. 3. CHANGES

.01 Section 3, "Operating Rules," has been redesignated Section 4.

.02 Former Section 3.02 has been changed to provide that the trust instrument must contain a fixed termination date "generally" not more than three years from the date of creation of the trust.

.03 Former Section 3.04 has been changed to delete the requirement that deposits need be made in banks or savings institutions that are federally insured and to permit short-term investments such as Treasury bills.

.04 Former Section 3.06 has been changed to provide that the trust may not receive transfers of any unlisted stock of a single issuer that "represents 80 percent or more" of the stock of such issuer.

.05 Former Section 3.07 has been deleted.

.06 Former Section 3.08 has been changed to provide that the trustee is required to distribute at least "annually" to known shareholders any proceeds from the sale of assets or income from investments.

.07 Section 4, "Inquiries," has been redesignated Section 5.

SEC. 4. OPERATING RULES

A ruling generally will be issued that an organization is classified as a liquidating trust if the following conditions are met:

.01 The trust is organized for the primary purpose of liquidating the assets transferred to it with no objective to continue or engage in the conduct of a trade or business and its governing instrument so provides.

.02 The trust instrument contains a fixed termination date that is generally not more than three years from the date of creation of the trust and that is reasonable based on all the facts and circumstances.

.03 In the case of a trust created incident to a corporate liquidation, the trustee is selected by the shareholders of record or a court of competent jurisdiction.

.04 The investment powers of the trustee are limited to powers to invest in demand and time deposits in banks or savings institutions, or temporary investments such as short-term certificates of deposit or Treasury bills.

.05 The trust does not receive transfers of any listed stocks or securities, any readily-marketable assets or any operating assets of a going business. The trust does not receive or retain cash in excess of a reasonable amount to meet claims and contingent liabilities.

.06 The trust does not receive transfers of any unlisted stock of a single issuer that represents 80 percent or more of the stock of such issuer and does not receive transfers of any general or limited partnership interests.

.07 The trust is required to distribute at least annually to known shareholders any proceeds from the sale of assets or income from investments.

.08 The ruling request contains representations that the trustee will make continuing efforts to dispose of the trust assets, make timely distributions, and not unduly prolong the duration of the trust.

SEC. 5. INQUIRIES

Inquiries regarding this revenue procedure should refer to its number and should be addressed to the Assistant Commissioner (Technical), Attention: T:I:I, Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D.C. 20224.

EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 79-1, 1979-1 C.B. 481, is modified and superseded.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Form 4255, Recapture of Investment Credit, Revised

Announcement 80-154

Form 4255, Recapture of Investment Credit, has been revised to provide for the recapture of business energy investment credit. The form is used to figure the increase in tax if regular or energy investment credit property was disposed of or ceased to qualify before the end of the useful life used to figure the original credit.

Form 4255, which has been retitled for 1980, also now follows a vertical format. Since the November 1978 revision does not cover recapture of the energy credit, that revision should no longer be used. The new version (Rev. Oct. 1980) is now available at Internal Revenue Service offices.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individual has been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
H. Jim Uchida	Oakland, CA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective November 5, 1980

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 37.—Credit for the Elderly

Credit for the elderly; community property laws. Rev. Ruls. 63-167, 63-138, and 63-169, relating to the effect of community property laws on the computation of retirement income credit for a social security beneficiary, a civil service retiree, and an Armed Forces retiree, are obsoleted with respect to the tax credit for the elderly in the case of a joint return filed for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1977.

Rev. Rul. 80-325

The Tax Reform Act of 1976, section 503, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 35, amended section 37 of the Internal Revenue Code by replacing the retirement income credit with the credit for the elderly, effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1975.

Under section 37 of the Code, as amended, special rules for determining the tax credit for the elderly are available to certain individuals who retire under a federal, state, or local government retirement system.

The Revenue Act of 1978, section 701(a), 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 131, added a new provision to the Code, section 37(e)(8), effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977. Section 37(e)(8) provides that in the case of a joint return, section 37(e) will be applied without regard to community property laws.

Rev. Rul. 63-167, 1963-2 C.B. 17, Rev. Rul. 63-168, 1963-2 C.B. 9, and Rev. Rul. 63-169, 1963-2 C.B. 14, deal with the application of section 37 of the Code in certain situations.

Rev. Rul. 63-167 holds, in part, that for purposes of section 37 of the Code, the community or separate character of social security benefits is determined by the marital status and domicile of the primary beneficiary at the time the primary beneficiary becomes entitled to receive the payments.

Rev. Ruls. 63-168 and 63-169 concern civil service annuitants and retired military personnel living in certain community property states. These revenue rulings hold, in part, that for purposes of section 37 of the Code the community or separate character of the annuity or military retirement pay is determined by the marital status and domicile of the retired individual when the services to which the annuity or military retirement pay is attributable were performed.

In view of the amendment to section 37(e) of the Code for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977, Rev. Ruls. 63-167, 63-168, and 63-169 are obsoleted with respect to the holdings under section 37 in the case of a joint return filed for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1977.

26 CFR 1.61-1: Gross income.

Partner's earnings as executor remitted to partnership. A partner in an accounting firm was appointed executor of an estate in a state whose laws prohibit a partnership from serving as executor. Permission to accept the appointment was granted by the partnership and the fees received were turned over to it. The earnings are partnership income and excluded from the partner's individual gross income. Rev. Rul. 54-167 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-338

ISSUE

Are fees earned by a partner, under the circumstances described below, income of the partnership or of the individual partner?

FACTS

A, an individual, is a partner in accounting firm P. P requires that its partners obtain permission from P before engaging in business activities not directly related to the business of P. A was named executor of an estate in state M. Under the laws of state M, letters of administration are not issued to partnerships; therefore, P could not be appointed or serve as an executor. P approved A's taking the position as executor subject to the requirement that the services provided by A would not include those available from P and that all fees earned by A be turned over to P.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that gross income includes compensation for services, including fees, commissions, and similar items and a partner's distributive share of partnership income.

As long as the source of the income earned by a partner has a business nexus with the partnership, the income is included in the partnership's taxable income and excluded from the taxable income of the partner who received it. See Bufalino v. Commissioner, T.C.M. 1976-110.

Rev. Rul. 54-167, 1954-1 C.B. 152, holds that if a partnership may not perform the services of an elected public official for which a partner, in the partner's individual capacity, received compensation, the partner is required to report the compensation on his or her individual return, even though such compensation is pooled with the earnings of the partnership as required by the partnership agreement.

Rev. Rul. 69-90, 1964-1 (Part I) C.B. 226, which amplifies Rev. Rul. 54-167, holds that if the services provided by a partner in the partner's individual capacity are similar to those provided by the partnership, then the compensation for those services is partnership income if paid to the partnership in accordance with the partnership agreement.

In this revenue ruling the services provided by A as an executor depend on the exercise of A's expertise and are similar to the services provided by A for P. Therefore, the compensation for the services by A as an executor is partnership income if paid to the partnership in accordance with the partnership agreement.

This case is distinguishable from Rev. Rul. 54-167. Although under the laws of state M, a partnership cannot be named an executor, such a function is within the range of services undertaken by accountants. It is not unusual in an accounting or legal practice that specific responsibilities must be assumed by an individual partner rather than by the partnership.

HOLDING

The fees that A earns as an executor and turns over to P are partnership income and are excluded from A's gross income. However, A's distributive share of P's income must be reported on A's U.S. Individual Income Tax Return (Form 1040).

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 54-167 is distinguished.

Section 103.—Interest on Certain Governmental Obligations

26 CFR 1.103-7: Industrial development bonds.

Industrial development bonds; airline terminals and related facilities. A political subdivision of a state issued bonds to finance the construction of terminals and related airport facilities for several commercial airlines. The bond indenture provided that principal and interest on the bonds would be payable solely from the revenues derived from a toll bridge operated by the subdivision. However, the present value of the long-term payments to be made by the airlines is approximately equal to the present value of the debt service on the bonds. The bonds are industrial development bonds within the meaning of section 103(b)(2) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-339

ISSUE

Will the bonds issued by a political subdivision of a state to finance the construction of terminals and related airport facilities for commercial airline carriers be "industrial development bonds" within the meaning of section 103(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The political subdivision issued revenue bonds and used the bond proceeds to construct terminals and related facilities for several commercial airline carriers. The political subdivision also operates a toll bridge that is used by the general public. The bonds are not "arbitrage bonds" as such term is defined in section 103(c) of the Code.

The bond indenture for the bond issue provided that principal and interest on the bonds would be payable solely from a pledge of revenues derived by the political subdivision from the toll bridge. The bond indenture further provided that unpledged revenues derived by the political subdivision from the terminals and related airport facilities might be used for any purpose of the political subdivision, subject to a priority to pay operating expenses and maintenance costs relating to the airport facilities. Revenues from the terminals and related facilities were derived from long-term lease payments.

The total revenues derived from the terminals, related airport facilities, and the toll bridge in 1979 were 100*x* dollars, of which 60*x* dollars were derived from the toll bridge. The long-term lease payments to be made by the airline carriers and the debt service on the revenue bonds are approximately equal in present value.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on obligations of a state.

Section 103(b)(1) of the Code provides that, with certain exceptions, the interest on "industrial development bonds" is not excludable from gross income.

Section 1.103-7(b) of the Income Tax Regulations defines industrial development bonds as obligations that meet the "trade or business test" and the "security interest test." The trade or business test is satisfied if a major portion (more than 25 percent) of the bond proceeds is used in the trades or businesses of nonexempt persons. The security interest test is met if a major portion (more than 25 percent) of the payment of the principal or interest on the bonds is secured by any interest in property used in a trade or business or by payments in respect of such property, or is to be derived from payments in respect of property, or borrowed money, used or to be used in a trade or business.

Section 1.103-7(b)(3) of the regulations provides that the trade or business test relates to the use of the proceeds of a bond issue. The test is met if all or a major portion (more than 25 percent) of the proceeds of a bond issue is used in a trade or business carried on by a nonexempt person. For example, if all or a major portion of the proceeds of a bond issue is to be loaned to one or more private business users, or is to be used to acquire, construct, or reconstruct facilities to be leased or sold to such private business users, and such proceeds or facilities are to be used in trades or businesses carried on by them, such proceeds are to be used in a trade or business carried on by persons who are not exempt persons, and the debt obligations comprising the bond issue satisfy the trade or business test.

Section 1.103-7(b)(4) of the regulations provides that the security interest test relates to the nature of the security for, and the source of, the payment of either the principal or interest on a bond issue. The nature of the security for, and the source of, the payment may be determined from the terms of the bond indenture or on the basis of an underlying arrangement. An underlying arrangement can be inferred from all the facts and circumstances.

Example (14) of section 1.103-7(c) of the regulations, which illustrates the existence of an underlying arrangement, reads as follows:

> J, a political subdivision of a State, will issue several series of bonds from time to time and will use the proceeds to rehabilitate urban areas. More than 25 percent of the proceeds of each issue will be used for the rehabilitation and construction of buildings which will be leased or sold to nonexempt persons for use in their trades or businesses. There is no limitation either on the number of issues or the aggregate amount of bonds which may be outstanding. No group of bondholders has any legal claim prior to any other bondholders or creditors with respect to specific revenues of J, and there is no arrangement whereby revenues from a particular project are paid into a trust or constructive trust, or sinking fund, or are otherwise segregated or restricted for the benefit of any group of bondholders. There is, however, an unconditional obligation by J to pay the principal and interest on each issue of bonds. Further, it is apparent that J requires the revenues from the lease or sale of buildings to nonexempt persons in order to pay in full the principal and interest on the bonds in question. The bonds are industrial development bonds because a major portion of the proceeds will be used in the trades or businesses of nonexempt persons and, pursuant to an underlying arrangement, payment of the principal and interest is, in major part, to be derived from payments in respect of property or borrowed money used in the trades or businesses of nonexempt persons.

An underlying arrangement will always be inferred if the payments to be made by the industrial user or users and the debt service on the bonds are approximately equal in present value. Other facts that tend to show an underlying arrangement are, first, that payments made by the industrial user or users are material to the security for the bonds, and second, that the identity of the industrial user or users can be determined with reasonable certainty at the time of issue.

In this case the bond proceeds will be used in constructing facilities that will be leased to nonexempt persons. Because more than 25 percent of the bond proceeds will be used in the trades or businesses of nonexempt persons, the bond proceeds will be considered used in the trades or businesses of nonexempt persons and the "trade or business test" described in section 1.103-7(b)(3) of the regulations will be satisfied.

For purposes of satisfying the "security interest test," the substance and not the form of the transaction is to control. See section 1.103-7(b)(4) of the regulations. In this case, in order to fail the "security interest test," the political subdivision arranged the terms of the bond indenture to provide that the bonds will be payable only from pledged revenues. Notwithstanding the formal documents, an underlying arrangement can be inferred because the payments to be made by the airline carriers and the debt service on the bonds are approximately equal in present value. Consequently, payment of a major portion of debt service on the political subdivision's bonds will be derived from payments in respect of property used or to be used in a trade or business within the meaning of section 103(b)(2)(B)(ii) of the Code. See example (14) of section 1.103-7(c). Moreover, the use of toll bridge revenues (instead of the revenues derived from the terminals and related airport facilities) to pay debt service on the bonds does not significantly alter the economic consequences of the transaction. The use of toll bridge revenues to pay debt service on the bonds "frees up" the revenues from the terminals and related facilities or uses for which the toll bridge revenues would otherwise have been available. Since the political subdivision would not have issued the bonds in this case without requiring the commercial airline carriers to pay for the use of the bond-financed facilities, the revenues derived from the use of the bond-financed facilities are the true "source" of the debt service payments. Therefore, the "security interest test" described in section 1.103-7(b)(4) will be satisfied.

HOLDING

The bonds issued by the political subdivision to finance the terminals and related airport facilities are industrial development bonds within the meaning of section 103(b)(2) of the Code.

Whether the holding of Rev. Rul. 70-597, 1970-2 C.B. 146 that dividends paid by a regulated investment company out of net short-term capital gains qualify for the $100 dividends received individual exclusion under section 116 of the Code subject to the limitations under section 854, is correct; and whether unexercised option gains realized by a regulated investment company are excluded from gross income for purposes of section 854(b). (Also Section 262; 1.262-1.)

Medical expense; visual display audio equipment for television sets. The extra cost of a specially equipped television set that provides deaf individuals with a visual display of the audio portion of television programs and the cost of an adaptor for a conventional television set that performs the same function are medical expenses.

Rev. Rul. 80-340

ISSUE

Is the cost of special equipment that displays the audio portion of television programs as subtitles on the screen of a television set an expense for medical care for purposes of the deduction allowed by section 213 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

Through the use of special equipment, television programming can be understood by the deaf. The equipment displays the audio portion of television programs as subtitles on the screen of a television set. Two types of equipment are available. One is a small self-contained unit that can be attached to any conventional television set. The other is a conventional color television set in which the equipment is incorporated during manufacture and for which the cost is more than for the same model color television set that does not contain the equipment.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 262 of the Code provides that, except as otherwise expressly provided, no deduction is allowed for personal, living, or family expenses.

Section 213(a) of the Code allows as a deduction the amount, not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, by which the amount of the expenses paid during the taxable year for medical care of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, and dependents, exceeds three percent of adjusted gross income.

Section 213(e) of the Code provides that the term "medical care" means amount paid for the diagnosis, care, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease, or for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body.

Section 1.213-1(e)(1)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that deductions for expenditures for medical care allowable under section 213 of the Code are confined strictly to expenses incurred primarily for the prevention or alleviation of a physical or mental defect or illness. An expenditure that is merely beneficial to the general health of an individual is not an expenditure for medical care.

Section 1.213-1(e)(1)(iii) of the regulations provides that a capital expenditure that is related only to the sick person and is not related to permanent improvement or betterment of property, if it otherwise qualifies as an expenditure for medical care, is deductible.

Rev. Rul. 71-48, 1971-1 C.B. 99, holds that the cost of specialized equipment that enables a deaf taxpayer to communicate effectively over a regular telephone by means of converted teletype signals is deductible as a medical expense.

Rev. Rul. 75-318, 1975-2 C.B. 88, holds that a taxpayer who purchased braille books and magazines for the taxpayer's child may deduct as expenses for medical care the portion of the purchase price that exceeds the price for regular printed editions.

Rev. Rul. 66-80, 1966-1 C.B. 57, holds that the cost of hand controls and other equipment specially adopted to permit the operation or use of an automobile by a physically handicapped individual and the cost of a mechanical device used to lift and place the individual in an automobile are deductible as medical expenses under section 213 of the Code.

HOLDING

In view of the foregoing, both the cost of the self-contained unit that can be attached to any conventional television set and the excess of the cost of the specially-equipped color television set over the cost of the same model conventional color television set are expenses for medical care for purposes of the deduction allowed by section 213 of the Code.

Oil and gas drilling expense; COST well. Several oil companies formed a consortium to drill a Continental Offshore Stratigraphic Test (COST) well, and shared the information developed from the drilling. The purpose of the well was to obtain geological information to be used in determining whether to bid on Government oil and gas leases. The drilling expenses are not intangible drilling and development costs subject to the elective provisions of sections 1.263(c)-1 and 1.612-4(a) of the regulations; they are capital expenditures allocable to any leases that may be acquired based on information obtained from the well.

Rev. Rul. 80-342

ISSUE

What is the proper income tax treatment of expenditures for drilling a Continental Offshore Stratigraphic Test well, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

Fifteen oil companies formed a consortium and received a permit from the United States Geological Survey (USGS) to drill a Continental Offshore Stratigraphic Test (COST) well off the east coast of the United States in 1978.

The site for drilling the COST well was determined on the basis of geophysical information obtained by the consortium from the interpretation of seismic data gathered under a previous permit from the USGS. Each member of the consortium capitalized its aliquot share of the amount paid for such seismic work to the area or areas of interest identified by the member in accordance with Rev. Rul. 77-188, 1977-1 C.B. 76.

The purpose of drilling the COST well was to obtain geological information on an offshore area that the United States Government was expected to open for leasing in the near future. The COST well was drilled outside the previously identified areas of interest (off stucture) for the purpose of obtaining more information about such areas of interest. The COST well is expected to identify source beds that may have generated oil and gas and to determine the thickness and nature of reservoir rocks having the potential for containing oil and gas. Information gathered in drilling the COST well is also very useful in verifying the geophysical interpretation of the seismic data previously gathered. This information is useful to the members of the consortium when the area is offered for lease.

Under the terms of the permit held by the consortium, any oil or gas that may be discovered in drilling the COST well remains the property of the Government. Also, under the terms of the permit, the USGS and each member of the consortium will share in the geological information developed in drilling the well. This information is proprietary to the members of the consortium for 10 years or until the Government grants a lease within 50 miles of the COST well, whichever is sooner. If a lease is granted within 50 miles of the COST well during the 10 year proprietary period, the geological information developed in drilling the COST well will be made available to the public by the USGS 60 days after such lease is granted.

In this case the 15 companies comprising the consortium paid 150*x* dollars each, for the right to participate in drilling the COST well and sharing the geological information developed therefrom. A drilling contractor was hired and the well was drilled in 1978. After the well was completed, the borehole was permanently plugged and abandoned as required by the terms of the permit.

Each member of the consortium and the USGS received a copy of the geological information developed in drilling the well. No lease was granted by the Government within 50 miles of the well in 1978 or 1979.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 263(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that no deduction shall be allowed for capital expenditures. Section 263(c) states that, notwithstanding subsection (a), regulations shall be prescribed that grant an option to deduct as expenses intangible drilling and development costs in the case of oil and gas wells.

Section 1.263(c)-1 of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the rules relating to the option to deduct as expenses intangible drilling and development costs in the case of oil and gas wells are found under section 1.612-4.

Section 1.612-4(a) of the regulations provides that in accordance with the provisions of section 263(c) of the Code, intangible drilling and development costs incurred by an operator (one who holds a working or operating interest in any tract or parcel of land either as a fee owner or under lease or any other form of contract granting working or operating rights) in the development of oil and gas properties may at the operator's option be chargeable to capital or to expense. This option applies to all expenditures made by an operator for wages, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., incident to and necessary for the drilling of wells and the preparation of wells for the production of oil and gas.

The consortium is neither the lessee nor owner of the property on which the COST well is drilled. Neither it nor the members of the consortium have an operating or working interest in the property. Furthermore, the COST well was drilled to obtain geological information and not for the production of oil and gas. Thus, the drilling costs paid or incurred by the members of the consortium do not come under the elective provisions of section 1.263(c)-1 and 1.612-4(a) of the regulations.

Rev. Rul. 77-188 holds that geological and geophysical exploration expenditures are allocable to the cost of the property or properties acquired or retained.

The consortium had the COST well drilled to obtain geological information on an offshore area on which they expect the Bureau of Land Management to permit interested parties to bid for leases on which the lessees may drill for oil and gas deposits. The knowledge gained from such geological information is used by the individual members of the consortium in making their decisions to bid on certain tracts offered for lease in the general area of the COST well, and in verifying their interpretation of previously gathered geophysical data. Thus, the geological exploration expenditures for drilling the COST well are paid or incurred by members of the consortium for the purpose of obtaining and accumulating data that will serve as a basis for the acquisition or retention of an oil and gas property. Such exploration expenditures are capital in nature and are not deductible as ordinary and necessary business expenses. See Louisiana Land and Exploration Co., 7 T.C. 507 (1946), aff'd on other issues, 161 F.2d 842 (5th Cir. 1947); Schermerhorn Oil Corporation, 46 B.T.A. 151 (1942); *G. HOLDING

The expenditures for drilling the COST wells are not intangible drilling and development costs subject to the elective provisions of section 1.263(c)-1 and section 1.612-4(a) of the regulations. However, similar to the exploration expenditures discussed in Rev. Rul. 77-188, the 150*x* dollars paid to drill the COST well is a capital expenditure. If any member of the consortium is successful in obtaining a lease or leases on the areas of interest to which the information obtained from drilling the COST well is allocable, the 150*x* dollars paid by such member is allocable to such lease or leases. However, any member of the consortium that is unsuccessful in acquiring a lease to which the geological information applies and abandons the area of interest as a potential source of mineral production may deduct the 150*x* dollars or an allocable portion thereof under the provisions of section 165 of the Code in the taxable year in which the abandonment occurs.

The following price indexes for July 1980 published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics on August 29, 1980, for use by department stores employing the retail inventory and last-in, first-out inventory methods, are accepted by the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to section 1.472-1(k) of the Income Tax Regulations and Rev. Proc. 72-21, 1972-1 C.B. 745, for appropriate application to inventories for taxable years of 12 months ended June 30, 1980, and July 31, 1980.

Indexes are given on a national basis for the store total, for 20 major groups of departments, and for two special combinations—soft and durable goods. The store total index covers all departments, including some not listed separately, with the following exceptions: candy, foods, liquor, tobacco, paints, and wallpaper, as well as contract departments.

Regulated investment companies; dividends; short-term capital gains and unexercised stock options. Short-term capital gains from the sale of stock or securities and unexercised options gains are not excludable from the gross income of a regulated investment company for purposes of section 854(b) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 70-597 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-345

ISSUES

I. Are short term capital gains from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities excluded from the gross income of a regulated investment company for purposes of section 854(b) of the Internal Revenue Code? If not, is the holding of Rev. Rul. 70-597, 1970-2 C.B. 146 that dividends paid by a regulated investment company out of net short-term capital gains qualify for the $100 dividends received individual exclusion under section 116 and the 85 percent dividends received corporate deduction under section 243, subject to the limitations under section 854, correct?

II. Are unexercised option gains realized by a regulated investment company excluded from gross income for purposes of section 854(b) of the Code?

FACTS

The taxpayer is a regulated investment company within the meaning of subchapter M (sections 851-855) of the Code.

Situation I

The taxpayer engages in the sale and other disposition of stock and securities that result in net short-term capital gains that are recognized by the taxpayer for federal income tax purposes. These gains are includible in the taxpayer's gross income under section 61 and are distributed to its shareholders as ordinary income. A regulated investment company's capital gain dividends, defined in section 852(b)(3)(C) of the Code, may only be paid from net capital gain, which is defined in section 1222(11) as the excess of net long-term capital gain over net short-term capital loss for the year. Thus, short-term capital gains are not includible in the taxpayer's capital gain dividends.

Situation II

The taxpayer writes options on stock held in its stock portfolio and sells the options on a national securities exchange. In some instances, the holder of an option permits the option to lapse. In other instances, the taxpayer terminates its obligation for an option it has written by buying an identical option. The termination of the taxpayer's obligation by the purchase of an identical option is called a closing transaction. In either of the above situations, the options are considered as not having been exercised. Gains from unexercised stock options are includible in the taxpayer's gross income under section 61 of the Code.

LAW

Section 854(b)(1) of the Code provides that in the case of a dividend received from a qualifying regulated investment company (other than a capital gain dividend to which section 854(a) applies), if the aggregate dividends received by the regulated investment company for the taxable year during which it paid such dividend are less than 75 percent of its gross income, then, in computing the section 116 exclusion and the section 243 deduction, there shall be taken into account only that portion of the dividend that bears the same ratio to the amount of such dividend as the aggregate dividends received by the regulated investment company during such taxable year bear to its gross income for such taxable year.

Section 854(b)(4)(A) of the Code provides that for purposes of section 854(b), the term "gross income" does not include gain from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities.

Situation I

By enacting section 854(b) of the Code, Congress intended to place the shareholders of a regulated investment company in roughly the same position concerning the benefits of sections 116 and 243 as persons investing directly in a taxable corporation instead of through the medium of a regulated investment company. This intent is reflected in section 854(b)(4)(B), excluding dividends received from foreign corporations from the term "aggregate dividends received," and otherwise restricting that term by reference to section 116. S. Rep. No. 1622, 83rd Cong., 2d Sess. 104 (1954), states:

> [Y]our committee has defined dividend income to the investment company so as to exclude dividends which would not be entitled to the dividends-received . . . exclusion in the hands of an individual shareholder. It appears to your committee that it is inappropriate to allow the shareholder of a regulated investment company to treat as a dividend for purposes of the . . . exclusion amounts distributed by the investment companies from sources such as dividends paid by foreign corporations, which if received directly by the shareholder would not be eligible for such treatment.

The 75 percent test and the apportionment formula in section 854(b)(1) of the Code are provisions designed to achieve rough equivalence of treatment under sections 116 and 243 between regulated investment company shareholders and direct investors. The shareholders of a taxable corporation are allowed the section 116 exclusion or the section 243 deduction so as to limit the multiple taxation of corporate earnings. However, a considerable part of a distribution paid by a regulated investment company may represent nondividend income that has not previously been taxed and that, like dividend income, is passed through tax free to the shareholders of a qualifying regulated investment company. To restrict the use of sections 116 and 243 if the regulated investment company has a large proportion of nondividend income, Congress devised section 854(b)(1).

> [I]f more than 25 percent of the income of the regulated investment company is from interest or other nondividend income, both the dividends-received deduction for corporations and the dividend exclusion . . . for individuals . . . are to be available only on the portion of the regulated investment company's distributions which actually represents dividend income. If less than 25 percent of the company's income is from interest or other nondividend income, the dividend . . . allowances will apply to the entire distribution by the regulated investment company. Capital-gain dividends distributed by regulated investment companies will not be eligible for either corporate or individual dividend allowances.

S. Rep. No. 1622, at 103-04 (emphasis added); accord, H.R. Rep. No. 1337, 83rd Cong., 2d Sess. 74 (1954).

Applying the definition of gross income in section 854(b)(4)(A) of the Code literally to short-term capital gains from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities, such gains would be excluded from gross income for purposes of section 854(b). Hence, they would be disregarded in applying the 75 percent test and the apportionment formula that must be used if the 75 percent test is not met. This would defeat congressional intent because it would give regulated investment company shareholders a substantial tax advantage over direct investors with respect to such gains.

If the regulated investment company's income consisted solely of dividends and such short-term capital gains, the 75 percent test would be met (because gross income would equal aggregate dividends received), no apportionment would be required, and the entire distribution by the regulated investment company would qualify under section 116 of the Code and section 243. This would be the result no matter what portion of the distribution represented such gains, given a literal interpretation of section 854(b)(4)(A).

For example, if the regulated investment company had gross income under section 61 of the Code consisting solely of $100x of qualifying dividends and $100x of short-term capital gains from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities, and such gains were excluded from gross income for purposes of section 854(b)(1), the ratio of aggregate dividends received to gross income would be 100 percent ($100x dividend income / $100x gross income), which is greater than 75 percent, so all of this income (when distributed by the regulated investment company) would be eligible for the exclusion under section 116 and the deduction under section 243. On the other hand, if such gains were included in gross income, an apportionment would be required because the ratio would be 50 percent ($100x dividend income / $200x gross income). As a result of the apportionment, $100x ($200x gross income times 50 percent), the amount of qualifying dividend income received by the regulated investment company, would be the amount eligible under sections 116 and 243.

If the regulated investment company also had other forms of income, for example, interest, an apportionment might be required under a literal interpretation of section 854(b)(4)(A) of the Code. However, the amount of the distribution determined under the apportionment formula to be eligible for the exclusion under section 116 of the Code and the deduction under section 243 would at least partially reflect short-term capital gains from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities, in direct conflict with the underscored language quoted from the committee reports. This would not happen if the short-term capital gains were included in gross income.

Section 854(b)(4)(A) of the Code should be read in conformity with congressional intent. That provision should be interpreted to exclude only long-term capital gains from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities from gross income for purposes of section 854(b). Such gains are distributed as capital gain dividends and are not part of the distribution to which the 75 percent test and the apportionment formula relate. "All statutes must be construed in the light of their purpose. A literal reading of them which would lead to absurd results is to be avoided when they can be given a reasonable application consistent with their words and with the legislative purpose." Haggar Co. v. Helvering, 308 U.S. 389, 394 (1940), Ct. D. 1433, 1940-1 C.B. 237.

Situation II

Under section 1234(b) of the Code, the grantor of an option in property must treat gain or loss from any closing transaction with respect to the option, or gain on the lapse of the option, as short-term capital gain or loss.

The regulated investment company in the present case has gains from closing transactions in options, and lapses of options it has written. Under section 1234(b) of the Code, these unexercised option gains are short-term capital gains. As discussed in Situation I, only long-term capital gains from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities are excludable from gross income under section 854(b).

HOLDINGS

I. Short-term capital gains from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities are not excluded from gross income for purposes of section 854(b) of the Code. Therefore, the holding of Rev. Rul. 70-597 that dividends paid by a regulated investment company out of net short-term capital gains qualify for the $100 dividend received individual exclusion under section 116 and the 85 percent dividends received corporate deduction under section 243, subject to the limitations of section 854, is modified.

However, if a regulated investment company has short-term capital losses, in addition to short-term capital gains, represented in its net short-term capital gains, gross income for purposes of section 854(b) of the Code should be reduced by the amount of the short-term capital losses. For example, suppose the regulated investment company has $200x dividends, $200x of short-term capital gains, and $100x of short-term capital losses, and distributed all $300x of its net income. Gross income for purposes of section 854(b), after adjustment for the short-term capital loss, would be $300x ($400x—$100x), so the ratio of aggregate dividends received to gross income would be 66⅔ percent. Using the apportionment formula (because the 75 percent test is not met), $200x ($300x times 66⅔ percent) would be eligible for sections 116 and 243 treatment.

II. Unexercised option gains realized by a regulated investment company are not excluded from gross income for purposes of section 854(b) of the Code.

PROSPECTIVE APPLICATION

Pursuant to the authority contained in section 7805(b) of the Code, the conclusions in this revenue ruling will not be applied adversely to distributions by a regulated investment company out of net short-term capital gains realized from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities purchased by the regulated investment company before December 15, 1980.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 70-597, 1970-2 C.B. 146, involved a regulated investment company with two classes of stock, namely, income shares and capital shares. Holders of the income shares were to receive all distributions of net income from the investment portfolio, and all capital gains were to be allocated to the capital shares. Net short-term capital gains were to be paid to the capital shareholders to the extent necessary to satisfy the 90 percent distribution requirement of section 852(a)(1) of the Code. Rev. Rul. 70-597 concluded that distributions paid out of net short-term capital gains with respect to the capital shares would be eligible for sections 116 and 243 treatment, subject to the limitations of section 854.

Rev. Rul. 70-597 is modified to state that a distribution paid out of net short-term capital gains with respect to the capital shares would qualify for the exclusion under section 116 of the Code and the deduction under section 243 if, but only if, the aggregate dividends received by the regulated investment company for the taxable year during which it paid such distribution constitute at least 75 percent of its gross income (including short-term capital gains from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities), and the other requirements of section 854(b) are satisfied.

Stock transferred in trust; indirect retention of voting rights. An individual owned 19 shares of a closely held corporation's stock, and the individual's children owned the other 81 shares. On June 30, 1976, the individual transferred the 19 shares to a trust. The trust instrument gave the trustee sole authority to vote the shares, but at the time of the transfer, the trustee agreed to consult the transferor with respect to voting and to vote only with the transferor's consent. The transferor indirectly retained the right to vote the transferred shares, and their value is includible in the transferor's gross estate.

Rev. Rul. 80-346

ISSUE

Are shares of stock of a closely held corporation includible in a decedent's gross estate under section 2036 of the Internal Revenue Code if the decedent transferred the shares and the voting rights, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

The decedent, D, owned 19 shares of stock of X Corporation, a closely held corporation. D's children owned the remaining 81 shares of X Corporation stock.

On June 30, 1976, D transferred the 19 shares to a trust for the benefit of D's adult children. A was designated as trustee. The trust instrument provided that A would have sole authority to vote the shares. However, it was agreed, at the time of the transfer, that A would consult D with respect to voting the stock and would vote only with D's consent. Thereafter, A exercised the voting rights only after obtaining D's approval.

D died on July 12, 1979. The transferred shares were not included in D's gross estate on the federal estate tax return filed.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2036(a) of the Code provides, in part, that the value of the gross estate shall include the value of all property to the extent of any interest therein of which the decedent has made a transfer under which the decedent retained, for any period which does not in fact end before death, the enjoyment of the property.

Section 2036(b) of the Code provides, in part, that the retention of the right to vote, directly or indirectly, shares of stock of a controlled corporation shall be considered to be a retention of the enjoyment of transferred property. A corporation shall be treated as a controlled corporation if, at any time after the transfer of the property and during the three year period ending on the date of death, the decedent owned, with the application of section 318, or had the right to vote stock possessing at least 20 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock.

Section 20.2036-1(a) of the regulations provides that an interest or right will be treated as having been retained or reserved if at the time of the transfer, there was an express or implied understanding that the interest or right would later be conferred.

Section 318(a) of the Code provides, in part, that an individual shall be considered as the owner of the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by the individual's children. Unless otherwise provided, as in section 2036(b), the provisions in section 318(a) apply only to the sections enumerated in section 318(b).

Section 2036(b) of the Code was enacted because Congress believed that voting rights are so significant with respect to corporate stock that the retention of voting rights by a donor should be treated as the retention of the enjoyment of the stock for estate tax purposes. H.R. Rep. No. 94-1380, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 65 (1976), 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 3) 735, 799. However, only shares of a controlled corporation are affected by the statute. Section 2036(b) applies only in the case of a controlled corporation.

In the present situation, under section 318, D is deemed to have been the owner of at least 20 percent of the total combined voting power of all of X Corporation stock. Therefore, X Corporation is a controlled corporation within the meaning of section 2036(b).

The constructive ownership rules of section 318 apply solely for the purpose of determining whether a corporation is a controlled corporation, and are not applicable in determining if the decedent possessed ownership or voting control over transferred stock. S. Rep. No. 95-745, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 90 (1978).

Under section 2036(b), however, the transferor's retention of voting rights need not be direct to cause inclusion of the stock in the transferor's gross estate. The retention may be indirect, such as an agreement or arrangement with a trustee to vote the stock in accordance with directions of the decedent. S. Rep. No. 95-745, supra., at 90.

Under the facts presented, D, at the time of the transfer, indirectly retained the voting rights under an oral agreement with the trustee notwithstanding that the trust instrument made no such provision. Cf. Estate of Beckwith v. Commissioner, 55 T.C. 242 (1970), acq., 1971-2 C.B. 1.

HOLDING

Since D indirectly retained the right to vote the 19 shares of the controlled corporation, the value of the shares is includible in D's gross estate under section 2036 of the Code.

Section 2040.—Joint Interests

26 CFR 23.1: Election and eligibility to treat interests in property held jointly on December 31, 1976, as qualified joint interests.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER B, PART 23.—TEMPORARY ESTATE TAX REGULA-

TIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1978

Procedure for correction of an incomplete election to treat an interest in certain joint tenancies as a qualified joint interest

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides temporary regulations for taxpayers who elected to treat their interest in certain jointly held property as a "qualified joint interest" under section 2040(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (Code) but failed to comply with the requirements of section 23.1 of the Temporary Estate Tax Regulations.

DATE: The regulations apply to elections for certain property held jointly on December 31, 1976.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On March 20, 1980, section 23.1 of the Temporary Estate Tax Regulations was published in the Federal Register (45 FR 17983) concerning the procedure for the election to treat an interest in certain joint tenancies as a qualified joint interest for estate tax purposes. The election is available under sec. 2040(d) of the Code.

Those regulations provided, generally, that the spouse who furnished more than one-half the initial consideration for the property must make the election by including the amount of the gift in a timely filed gift tax return and must pay any tax due. The regulations provided a formula for computing the amount of the gift. Under sec. 6075(b) of the Code, the due date for the gift tax return was April 15, 1980, unless the taxpayer received an extension under sec. 6081.

Sec. 23.1(a)(3) of the regulations required that a statement of consent be attached to the gift tax return, signed by the donee spouse and indicating that the donee spouse consents to the election. It has come to the attention of the Treasury Department that in many cases prior to the issuance of the regulations, taxpayers attempted to make the election by timely filing a gift tax return but failed to include a statement of consent.

PROVISIONS OF THE REGULATIONS

This amendment to the regulations provides that in the case of a timely filed election that did not comply with sec. 23.1 of the Temporary Estate Tax Regulations under the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1], treatment of the interest as a qualified joint interest from the date of the original filing will be permitted only if a corrected gift tax return is filed that is in compliance with sec. 23.1. The regulations require that the corrected gift tax return must be filed by April 15, 1981.

WAIVER OF CERTAIN PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS OF TREASURY DIRECTIVE

A determination has been made by Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, that there is an immediate need for these regulations under section 2040(d) to provide guidance to taxpayers. Compliance with the procedural requirements of paragraphs 8 through 14 of the Treasury directive relating to improved regulations (43 FR 52120) would therefore be impractical and, accordingly, the requirements have been waived.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation was Stephen J. Small of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both in matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 23 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 23.1 is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (f) is redesignated as paragraph (g).

2. A new paragraph (f) is inserted to read as set forth below.

§ 23.1 Election and eligibility to treat interests in property held jointly on December 31, 1976, as qualified joint interests.

* * * * *

(f) Incomplete election—(1) Corrected return required. Where an otherwise valid election, on a timely filed gift tax return for any calendar quarter ending in 1977, 1978, or 1979, failed to satisfy the procedural requirements of this section, the election will be considered effective from the date of the original filing upon the filing of a corrected gift tax return, with the statement of consent attached, at the Internal Revenue Service Office where the original return was filed.

(2) Due Date. The corrected gift tax return must be filed by April 15, 1981. The executor or administrator of a spouse who dies (or the guardian or committee of a spouse who becomes legally incompetent) before the corrected gift tax return is filed may file the return or may sign the consent as the case may be.

This Treasury decision adds temporary regulations to enable taxpayers to comply with the new law on the election to treat an interest in property as a qualified joint interest. Because this regulation is necessary to provide immediate guidance to taxpayers, it is impractical to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of this section.

Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Information return penalties and withholding tax rules concerning individual retirement plans

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations prescribing withholding tax rules for individual retirement plans and penalties for failure to furnish information in connection with such plans. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1] and the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. These regulations would provide the public with additional guidance needed to comply with those Acts and would affect the parties responsible for furnishing or filing certain documents concerning individual retirement plans and employers contributing to such plans.

DATE: The regulations have varying effective dates as indicated. The provisions imposing a penalty tax for the failure to furnish or file documents concerning individual retirement plans are effective January 1, 1975.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On August 20, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Procedure and Administration Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 301) under section 6693 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and to the Employment Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 31) under section 3401 of the Code (44 FR 48719). The amendments were proposed to conform the Regulations to section 2002(f) and (g)(7) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (88 Stat. 967, 970) [supra at 136 and 139] and section 1501(b)(7) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1736) [supra at 212]. A public hearing was neither requested nor held on these regulations. After consideration of all the comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted, as revised by this Treasury decision.

EXCLUSION FROM "WAGES" OF PAYMENTS TO INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT PLANS

Section 3401 defines the term "wages" for purposes of chapter 24 of the Code (relating to withholding taxes). Section 3401(a)(12)(D) excludes from the definition of "wages" payments to individual retirement plans described in section 219(a) or section 220(a) if, at the time of such payment, it is reasonable for the employer to believe the employee will be entitled to a deduction under section 219 or 220 for the payment. In general, the effect of the exclusion from wages is that the employer does not have to withhold any income taxes for the employee for these payments.

The final regulations make it clear that this exclusion is also available for payments to a simplified employee pension arrangement described in section 408(k).

PENALTIES FOR FAILURE TO FURNISH INFORMATION CONCERNING INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT PLANS

Section 6693 of the Code imposes a $10 penalty for each failure to furnish or file a report or statement required by the regulations under section 408(i) regarding each individual retirement account or individual retirement annuity. This penalty is assessed against the person required by section 408(i) to furnish or file the report or statement. A penalty shall not be assessed, however, if it is established that there was reasonable cause for the failure.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to 26 CFR Parts 31 and 301 are hereby adopted.

EMPLOYMENT TAX REGULATIONS
[26 CFR Part 31]

Paragraph 1. The title of section 31.3401(a)(12)-1 is amended and a new paragraph (d) is added to read as follows:

§ 31.3401(a)(12)-1 Payment from or to certain tax-exempt trusts, or under or to certain annuity plans or bond purchase plans, or to individual retirement plans.

* * * * *

(d) Payment to individual retirement plans. (1) The term "wages" does not include any payment to an individual retirement plan described in section 7701(a)(37) by an employer after December 31, 1974, on behalf of an employee, if, at the time of such payment, it is reasonable for the employer to believe that the employee will be entitled to a deduction for such payment under section 219(a).

(2) The term "wages" does not include any payment to an individual retirement plan described in section 7701 (a)(37) by an employer after December 31, 1976, on behalf of an employee, if, at the time of such payment, it is reasonable for the employer to believe that the employee on whose behalf the payment is made will be entitled to a deduction for such payment under section 220(a).

(3) The term "wages" does not include any payment to a simplified employee pension arrangement described in section 408(k) by an employer after December 31, 1978, on behalf of an employee, if, at the time of such payment, it is reasonable for the employer to believe that the employee on whose behalf the payment is made will be entitled to a deduction for such payment under section 219(a).

PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION TAX REGULATIONS
26 CFR Part 301

Par. 2. Section 301.6693-1 is added at the appropriate place to read as follows:

§ 301.6693-1 Penalty for failure to provide reports and documents concerning individual retirement accounts or annuities.

(a) In general—(1) Annual reports, etc. The trustee of an individual retirement account described in section 408(a), or the issuer of an individual retirement annuity described in section 408(b), who fails to furnish or file a report or any other document required under section 408(i) and § 1.408-5 within the time and in the manner prescribed for furnishing or filing such item shall pay a penalty of $10 for each failure unless it is shown that such failure is due to reasonable cause.

(2) Disclosure statements. The trustee of an individual retirement account described in section 408(a), or the issuer of an individual retirement annuity described in section 408(b), who fails to furnish or file a disclosure statement, a governing instrument, an amendment to either, or any other document required under section 408 (i) and § 1.408-6, within the time and in the manner prescribed for furnishing or filing such item, shall pay a penalty of $10 for each failure unless it is shown that such failure is due to reasonable cause.

(b) Showing of reasonable cause. The penalty imposed by section 6693 shall not apply to any person with respect to a failure to furnish or file a report, statement, or other document within the time and in the manner prescribed if it is established to the satisfaction of the district director that such failure was due to reasonable cause. An affirmative showing of reasonable cause must be made in the form of a written statement, containing a declaration by such person that it is made under the penalties of perjury and setting forth all the facts alleged to constitute reasonable cause.

(c) Deficiency procedures not to apply. The penalty imposed by section 6693 may be assessed and collected without regard to the deficiency procedures provided by subchapter B of chapter 63 of the Code.

(d) Other penalties. The penalties of section 6693 and this section are in lieu of any penalty imposed by section 6652(f) for violation of section 6047 (d), with respect to any failure to furnish or file described in this section.

(e) Effective date. This section shall take effect on January 1, 1975.

Excise tax treatment of articles sold tax free for exportation upon their subsequent importation into the United States

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

SUMMARY: This document provides final Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations relating to the excise tax treatment of articles previously sold tax free for exportation under section 4221(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 upon their subsequent return to the United States. These regulations provide necessary guidance to importers of previously exported articles that are returned to the United States in an unused condition.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On June 9, 1980, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 48) under section 4221(a)(2) of the Code. No written comments were received, and a public hearing was neither requested nor held. After further consideration, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

EXPLANATION OF THE REGULATIONS

Section 48.4221-3 of the regulations is currently silent with respect to the excise tax treatment of articles that previously were sold tax free for exportation but which subsequently are imported to the United States in an unused and undamaged condition. These regulations provide that the importer of these articles is subject to the excise tax imposed by Chapter 32 of the Code on the subsequent sale or use of the imported article in the United States.

A change has been made in these regulations as proposed. The reference to a bus in example (2) at § 48.4221-3(a)(2) is inappropriate as bus chassis and bodies are now exempt from manufacturers excise taxes by reason of section 4063(a)(6) of the Code. Consequently, this example is amended by changing the subject of the example from a bus to a truck.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Kyllikki Kusma of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to the regulations (26 CFR Part 48) are hereby adopted:

Paragraph 1. Section 48.4221-3(a) is redesignated as § 48.4221-3(a)(1) and a new § 48.4221-3(a)(2) is added to read as follows:

§ 48.4221-3 Tax-free sales of articles for export, or for resale by the purchaser to a second purchaser for export.

(a) In general—(1) * * *

(2) If an article, otherwise taxable under chapter 32 of the Code—

(i) Is sold tax free by the manufacturer pursuant to section 4221(a)(2) and this section, and

(ii) Is returned subsequently to the United States in an unused and undamaged condition, then the importer is liable for the tax imposed by chapter 32 on the subsequent sale or use of the article in the United States. The provisions of this paragraph (a)(2) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Q, a U.S. motor vehicle manufacturer, previously sold a truck chassis to R, a company in Canada. The sale was tax free under section 4221(a)(2). R mounted a truck body on the truck chassis and sold the completed vehicle to S. Thereafter S sold the completed new vehicle to T who imported the vehicle into the United States and sold it. The sale of the completed truck subjects T to an excise tax liability under section 4061(a)(1) with respect to both the body and the chassis.

Example (2). X, a U.S. manufacturer of trucks, sold a trash collection truck to Y, a company in France. The sale was tax free under section 4221(a)(2). The truck was sold by Y to the City of Nice, France. After initial use, the city determined that the truck was not suited for its needs and resold the truck to X. X returned the truck to the United States where it was resold. The resale of the truck by X does not subject X to an excise tax liability under section 4061(a)(1).

Returns of missing persons. An estate tax return must be filed within 9 months following the period of time state law sets for declaring a missing person dead; Rev. Rul. 66-286 clarified and modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-347

ISSUE

Whether a federal estate tax return must be filed with respect to a missing person's estate within the prescribed period following 7 years from the disappearance or 14 years therefrom when under the law of the state in which the person resided there can be no court adjudication of death until the elapse of 14 years from the disappearance.

FACTS

The taxpayer has been missing for 7 years and has not been seen or heard from since. Under the state law, in the absence of evidence of death, a missing person is presumed to be alive until 14 years have elapsed. Since there is no such evidence with respect to the taxpayer, a state court will not issue a death decree before the end of the 14-year period. Receivers for the taxpayer's property have been appointed by the probate court.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6018 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the executor shall make a return with respect to the federal estate tax. Under section 6075 (a), as amended by the Excise, Estate, and Gift Tax Adjustment Act of 1970, section 101(b), 1971-1 C.B. 533, estate tax returns must be filed within 9 months after the date of the decedent's death.

Rev. Rul. 66-286, 1966-2 C.B. 485, sets forth requirements for filing an estate tax return for the estate of a missing person depending upon when the title to the person's property is transferred as if the person was deceased. This may occur by a state court proceeding, the application of a state statute, or the person's property being treated by others as if it were theirs. As Rev. Rul. 66-286 indicates, where the gross estate exceeds the exemption, a return must generally be filed within 15 months following 7 years of continuous and unexplained absence raising the common law presumption of death. The 7-year presumption of death rule referred to in Rev. Rul. 66-286 is a rule that has been adopted by many states, either by statute or court decision. However, where a state statute provides for a different time period, that period will determine when the return is due.

In this case, under state law the taxpayer is presumed to be alive and the taxpayer's property has merely been put into receivership. There is no transfer of title or assets as in Rev. Rul. 66-286. However, if there is a transfer pursuant to a state court decision, the date of death would be indicated thereby. Thus, giving proper regard to the state statutes and court proceedings would allow a period longer than the general rule, and the 7-year requirement of Rev. Rul. 66-286 is not applicable.

HOLDING

The estate tax return is required to be filed within 9 months following the 14-year period specified in the state statute, unless death is established earlier.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 66-286 is clarified, and is modified to indicate the 9-month period for filing a return under section 6075(a) of the Code, as amended.

Rev. Proc. 80-55

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to amplify Rev. Proc. 70-20, 1970-2 C.B. 499 and Rev. Proc. 72-18, 1972-1 C.B. 740, to provide that section 265(2) of the Internal Revenue Code will be applied to disallow deductions for interest paid by commercial banks on certain time deposits made by a state when such deposits are made for a specific period of time and are secured by pledges of tax-exempt obligations.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Rev. Proc. 70-20 sets forth guidelines for taxpayers and field offices of the Internal Revenue Service for the application of section 265(2) of the Code to banks holding tax-exempt state and local obligations. Section 265(2) provides that no deduction shall be allowed for interest on indebtedness "incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations . . . the interest on which is wholly exempt" from federal income tax.

.02 Section 3.11 of Rev. Proc. 70-20 provides that types of borrowing not specifically dealt with in Rev. Proc. 70-20 are to be decided on the basis of all the facts and circumstances surrounding the borrowings and in light of the general principles set forth in Rev. Proc. 70-20.

.03 A bank deposit secured by tax-exempt obligations is one of the types of borrowings not specifically dealt with in Rev. Proc. 70-20.

.04 Rev. Proc. 72-18 provides guidelines for the application of section 265(2) of the Code to banks in situations not dealt with in Rev. Proc. 70-20. Section 3.01 of Rev. Proc. 72-18 sets forth the general rule that section 265(2) is only applicable where the indebtedness is incurred or continued for the purpose of purchasing or carrying tax-exempt securities. Accordingly, the application of section 265(2) requires a determination, based on all the facts and circumstances, of the taxpayer's purpose in incurring each item of indebtedness. The taxpayer's purpose may be established either by direct evidence or by circumstantial evidence.

.05 Section 3.03 of Rev. Proc. 72-18 provides that direct evidence of a purpose to carry tax-exempt obligations exists where tax-exempt obligations are used as collateral for indebtedness. "[O]ne who borrows to buy tax-exempts and one who borrows against tax-exempts already owned are in virtually the same economic position. Section 265(2) makes no distinction between them." Wisconsin Cheeseman v. United States, 338 F. 2d 420 at 422 (7th Cir. 1968).

.06 In Rev. Proc. 78-34, 1978-2 C.B. 535, the Service amplified Rev. Proc. 70-20 to provide that section 265(2) of the Code will not be applied to disallow deductions for interest paid by commercial banks on borrowings of Treasury tax and loan funds when those borrowings are secured by pledges of tax-exempt obligations. This treatment afforded to borrowings of Treasury tax and loan funds is permitted because the borrowing of such funds, notwithstanding the pledge of tax-exempt obligations, is in the nature of a demand deposit. Also, the availability of these funds is subject to the exclusive discretion of the Treasury. In addition, access to these funds by depository banks is not subject to negotiated rates of interest or any other market factors that normally influence arm's length money market transactions.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 State law will often permit state funds to be placed on deposit with local banks. The state law generally requires that a contract be entered into designating the rate of interest to be paid on such deposit and the duration of the deposit. The contract may provide, with respect to the duration of the deposit, that funds will remain on deposit for a specified period of time (30 days to 1 year), or it may provide that the availability of the state funds is subject to the exclusive discretion of the state. In addition, the bank may also be required to deposit with the proper state authority certain securities at least equal in market value to the money deposited by the state in that bank. The state law generally lists those securities that are acceptable for this purpose. A bank receiving such deposits often pledges tax-exempt securities as collateral.

.02 A depository bank that holds demand deposits that it has collateralized with tax-exempt obligations is not in virtually the same economic position as one who borrows to buy tax-exempt obligations. That depository bank does not have the unrestricted use of the amount of the borrowed funds because such amount is subject to immediate withdrawal at any moment in time. See Rev. Proc. 78-34.

.03 A depository bank that holds state funds as time-deposits that it has collateralized with tax-exempt obligations is in virtually the same economic position as one who has borrowed to buy tax-exempt obligations. The depository bank knows with certainty that it will have the amount of deposited funds available to it, without restriction, for a fixed period of time. Accordingly, direct evidence of a purpose to purchase or carry tax-exempt obligations exists under section 3.03 of Rev. Proc. 72-18.

.04 Commercial banks that participate in a state program that requires them to bid for state funds, negotiate the rate of interest, and requires the state to leave such deposits for a specified period of time will create an indebtedness of the type described in section 265(2) of the Code. Thus, the interest paid by commercial banks on such deposit will be disallowed under section 265(2).

.05 Commercial banks that participate in a state program in which funds are awarded in the manner described in Rev. Proc. 78-34 and where the placement of such funds is at the discretion of the state do not create indebtedness of the type described in section 265(2) of the Code. Thus, section 265(2) will not be applied to disallow a deduction for interest paid by the commercial banks on such funds.

Rev. Proc. 70-20 and Rev. Proc. 72-18 are amplified.

Rev. Proc. 80-56

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to state the procedures for implementing amendments to the Internal Revenue Code that provide for an exemption from social security taxes in cases covered by certain international agreements (sometimes referred to as totalization agreements), and to state the effect that such agreements have on the income tax liability of certain employees and self-employed persons.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 1401(c) of the Code, relating to the Self-Employment Contributions Act (SECA), section 3101 (c) of the Code, relating to the employee's share of the taxes imposed by the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA), and section 3111 (c) of the Code, relating to the employer's share of the taxes imposed by the FICA, were added to the Code by section 317(b) of the Social Security Amendments of 1977, 1978-1 C.B. 462, 467.

.02 These provisions grant an exemption from the social security taxes imposed by the SECA and the FICA during any period in which there is in effect an agreement entered into under section 233 of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. section 433 (added by section 317(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1977) with any foreign country to the extent the wages or self-employment income are subject under such agreement to taxes or contributions under the social security system of such foreign country.

.03 For example, assume that the United States has entered into an international social security agreement with foreign country X under section 233 of the Social Security Act. Employee A, a citizen of X, is employed in the United States by a corporation incorporated in X under circumstances that require social security payments to country X and that would ordinarily also require payment of the taxes imposed by the FICA. However, because of the agreement between the foreign country and the United States, wages paid to A may be exempt from the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of the Code.

.04 Section 317(b)(4) of the Social Security Amendments of 1977 provides that, notwithstanding any other provision of law, taxes paid by any individual to any foreign country with respect to any period of employment or self-employment that is covered under the social security system of such foreign country in accordance with the terms of an agreement entered into pursuant to section 233 of the Social Security Act shall not, under the income tax laws of the United States, be deductible by, or creditable against the income tax of, any such individual.

.05 This provision precludes both a deduction from adjusted gross income and a credit against income tax liability under sections 164(a) and 901(b) of the Code, respectively, for taxes paid by any employee or self-employed person with respect to a period of employment or self-employment that is covered under the social security system of such foreign country under the terms of a totalization agreement between the United States and such foreign country.

.06 For example, the social security tax payments made to foreign country X in .03 above are neither allowable as a deduction under section 164 (a) nor allowable as a credit under section 901(b) of the Code.

SEC. 3. EXEMPTION FROM SECA TAXES

.01 In order to substantiate an exemption under section 1401(c) of the Code from the taxes imposed by the SECA, the self-employed individual should obtain from a duly authorized official or agency of the foreign country involved a statement—

(1) setting forth the individual's name, address, and taxpayer identifying number,

(2) stating that there is in effect an agreement between the foreign country and the United States under which the self-employment income of the individual is subject to taxes or contributions under the social security system of the foreign country, and

(3) showing the date on which the agreement commenced to apply and, if determined, the ending date.

.02 No particular form is prescribed for this statement. A copy of the statement or other suitable substantiation must be attached to the individual's federal income tax return for each year the agreement is in effect. The taxpayer should enter "Exempt, see attached statement," on the line designated for self-employment tax liability on the taxpayer's income tax return.

.03 The exemption applies to that portion of the taxpayer's net earnings from self-employment that is attributable to that portion of the taxable year that occurs on and after the effective date of the agreement. Thus, for a taxpayer using the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting the SECA tax liability for the taxable year is determined by computing the taxpayer's net earnings from self-employment for such year without regard to the exemption and then eliminating any of such amount that results from an excess of income received over deductions paid by the taxpayer on and after the date the agreement becomes effective.

SEC. 4. EXEMPTION FROM FICA TAXES

.01 In order to substantiate an exemption from the taxes imposed by the FICA under sections 3101(c) and 3111(c) of the Code, the employer must obtain a statement issued by a duly authrized official or agency of the foreign country involved—

(1) setting forth the employee's name, as well as the employee's address and taxpayer identifying number, if known,

(2) setting forth the employer's name, address, and taxpayer identifying number, if any,

(3) stating that there is in effect an agreement between the foreign country and the United States under which wages received by or paid to the employee by the employer are subject to taxes or contributions under the social security system of such foreign country, and

(4) showing the date on which the agreement commenced to apply and, if determined, the ending date.

.02 No particular form is prescribed for this statement. It should be retained in the employer's files.

.03 The exemption from the FICA taxes applies to wages paid on and after the effective date of the agreement but not to wages paid before that date. For example, if the agreement is approved and becomes effective on November 1, the wages paid on and after that date may be exempt from FICA taxes during the time the agreement is in effect.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

U.S.-Switzerland Income Tax Treaty Discussions

Announcement 80-156

The Treasury Department has announced that representatives of the United States and Switzerland recently concluded a first round of discussions on a new income tax treaty between the two countries. The new treaty would replace the treaty currently in force, which was signed in 1951. Discussions are expected to continue in March 1981.

The new treaty is expected to follow the pattern of the 1977 U.S. and OECD Model treaties. The discussions will cover the full range of issues normally considered in tax treaty negotiations, including the tax treatment of income from business, investment, and personal services, and procedures for administering the treaty. The United States has asked specifically to discuss several areas in which the existing treaty appears imperfect. These include "correlative adjustments" in one country in response to an adjustment made by the other country to reflect arm's-length pricing principles; inappropriate use of the treaty by third country residents; and the narrowness of the existing exchange of information provision. The application of the treaty to the Swiss forfait tax is also under consideration.

The Treasury invites persons wishing to submit comments on any aspect of the proposed treaty, on issues which have arisen under the present treaty or on U.S.-Swiss tax relations generally to write, by December 31, 1980, to H. David Rosenbloom, International Tax Counsel, Department of the Treasury, Room 3064, Washington, D.C. 20220.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individual has been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Section 38.—Investment in Certain Depreciable Property

26 CFR 1.38-1: Investment in certain depreciable property.

Concrete raceways and concrete-lined water diversion canals that are designed and constructed to remain permanently in place and that are used as an integral part of the activity of raising fish qualify as section 38 property.

Rev. Rul. 80-341

ISSUE

Is the commercial raising of fish for food a production activity within the meaning of section 48(a)(1)(B)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

Taxpayer is in the business of raising rainbow trout for sale to fish processing plants and other customers. Fertile eggs are purchased from a commercial fish breeder, hatched, and raised to market size, normally 10 to 12 inches in length. Taxpayer's facility includes a fish hatchery, which contains workspace and houses the necessary tanks and equipment for hatching eggs and growing the fish to a length of approximately 2 inches; outdoor raceway to which the fish are transferred and held until they reach market size; and a concrete-lined water diversion canal system that carries fresh water from a main spring water transmission ditch to the hatchery and raceways and then discharges the used water into a nearby river. The hatchery, which requires a constant supply of fresh water, is a one-story 30-by 90-foot concrete block structure. The raceways are rectangular, concrete-lined excavations varying in length from 70 to 100 feet and are approximately 3.5 feet deep. To control the volume of water entering the raceways, concrete head and tail gates are constructed at the ends. A vertical drop is necessary between sets of raceways for the water to achieve the required oxygen content.

In 1978, taxpayer constructed 12 new raceways and water diversion canals that supply the raceways. The taxpayer's new concrete raceways and concrete-lined canals are tangible depreciable property with a determinable useful life in excess of 3 years. Such property is depreciable property within the meaning of section 167 of the Code. Thus, the question presented is whether the raceways and canals are "section 38 property" for purposes of the investment tax credit.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 48(a)(1) of the Code provides that the term "section 38 property" means (a) tangible personal property, or (b) other tangible property (not including a building and its structural components) but only if such property is used as an integral part of manufacturing, production, extraction, or certain other specified activities. Section 38 property includes only property with respect to which depreciation (or amortization in lieu of depreciation) is allowable and having a useful life of 3 years or more.

Section 1.48-1(d)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that for the purpose of the credit allowed by section 38 of the Code the terms "manufacturing," "production," and "extraction" include the raising of livestock.

Section 1.48-1(l)(1) of the regulations provides, in part, that the term "livestock" includes cattle, hogs, sheep, goats, and mink and other furbearing animals.

Taxpayer's concrete raceways and water diversion canals are inherently permanent structures that are not tangible personal property. For such structures to qualify as section 38 property, they must, therefore, qualify as other tangible property used as an integral part of "production" or one of the other activities specified by section 48(a)(1)(B)(i) of the Code.

The commercial activity of raising fish in an area where they are artificially fed, protected, cared for, etc., as opposed to the activity of merely catching and harvesting fish, is generally considered to be a farming activity. See, for example, section 1.175-3 of the regulations, which provides that for purposes of section 175 of the Code, the term "farm" is used in its ordinary, accepted sense and includes fish farms. For purposes of the investment tax credit, the term "production" is defined by section 1.48-1(d)(2) to include certain farming activities such as "the cultivation of the soil" and "the raising of livestock." The activities specifically listed in the definition, while indicating the kinds of activities to be treated as production, are illustrative and not all-inclusive. Other activities may be considered production activities if the facts indicate that the business purpose, processing steps, and economics involved are similar to those involved in an activity listed in the definition. In the present case, because the purpose, processing steps, and economics involved in the raising of fish are very similar to those involved in the raising of livestock, taxpayer's business of raising rainbow trout for sale for food is considered to be a production activity within the meaning of section 1.48-1(d)(2).

Rev. Rul. 68-279, 1968-1 C.B. 18, holds that a lobster pound constructed by a taxpayer engaged in the wholesale lobster business is not "section 38 property" for purposes of the investment credit. The activities conducted in the lobster pound, such as retention of lobsters until they are marketable, periodic feeding, and daily testing of water for temperature and oxygen content, are necessary functions of a lobster wholesaler and are not "manufacturing," "production," or "extraction" as defined in section 1.48-1(d)(2) of the regulations.

HOLDING

The commercial raising of fish for food is a production activity within the meaning of section 48(a)(1)(B)(i) of the Code. Therefore, the concrete raceways and the concrete-lined water diversion canals that are designed and constructed to remain permanently in place and that are used as an integral part of the activity of raising fish are other tangible property that qualifies as "section 38 property" for purposes of the investment tax credit.

Section 61.—Gross Income Defined

26 CFR 1.61-1: Gross income.
(Also Sections 162, 3121, 3306, 3401; 1.162-2, 31.3121(a)-1, 31.3306(b)-1, 31.3401(a)-1.)

Reimbursed convention expenses and lost salary; labor union members. Amounts paid by an international labor union to reimburse delegates from local chapters for expenses of traveling away from home to attend the annual convention are not includible in gross income, and no deduction is allowable for the reimbursed expenses under section 162 of the Code, even though reimbursement is received in a later year. Amounts received by the delegates as reimbursement for lost salary are includible in gross income, but are not "wages" under sections 3121, 3306, and 3401. Rev. Rul. 78-209 modified and superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-348

FACTS AND HOLDING

The Internal Revenue Service has reconsidered Rev. Rul. 78-209, 1978-1 C.B. 25, which holds that reimbursements received by elected representatives of union locals from their international union for expenses of traveling away from home incurred in attending the union's annual convention and for lost salary in connection therewith are includible in the delegates' gross incomes under section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code, but are not "wages" subject to withholding under sections 3121(a), 3306(b), and 3401(a).

The question has also been raised as to the application of section 162(a)(2) of the Code, particularly in circumstances where the local union representative incurred the travel expenses in one taxable year and received reimbursement from the international union in the following taxable year.

Ordinarily, travel expenses incurred while away from home in carrying on any trade or business are deductible under section 162(a)(2). However, taxpayers are not allowed deductions under section 162(a) for expenditures for which they have a right or expectation of reimbursement. Burnett v. Commissioner, 356 F.2d 755 (5th Cir. 1966); Canelo v. Commissioner, 53 T.C. 217, 225 (1969), aff'd, 447 F.2d 484 (9th Cir. 1971); Rev. Rul. 79-263, 1979-2 C.B. 82.

Travel expenditures incurred at the close of one taxable period, even though they would otherwise be allowable under section 162(a)(2) of the Code, may not be deducted because of the expectation of reimbursement. Also, the reimbursement that is received in the following taxable period would not be includible in income. See Rev. Rul. 79-263; see also Rev. Rul 79-142, 1979-1 C.B. 58, concerning exclusion from taxpayer's gross income of certain reimbursements.

Accordingly, the reimbursements in question are not includible in gross income, and no deductions are allowable for the reimbursed expenses under section 162 of the Code even if reimbursement does not occur until a later year. Reimbursements for lost salary are, however, includible in gross income in the year received, but are not "wages" for employment tax purposes.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 78-209 is modified to the extent it holds that the reimbursement of expenses of traveling away from home incurred by a union representative is includible in the representative's gross income and, as modified, superseded.

Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses

26 CFR 1.162-2: Traveling expenses.

Whether reimbursed expenses by a union to delegates to its annual convention are deductible when reimbursement occurs in a later year. See Rev. Rul. 80-348, this page.

Section 401.—Qualified Pension, Profit-Sharing, and Stock Bonus Plans

26 CFR 1.401-1: Qualified pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans.

Duplication of benefits; rehired participants. A defined benefit plan that does not contain any provisions to prevent duplication of benefits for rehired participants will not fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Code merely because it provides benefits for some participants that duplicate the benefits already provided for those participants under the same plan; Rev. Rul. 62-139 modified and Rev. Ruls. 56-213, 70-126, and 72-351 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-349

The Service has reconsidered Rev. Ruls. 56-213, 1956-1 C.B. 194; 70-126, 1970-1 C.B. 95; 72-531, 1972-C.B. 221; and 62-139, 1962-2 C.B. 123. All of these revenue rulings deal with whether a pension plan will fail to satisfy the requirements of section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code merely because it provides benefits for some participants that duplicate the benefits already provided for those participants under the same plan or the plan of a prior employer.

Employer M maintains a defined benefit pension plan that provides for a normal retirement benefit equal to 50 percent of final average pay. The plan does not contain any provisions to prevent a duplication of benefits for rehired participants. Thus, it is possible for an individual who had previously been a participant, separated from service, and received payment for his or her entire nonforfeitable interest, to reenter the plan upon being rehired and receive the entire "50 percent of pay" normal retirement benefit without offset for the previous payments.

Rev. Rul. 56-213 dealt with a plan that permitted reinstatement of former participants and concluded that if the terms of the plan were uniformly applied and the full actuarial equivalent of the amount already vested in the participant was deducted from the benefit to be paid on account of the new participation, then the qualification of the plan would not be adversely affected.

Rev. Rul. 70-126 dealt with the issue under consideration and concluded that so long as the provisions did not discriminate within the meaning of section 401(a)(4) of the Code and did not result in a duplication of benefits, the providing of benefits for reinstated participants would not adversely affect the qualification of the plan under section 401(a). Although this ruling dealt with a situation where there was no duplication of benefits, the ruling stated that this characteristic was necessary to support the conclusion.

Rev. Rul. 62-139 dealt with the discrimination issue relative to allowing prior service credit to be used for eligibility and benefit purposes, and concluded, among other things, that prior service credit could not be used if the prior service had resulted in vested pension rights for the employee.

Rev. Rul. 72-531 also dealt with prior service credit and held that a plan that provides credit for service with the employee's immediate prior employer must contain a provision to preclude duplication of benefits if the plan is to be qualified under section 401(a).

There is no provision in the Code or in the Income Tax Regulations which specifically prohibits duplication of benefits. However, section 1.401-1(b)(1)(i) of the regulations defines a pension plan, within the meaning of section 401(a), as a plan established and maintained by an employer to provide definitely determinable benefits to employees after retirement.

Rev. Rul. 74-385, 1974-2 C.B. 130, provides that, in the case of a defined benefit plan, the definitely determinable benefit requirement of section 1.401-1(b)(1)(i) of the regulations is satisfied where the benefits for each participant can be computed in accordance with an express formula contained in the plan that is not subject to the discretion of the employer. The benefit formula contained in the plan described in this ruling satisfies the requirements of Rev. Rul. 74-385.

Accordingly, the pension plan of Employer M will not fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Code merely because it provides benefits for some participants which duplicate the benefits already provided for those participants under the same plan.

This revenue ruling does not deal with whether duplication of benefits under a plan as described will violate the prohibition against discrimination as provided under section 401(a)(4) of the Code, or provide benefits in excess of the limits of section 415 of the Code.

Rev. Ruls. 56-213, 70-126, and 72-351 are revoked; and Rev. Rul. 62-139 is modified only to the extent that it required non-duplication of benefits.

26 CFR 1.401-1: Qualified pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans.

Voluntary employee contributions. An employee benefit plan will not fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Code merely because it permits total voluntary employee contributions equal to 10 percent of the employee's compensation for all years since the employee became a plan participant; Rev. Ruls. 59-185 and 69-217 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-350

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate Rev. Rul. 59-185, 1959-1 C.B. 86, and Rev. Rul. 69-217, 1969-1 C.B. 115, under current law.

The issue in these two revenue rulings is whether an employee benefit plan will fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code merely because it permits total voluntary employee contributions equal to 10 percent of the employee's aggregate compensation for all years since the employee became a participant under the plan.

A corporation established an employee benefit plan that in addition to the benefit derived from employer contributions, provided the additional retirement benefit that can be purchased with the participant's voluntary contributions and the earnings thereon. Voluntary contributions may be made in any year so long as the total of such contributions for all years does not exceed 10 percent of the aggregate compensation received for all years since the employee became a participant under the plan. Employee contributions and earnings thereon are nonforfeitable.

The tax advantages provided under a qualified employee plan were not intended by Congress to be extended to unlimited contributions by employees made primarily to escape tax on the increments thereon. However, where the purpose of a voluntary contribution feature in a plan is to encourage savings by participants, such feature is acceptable provided the contributions are kept within reasonable bounds. In this respect, employee contributions are deemed to be reasonable if they do not exceed 10 percent of the employee's aggregate compensation for all years since becoming a participant. Of course, the additional amounts voluntarily contributed by the employees must be used only for the purpose of providing benefits to the individual contributor in addition to the benefits provided by the employer's contributions.

Accordingly, the employee benefit plan in this case will not fail to qualify, under section 401(a) of the Code, merely because it permits total voluntary employee contributions equal to 10 percent of the employee's aggregate compensation for all years since the employee became a participant thereunder.

This revenue ruling does not provide guidance with respect to whether any voluntary employee contributions will result in a violation of section 415 of the Code.

Rev. Ruls. 59-185 and 69-217 are superseded because the positions stated therein are restated under current law in this revenue ruling.

Section 410.—Minimum Participation Standards

26 CFR 1.410(b)-1: Minimum coverage requirements.

Coverage; participation waived by low-paid employee. A pension plan established by an employer to cover its two employees—a highly compensated officer and a low-paid secretary—does not meet the coverage requirements of section 410 (b) of the Code if the secretary waives the right to participate in the plan; Rev. Rul. 73-340 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-351

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate the position in Rev. Rul. 73-340, 1973-2 C.B. 134, in view of the enactment of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1.

The issue in Rev. Rul. 73-340 is whether a pension plan meets the coverage requirements of section 401(a)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code (now section 410(b)) in a case where one of the two employees of a corporation, a low-paid secretary, waives eligibility under the plan thereby leaving only a highly paid officer as a plan participant.

A corporation established a pension plan which provided benefits for all employees who completed one year of service. At the time the plan was established the corporation had two employees, both of whom were eligible to participate in the plan. One was a highly compensated officer and the other was a low-paid secretary.

On the day after the plan was adopted, the secretary signed a statement waiving all rights to participate in the plan.

Section 410(b) of the Code provides "percentage" and "classification" tests for plan eligibility which a plan must satisfy in order to qualify under section 401(a). Generally, under these tests a plan will satisfy the eligibility requirements if it benefits either: (A) 70 percent or more of all employees, or 80 percent or more of all employees who are eligible to benefit under the plan if 70 percent or more of employees are eligible to benefit under the plan, or (B) such employees as qualify under a classification set up by the employer and found by the Secretary not to be discriminatory in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated.

Although the plan in this case was designed to make all employees of the employer with one year of service eligible to benefit thereunder, the waiver executed by the secretary resulted in participation by only the officer. Under these circumstances, the percentage coverage requirements of section 410(b)(1)(A) of the Code were not satisfied. Furthermore, since the officer-employee was favored as against the corporation's only low-paid employee, the discrimination prohibited by the alternative coverage requirements of section 410(b)(1) was present. This discrimination was not eliminated by the low-paid employee's waiver of the right to receive benefits.

Accordingly, this pension plan does not meet the coverage requirements of section 410(b) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 73-340 is superseded because the position stated therein is restated under current law in this revenue ruling.

Section 441.—Period for Computation of Taxable Income

26 CFR 1.441-1: Period for computation of taxable income.
(Also Section 442; 1.442-1.)

Accounting periods; nonresident alien's first taxable year. A nonresident alien individual engaged in a trade or business in the U.S. may, for the individual's first federal tax return, elect a fiscal year accounting period without obtaining the prior approval of the Commissioner.

Rev. Rul. 80-352

ISSUE

Can a nonresident alien individual, in the individual's first federal income tax return, adopt a fiscal year accounting period for federal income tax purposes without obtaining the prior approval of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue?

FACTS

A, a nonresident alien individual and citizen of country Z, is engaged in a trade or business within the United States. During the first year this trade or business was conducted in the United States A received income effectively connected with the conduct of such trade or business. A had always kept books and records that established a calendar year accounting period for the purpose of filing income tax returns with Country Z. However, from the beginning of A's trade or business within the United States, A kept books and records of A's business operations in the United States that adequately and clearly reflect income on the basis of a fiscal year beginning April 1 and ending March 31. Prior to the commencement of A's trade or business in the United States, A had never been required by any provisions of the internal revenue laws or regulations to file any federal income tax return, statement, or other document with the Internal Revenue Service. A's first federal income tax return was filed on the basis of a fiscal year ending March 31. A did not apply for permission to use a fiscal year accounting period.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 441(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that taxable income shall be computed on the basis of the taxpayer's taxable year.

Section 441(b) of the Code provides that the term "taxable year" means (1) the taxpayer's annual accounting period, if it is a calendar year or a fiscal year, or (2) the calendar year, if section 441(g) applies.

Section 441(c) of the Code provides that the term "annual accounting period" means the annual period on the basis of which the taxpayer regularly computes income in keeping books.

Section 441(g) of the Code provides that, except as provided in Section 443, the taxpayer's taxable year shall be the calendar year if the taxpayer keeps no books, does not have an annual accounting period, or has an annual accounting period, but such period does not qualify as a fiscal year.

Section 442 of the Code provides that if a taxpayer changes the annual accounting period, the new accounting period shall become the taxpayer's taxable year only if the change is approved by the Secretary. For purposes of this subtitle, section 442 further provides, if a taxpayer to whom section 441(g) applies adopts an annual accounting period (as defined in section 441(c)) other than a calendar year, the taxpayer shall be treated as having changed the annual accounting period.

Section 7701(a) 14 of the Code provides that the term "taxpayer" means any person subject to any internal revenue tax.

Section 1.441-1(b)(3) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that a new taxpayer may adopt any taxable year that meets the requirements of section 441 of the Code without obtaining prior approval.

Section 1.441-1(g)(3) of the regulations provides that records that are sufficient to reflect income adequately and clearly on the basis of an annual accounting period will be regarded as keeping books.

Section 1.442-1(a)(1) of the regulations provides that a new taxpayer who adopts an annual accounting period as provided in section 441 of the Code need not secure the permission of the Commissioner under section 442 and this section.

Section 1.442-1(a)(2) of the regulations provides that if section 441(g) of the Code applies to a taxpayer, the adoption of a fiscal year will be treated as a change in the annual accounting period under section 442. Therefore, such fiscal year can become the taxpayer's taxable year only with the approval of the Commissioner.

Prior to the commencement of A's trade or business in the United States, A had never been required by any provision of internal revenue laws or regulations to file a return or any equivalent document with the Service. Therefore, although A was in existence, A was not a United States taxpayer. When A began A's trade or business in the United States, A was required to file a federal income tax return for the first time and was, therefore, a new taxpayer within the meaning of sections 1.441-1(b)(3) and 1.442-1(a)(2) of the regulations. Furthermore, at that time A maintained books and records that adequately and clearly reflected income on the basis of a fiscal year ending March 31 to comply with the requirement of section 1.441-(g)(3).

HOLDING

A, in A's first federal income tax return, may adopt a fiscal year accounting period ending March 31 without the prior approval of the Commissioner.

Trucks used in servicing oil wells. Descriptions are provided of two types of truck chassis used in servicing oil wells that are subject to the tax imposed by section 4061(a)(1) of the Code and two types that are not subject to the tax; Rev. Rul. 66-61 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-353

ISSUE

Are sales of certain truck chassis used in servicing oil wells subject to manufacturers excise tax under section 4061(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The truck chassis have specially designed subframes with oil field machinery mounted thereon. They have heavy duty, high tensile steel frames that have been reinforced by the addition of fishplating and cross members positioned to support the heavier machinery components, standard running gear, and special drive trains. The chassis are used on and off the highway, are capable of traveling at 52 miles per hour, and are of the following types:

(1) Three or four-axled truck chassis on which are mounted engines, pumps, and other equipment to pump various materials, such as chemicals, sand, or sand and chemical mixtures, into oil and gas wells. The modification of the chassis by the addition of the fishplating, cross members, and subframes results in a framework with an asymmetric configuration designed to accommodate the equipment and the chassis. The chassis, as modified, are substantially different structurally from chassis that would ordinarily be used for hauling some other load.

(2) A three-axled truck chassis on which three tanks or compartments are mounted that are designed for and used in transporting cement and water, mixing the cement at the job site, and pumping it into wells.

(3) A three-axled truck chassis on which a diesel engine, a transmission, pumps, a tank, and air, mixing, lubrication, and electrical systems are mounted that are used for mixing cement with fluids and pumping the mixture into wells. This equipment has no storage capacity and therefore cannot be used for transporting cement or fluids. The modification of the chassis by the addition of the fishplating, cross members, and subframes results in a symmetrical grid frame on the chassis. As modified, the chassis is not substantially different structurally from a chassis that would ordinarily be used for hauling some other load.

(4) A three or four-axled truck chassis on which an acid storage tank and a pump with an engine or a power take-off are mounted for use in pumping acid into a well. It does not transport acid but is supplied by a nurse tank. The cooling system is mounted behind the cab on the machinery for use with both the chassis engine and equipment engine. The modification of the chassis by the addition of the fishplating, cross members, and subframes results in an asymmetrical configuration designed to accommodate the equipment. The chassis, as modified, are substantially structurally different from chassis that would ordinarily be used for hauling some other load.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 4061 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes a manufacturers excise tax on certain truck chassis and trucktractors. Section 4063(a)(5) exempts from that tax articles designed (1) to be mounted on truck chassis and (2) to be used to process or prepare concrete.

Sections 48.4061(a)-1(a)(2) and (e)(2)(i) of the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations provide that a truck chassis which is sold as part of a completed vehicle is taxable uder section 4061(a)(1) only if the vehicle is a highway vehicle.

Section 48.4061(a)-1(d)(1) of the regulations defines the term "highway vehicle" as meaning any self-propelled vehicle designed to perform a function of transporting a load over public highways.

Section 48.4061(a)-1(d)(2)(i) of the regulations provides that a vehicle is not a highway vehicle if it (A) consists of a chassis to which there has been permanently mounted machinery or equipment to perform a construction, manufacturing, processing, farming, mining, drilling, timbering, or operation similar to any of the foregoing, if the operation of the machinery or equipment is unrelated to transportation on or off the public highways; (B) the chassis has been specially designed to serve only as a mobile carriage and mount for such machinery or equipment; and (C) by reason of such special design, such chassis could not, without substantial structural modification, be used as a component of a vehicle designed to haul a load other than that particular machinery or equipment.

Section 48.4061(a)-1(a)(3)(ii) of the regulations provides that amounts charged for machinery or equipment installed on a taxable chassis are not part of the taxable sale price of the chassis if (A) the machinery or equipment does not contribute to the highway transportation function of the vehicle and (B) the reasonableness of the charge for the machinery or equipment is supportable by adequate records.

Rev. Rul. 66-61, 1966-1 C.B. 250, held under prior regulations that truck chassis designed to be equipped with high pressure pumping equipment for use at oil well sites for cementing, fracturing, acidizing, etc., are subject to manufacturers excise tax. The chassis resemble conventional truck chassis but have features that distinguish them from such chassis including a reinforced frame with specially located cross members to accommodate the pumping equipment, an oversized diesel truck engine for operating pump equipment, a heavy-duty power transmission or torque converter with a specially designed hydraulic power take-off system, a cooling system that cools engine oil and water and also the hydraulic system of the transmission or converter, and a fireproof exhaust system.

Rev. Rul. 79-423, 1979-2 C.B. 386, states that the focus of the three part test of section 48.4061(a)-1(d)(2)(i) of the regulations is the character of the vehicle chassis and that the test applies to a chassis as modified for use as a component of the completed vehicle. The ruling also concludes that a chassis meets the part C requirement of the regulation if it has been specially designed to hold particular machinery or equipment and if it is substantially structurally different from a chassis that would ordinarily be used for hauling a load other than that particular machinery or equipment or similar machinery or equipment requiring such a specially designed chassis.

The types 1, 3, and 4 chassis have machinery mounted on them to perform a construction, drilling, or similar operation, and the operation of the machinery is unrelated to transportation. Therefore, these chassis satisfy the part A requirement of section 48.4061(a)-1(d)(2)(i) of the regulations. The type 2 chassis, however, does not satisfy this requirement. The machinery mounted on this chassis is used to transport cement and water to the job site, and, therefore, its operation is not unrelated to transportation.

The types 1, 3, and 4 chassis also satisfy the part B requirement of section 48.4061(a)-1(d)(2)(i) of the regulations. Because the structural additions are designed to adapt the chassis to the weight distribution and operating characteristics of the particular machinery, the chassis are specially designed to serve only as a mobile carriage and mount for that machinery.

The types 1 and 4 chassis also satisfy the part C requirement of section 48.4061(a)-1(d)(2)(i) of the regulations. As modified, they are substantially structurally different from a chassis that would ordinarily be used for hauling some other load.

The type 3 chassis does not satisfy the part C requirement. As modified, it is not substantially structurally different from a chassis that would ordinarily be used for hauling some other load.

The subframes mounted on the four types of chassis are part of the chassis. This is because they are mounted on the chassis to help support machinery or equipment on the chassis.

HOLDING

The types 2 and 3 chassis are highway vehicles and their sale by the manufacturer is subject to the manufacturers excise tax imposed by section 4061(a)(1) of the Code. However, the types 1 and 4 chassis are not highway vehicles and their sale by the manufacturer is not subject to the tax. Under the provisions of section 48.4061(a)-1(a)(3)(ii) of the regulations, the machinery and equipment installed on the type 3 chassis are not taxable under section 4061(a)(1) if the reasonableness of the charge allocated to the machinery and equipment is supportable by adequate records. The tanks or compartments on the type 2 chassis are exempt from tax under section 4063(a)(5).

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULING

Rev. Rul. 66-61 is superseded.

Section 4063.—Exemptions

Applicability of exemption under section 4063(a)(5) to tanks or compartments on truck chassis used in servicing oil wells. See Rev. Rul. 80-353, page 9.

Section 4081.—Imposition of Tax [Manufacturers Excise Taxes]

26 CFR 48.4081-2: Gasoline mixed with alcohol.

Gasoline; exemption; sale by parent to gasohol producer subsidiary. A subsidiary that 1) regularly buys gasoline from its parent, 2) mixes the gasoline with alcohol in its transport trucks to produce a 10 percent alcohol mixture, and 3) transports and unloads the mixture into its underground storage tanks at its service stations is a producer of gasohol for resale under section 48.4081-2(b) of the regulations. The sale of gasoline by the parent to the subsidiary qualifies for exemption from tax under section 4081(c) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-354

ISSUE

For purposes of the manufacturers excise tax exemption provided by section 4081(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code, is S a producer under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

P, the parent company of S, is the sole supplier of gasoline to S. S operates a chain of retail service stations. To make gasohol, S purchases gasoline from P and alcohol from an independent alcohol supplier. The alcohol S purchases is not made from petroleum, natural gas, or coal. The gasoline and alcohol are mixed when loaded into S's transport trucks. The mixture is then transported to and unloaded into its underground storage tanks at S's service stations. The mixture contains 10 percent alcohol.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 4081(a) of the Code imposes on gasoline sold by the producer or importer a tax of 4 cents a gallon. Section 4081(c) provides that no tax shall be imposed by section 4081(a) on the sale of gasoline (A) in a mixture with alcohol, if at least 10 percent of the mixture is alcohol, or (B) for use in producing a mixture at least 10 percent of which is alcohol.

Section 48.4081-2(a) of the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations provides that under section 4081(c) of the Code the tax imposed by section 4081 on the sale of gasoline does not apply to the sale of qualifying gasohol or to the sale of gasoline for the purpose of producing gasohol if the requirements of this section are met. Qualifying gasohol is referred to in this section as gasohol. Gasohol is a blend of gasoline and alcohol (whether domestic or imported alcohol) in a mixture at least 10 percent of which is alcohol made from any product other than petroleum, natural gas, or coal.

Section 48.4081-2(b) of the regulations provides that under section 4081(c) of the Code sales of gasoline for the purpose of producing gasohol are not exempt unless the sale is in bulk quantities for delivery into a bulk storage tank of a producer who meets the requirements of this section. For purposes of section 4081(c) the term "producer" means any person who in the ordinary course of its trade or business regularly buys gasoline and alcohol in bulk quantities for blending for use in its trade or business or for resale. Thus, the mere purchase of gasoline for blending into gasohol does not qualify a person as a producer. A person is not a producer for purposes of section 4082 (which defines a producer for purposes of the tax imposed on gasoline by section 4081) merely because such a person is a producer of gasohol for purposes of section 4081(c). Thus, the provisions of section 4083 (relating to certain exempt sales to producers) do not necessarily apply.

S regularly buys gasoline and alcohol in bulk quantities for blending, storage in the bulk tanks at its service stations, and for resale. Although the regulations require only that a mixture of gasoline and alcohol yield a product that is at least 10 percent alcohol and the alcohol may not be from certain sources, neither the Code nor the regulations indicate that a special process is required in the production of gasohol. The mixing of the gasoline and alcohol on the transport trucks constitutes the blending of gasohol.

HOLDING

S meets the requirements of section 48.4081-2(b) of the regulations and is a producer of gasohol for resale. The sale of gasoline by P to S qualifies for the exemption from manufacturers excise tax provided by section 4081(c) of the Code.

26 CFR 1.6013-2: Joint return after filing separate return.

Whether the addition to the tax for underpayment of estimated tax is based on the tax shown on the joint return filed after the due date or on the separate returns filed by the due date. See Rev. Rul. 80-355, below.

Section 6654.—Failure by Individual to Pay Estimated Income Tax

26 CFR 1.6654-1: Addition to the tax in the case of an individual.
(Also Section 6013; 1.6013-2.)

Penalty; estimated tax underpayment; joint return following separate returns. The tax shown on a joint return filed after due date, to replace separate returns filed before the due date, is the basis for computing the addition to tax for underpayment of estimated tax.

Rev. Rul. 80-355

ISSUE

Is the addition to the tax for underpayment of estimated tax based on the tax shown on the separate returns of the taxpayers or the tax shown on a joint return filed after the due date prescribed by law for the filing of the return?

FACTS

The taxpayers filed separate income tax returns for a taxable year by the due date, although they were eligible to file a joint return. Both were assessed the addition to the tax for underpayment of estimated tax since both taxpayers' estimated tax payments throughout the taxable year were less than 80 percent of the tax shown on each separate return. After the due date they filed a joint return, which resulted in less tax shown on the return than the total tax that had been shown on the two individual returns. Their estimated tax payments throughout the taxable year were more than 80 percent of the tax shown on the joint return.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6654(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that in the case of underpayments of estimated tax by an individual there shall be added to the tax an amount determined at an annual rate established under section 6621 upon the amount of the underpayment for the period of the underpayment.

Section 6654(b) of the Code provides that the underpayment shall be the difference between the amount paid on or before the last date prescribed for such payment and the amount that would be required to be paid if the estimated tax were equal to 80 percent of the tax shown on the return for the taxable year.

Section 6013(b) of the Code provides that if an individual has filed a separate return for a taxable year for which a joint return could have been made and the time prescribed by law for filing the return for such taxable year has expired, a joint return may be filed before expiration of the statute of limitations. The joint return shall be the return of the spouses for such taxable year. It also provides that for purposes of assessment and collection, where both spouses have filed separate returns, the joint return is deemed filed on the date the later separate return was filed (but not earlier than the last date prescribed by law for filing the return of either spouse).

The intent in allowing taxpayers to change their elections and file joint returns at any time within the period of the statute of limitations was to enable married taxpayers to minimize their tax liability. See S. Rep. No. 781, 82nd Cong., 1st Sess. 48 (1951), 1951-2 C.B. 458, 492.

Thus, in the case of a joint return following separate returns, any addition to the tax is based upon the joint return. Compare the case of amended returns where for purposes of determining the underpayment of estimated tax under section 6654(b) of the Code, the return for the taxable year is the original return of the taxpayer rather than any amended return filed after the due date and extensions thereof.

HOLDING

The addition to the tax for underpayment of estimated tax is based on the tax shown on the joint return of the taxpayers filed after the due date prescribed by law for the filing of the return when the joint return replaces the previously filed separate returns of the taxpayers.

Section 6655.—Failure by Corporation to Pay Estimated Income Tax

26 CFR 1.6655-2: Exceptions to imposition of the addition to the tax in the case of corporations.
(Also Section 995; 1.995-2.)

Estimated tax; corporation; year-end dividend from DISC. A corporation using the same accounting period and method as its wholly owned DISC may compute estimated tax under section 6655(d)(3)(A)(iv) of the Code without taking into account the constructive dividend deemed to be received from the DISC on the last day of the corporation's taxable year.

Rev. Rul. 80-343

ISSUE

May a corporation compute the estimated tax under section 6655(d)(3)(A)(iv) of the Internal Revenue Code by placing its taxable income on an annualized basis for the appropriate period of months without taking into account any part of a constructive distribution deemed to be received on the last day of its taxable year?

FACTS

X, a corporation, owns all the stock of Y, a Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC). X and Y keep their books and file their tax returns using the accrual method of accounting and a fiscal year ending on October 31. Pursuant to section 995(b)(1) of the Code, X includes in its income an amount deemed received from Y on the last day of its taxable year. Prior to October 31 it is not possible to determine the amount of the deemed distribution.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 995(b)(1) of the Code provides that a shareholder of a DISC shall be treated as having received a distribution taxable as a dividend with respect to its stock in an amount that is equal to its pro rata share of the sum of certain enumerated items, or if smaller, the earnings and profits of the DISC. Section 1.995-1(b)(2) and 1.995-2(a) of the Income Tax Regulations specify that such distribution shall be deemed to be received on the last day of the taxable year of the DISC in which the income was derived.

Section 6655(a) of the Code provides for an addition to the tax in the case of any underpayment of estimated tax by a corporation. Section 6655(d)(3)(A)(iv) provides that such addition shall not be imposed if the total amount of all payments of estimated tax made on or before the last date prescribed for the payment of such installment equals or exceeds the amount that would have been required to be paid on or before such date if the estimated tax were an amount equal to 80 percent of the tax for the taxable year computed by placing on an annualized basis the taxable income for the first 9 months or for the first 11 months of the taxable year in the case of the installment required to be paid in the 12th month of the taxable year.

X is not deemed to have received the distribution from Y until the last day of Y's taxable year, October 31. That is also the last day of X's taxable year and X does not receive income from Y until that date. Under section 6655(d)(3)(A)(iv) of the Code, taxable income for the 12th month is not included in the taxable income to be annualized.

HOLDING

X may compute the estimated tax under section 6655(d)(3)(A)(iv) of the Code without taking into account any part of the section 995(b)(1) distribution from Y.

Part II. Treaties and Tax Legislation

Subpart B.—Legislation and Related Committee Reports

Public Law 96-364
96th Congress, H.R. 3904 [1]
September 26, 1980

An act to amend the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1] and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to improve retirement income security under private multiemployer pension plans by strengthening the funding requirements for those plans, to authorize plan preservation measures for financially troubled multiemployer pension plans, and to revise the manner in which the pension plan termination insurance provisions apply to multiemployer plans, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE

This Act may be cited as the "Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980".

* * * * *

SEC. 3. FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF POLICY

(a) The Congress finds that—

(1) multiemployer pension plans have a substantial impact on interstate commerce and are affected with a national public interest;

(2) multiemployer pension plans have accounted for a substantial portion of the increase in private pension plan coverage over the past three decades;

(3) the continued well-being and security of millions of employees, retirees, and their dependents are directly affected by multiemployer pension plans; and

(4)(A) withdrawals of contributing employers from a multiemployer pension plan frequently result in substantially increased funding obligations for employers who continue to contribute to the plan, adversely affecting the plan, its participants and beneficiaries, and labor-management relations, and

(B) in a declining industry, the incidence of employer withdrawals is higher and the adverse effects described in subparagraph (A) are exacerbated.

(b) The Congress further finds that—

(1) it is desirable to modify the current multiemployer plan termination insurance provisions in order to increase the likelihood of protecting plan participants against benefit losses; and

(2) it is desirable to replace the termination insurance program for multiemployer pension plans with an insolvency-based benefit protection program that will enhance the financial soundness of such plans, place primary emphasis on plan continuation, and contain program costs within reasonable limits.

(c) It is hereby declared to be the policy of this Act—

(1) to foster and facilitate interstate commerce,

(2) to alleviate certain problems which tend to discourage the maintenance and growth of multiemployer pension plans,

(3) to provide reasonable protection for the interests of participants and beneficiaries of financially distressed multiemployer pension plans, and

(4) to provide a financially self-sufficient program for the guarantee of employee benefits under multiemployer plans.

TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO THE INTERNAL REVENUE CODE OF 1954

SEC. 201. AMENDMENT OF THE INTERNAL REVENUE CODE OF 1954

Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this title an amendment is expressed in terms of an amendment to a section or other provision, the reference is to a section or other provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

SEC. 202. MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS IN REORGANIZATION

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Part I of subchapter D of chapter 1 (relating to pension, profit sharing, stock bonus plans, etc.) is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new subpart:

"Subpart C—Special Rules for Multiemployer Plans

"Sec. 418. Reorganization status.

"Sec. 418A. Notice of reorganization and funding requirements.

"Sec. 418B. Minimum contribution requirement.

"Sec. 418D. Adjustments in accrued benefits.

"Sec. 418E. Insolvent plans.

"SEC. 418. REORGANIZATION STATUS

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—A multiemployer plan is in reorganization for a plan year if the plan's reorganization index for that year is greater than zero.

"(b) REORGANIZATION INDEX.—For purposes of this subpart—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A plan's reorganization index for any plan year is the excess of—

"(A) the vested benefits charge for such year, over

"(B) the net charge to the funding standard account for such year.

"(2) NET CHARGE TO FUNDING STANDARD ACCOUNT.—The net charge to the funding standard account for any plan year is the excess (if any) of—

"(A) the charges to the funding standard account for such year under section 412(b)(2), over

"(B) the credits to the funding standard account under section 412(b)(3)(B).

"(3) VESTED BENEFITS CHARGE.—The vested benefits charge for any plan year is the amount which would be necessary to amortize the plan's unfunded vested benefits as of the end of the base plan year in equal annual installments—

[1] This publication of the law and House Report No. 96-869 Part II, page 27, are restricted to excerpts involving tax matters. House Report No. 96-869 Part I, and Conference Report No. 96-1343 are not published.

"(A) over 10 years, to the extent such benefits are attributable to persons in pay status, and

"(B) over 25 years, to the extent such benefits are attributable to other participants.

"(4) DETERMINATION OF VESTED BENEFITS CHARGE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The vested benefits charge for a plan year shall be based on an actuarial valuation of the plan as at the end of the base plan year, adjusted to reflect—

"(i) any—

"(I) decrease of 5 percent or more in the value of plan assets, or increase of 5 percent or more in the number of persons in pay status, during the period beginning on the first day of the plan year following the base plan year and ending on the adjustment date, or

"(II) at the election of the plan sponsor, actuarial valuation of the plan as of the adjustment date or any later date not later than the last day of the plan year for which the determination is being made,

"(ii) any change in benefits under the plan which is not otherwise taken into account under this subparagraph and which is pursuant to any amendment—

"(I) adopted before the end of the plan year for which the determination is being made, and

"(II) effective after the end of the base plan year and on or before the end of the plan year referred to in subclause (I), and

"(iii) any other event (including an event described in subparagraph (B)(i)(I) which, as determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, would substantially increase the plan's vested benefit charge.

"(B) CERTAIN CHANGES IN BENEFIT LEVELS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In determining the vested benefits charge for a plan year following a plan year in which the plan was not in reorganization, any change in benefits which—

"(I) results from the changing of a group of participants from one benefit level to another benefit level under a schedule of plan benefits as a result of changes in a collective bargaining agreement, or

"(II) results from any other change in a collective bargaining agreement, shall not be taken into account except to the extent provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(ii) PLAN IN REORGANIZATION.—Except as otherwise determined by the Secretary, in determining the vested benefits charge for any plan year following any plan year in which the plan was in reorganization, any change in benefits—

"(I) described in clause (i)(I), or

"(II) described in clause (i)(II) as determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, shall, for purposes of subparagraph (A)(ii), be treated as a change in benefits pursuant to an amendment to a plan.

"(5) BASE PLAN YEAR.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The base plan year for any plan year is—

"(i) if there is a relevant collective bargaining agreement, the last plan year ending at least 6 months before the relevant effective date, or

"(ii) if there is no relevant collective bargaining agreement, the last plan year ending at least 12 months before the beginning of the plan year.

"(B) RELEVANT COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AGREEMENT.—A relevant collective bargaining agreement is a collective bargaining agreement—

"(i) which is in effect for at least 6 months during the plan year, and

"(ii) which has not been in effect for more than 36 months as of the end of the plan year.

"(C) RELEVANT EFFECTIVE DATE.—The relevant effective date is the earliest of the effective dates for the relevant collective bargaining agreements.

"(D) ADJUSTMENT DATE. — The adjustment date is the date which is—

"(i) 90 days before the relevant effective date, or

"(ii) if there is no relevant effective date, 90 days before the beginning of the plan year.

"(6) PERSON IN PAY STATUS.—The term 'person in pay status' means—

"(A) a participant or beneficiary on the last day of the base plan year who, at any time during such year, was paid an early, late, normal, or disability retirement benefit (or a death benefit related to a retirement benefit), and

"(B) to the extent provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, any other person who is entitled to such a benefit under the plan.

"(7) OTHER DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—

"(A) UNFUNDED VESTED BENEFITS.—The term 'unfunded vested benefits' means, in connection with a plan, an amount (determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary) equal to—

"(i) the value of vested benefits under the plan, less

"(ii) the value of the assets of the plan.

"(B) VESTED BENEFITS.—The term 'vested benefits' means any nonforfeitable benefit (within the meaning of section 4001(a)(8) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974).

"(C) ALLOCATION OF ASSETS.—In determining the plan's unfunded vested benefits, plan assets shall first be allocated to the vested benefits attributable to persons in pay status.

"(D) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN BENEFIT REDUCTIONS.—The vested benefits charge shall be determined without regard to reductions in accrued benefits under section 418D which are first effective in the plan year.

"(E) WITHDRAWAL LIABILITY.—For purposes of this part, any outstanding claim for withdrawal liability shall not be considered a plan asset, except as otherwise provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(c) PROHIBITION OF NONANNUITY PAYMENTS.—Except as provided in regulations prescribed by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, while a plan is in reorganization a benefit with respect to a participant (other than a death benefit) which is attributable to employer contributions and which has a value of more than $1,750 may not be paid in a form other than an annuity which (by itself or in combination with social security, railroad retirement, or workers' compensation benefits) provides substantially level payments over the life of the participant.

"(d) Terminated Plans. — Any multiemployer plan which terminates under section 4041A(a)(2) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 shall not be considered in reorganization after the last day of the plan year in which the plan is treated as having terminated.

"Sec. 418A. Notice of Reorganization and Funding Requirements

"(a) Notice Requirement.—

"(1) In general.—If—

"(A) a multiemployer plan is in reorganization for a plan year, and

"(B) section 418B would require an increase in contributions for such plan year, the plan sponsor shall notify the persons described in paragraph (2) that the plan is in reorganization and that, if contributions to the plan are not increased, accrued benefits under the plan may be reduced or an excise tax may be imposed (or both such reduction and imposition may occur).

"(2) Persons to whom notice is to be given.—The persons described in this paragraph are—

"(A) each employer who has an obligation to contribute under the plan (within the meaning of section 4212(a) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974), and

"(B) each employee organization which, for purposes of collective bargaining, represents plan participants employed by such an employer.

"(3) Overburden credit not taken into account.—The determination under paragraph (1)(B) shall be made without regard to the overburden credit provided by section 418C.

"(b) Additional Requirements.—The Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation may prescribe additional or alternative requirements for assuring, in the case of a plan with respect to which notice is required by subsection (a)(1), that the person described in subsection (a)(2)—

"(1) receive appropriate notice that the plan is in reorganization,

"(2) are adequately informed of the implications of reorganization status, and

"(3) have reasonable access to information relevant to the plan's reorganization status.

"Sec. 418B. Minimum Contribution Requirement

"(a) Accumulated Funding Deficiency in Reorganization.—

"(1) In general.—For any plan year in which a multiemployer plan is in reorganization—

"(A) the plan shall continue to maintain its funding standard account, and

"(B) the plan's accumulated funding deficiency under section 412(a) for such plan year shall be equal to the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the sum of the minimum contribution requirement for such plan year (taking into account any overburden credit under section 418C(a)) plus the plan's accumulated funding deficiency for the preceding plan year (determined under this section if the plan was in reorganization during such plan year or under section 412(a) if the plan was not in reorganization), over

"(ii) amounts considered contributed by employers to or under the plan for the plan year (increased by any amount waived under subsection (f) for the plan year).

"(2) Treatment of withdrawal liability payments.—For purposes of paragraph (1), withdrawal liability payments (whether or not received) which are due with respect to withdrawals before the end of the base plan year shall be considered amounts contributed by the employer to or under the plan if, as of the adjustment date, it was reasonable for the plan sponsor to anticipate that such payments would be made during the plan year.

"(b) Minimum Contribution Requirement.—

"(1) In general.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, for purposes of this subpart the minimum contribution requirement for a plan year in which a plan is in reorganization is an amount equal to the excess of—

"(A) the sum of—

"(i) the plan's vested benefits charge for the plan year; and

"(ii) the increase in normal cost for the plan year determined under the entry age normal funding method which is attributable to plan amendments adopted while the plan was in reorganization, over

"(B) the amount of the overburden credit (if any) determined under section 418C for the plan year.

"(2) Adjustment for reductions in contribution base units.—If the plan's current contribution base for the plan year is less than the plan's valuation contribution base for the plan year, the minimum contribution requirement for such plan year shall be equal to the product of the amount determined under paragraph (1) (after any adjustment required by this subpart other than this paragraph) multiplied by a fraction—

"(A) the numerator of which is the plan's current contribution base for the plan year, and

"(B) the denominator of which is the plan's valuation contribution base for the plan year.

"(3) Special rule where cash-flow amount exceeds vested benefits charge.—

"(A) In general.—If the vested benefits charge for a plan year of a plan in reorganization is less than the plan's cash-flow amount for the plan year, the plan's minimum contribution requirement for the plan year is the amount determined under paragraph (1) determined before the application of paragraph (2)) after substituting the term 'cash-flow amount' for the term 'vested benefits charge' in paragraph (1)(A).

"(B) Cash-flow amount.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), a plan's cash-flow amount for a plan year is an amount equal to—

"(i) the amount of the benefits payable under the plan for the base plan year, plus the amount of the plan's administrative expenses for the base plan year, reduced by

"(ii) the value of the available plan assets for the base plan year determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, adjusted in a manner consistent with section 418(b)(4).

"(c) Current Contribution Base; Valuation Contribution Base.—

"(1) Current contribution base.—For purposes of this subpart, a plan's current contribution base for a plan year is the number of contribution base units with respect to which contributions are required to be made under the plan for that plan year, determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(2) Valuation contribution base.—

"(A) In general.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), for purposes of this subpart a plan's valuation contribution base is the number of contribution base units for which contributions were received for the base plan year—

"(i) adjusted to reflect declines in the contribution base which have occurred (or could reasonably be anticipated) as of the adjustment date for the plan year referred to in paragraph (1),

"(ii) adjusted upward (in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary) for any contribution base reduction in the base plan year caused by a strike or lockout or by unusual events, such as fire, earthquake, or severe weather conditions, and

"(iii) adjusted (in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary) for reductions in the contribution base resulting from transfers of liabilities.

"(B) Insolvent plans.—For any plan year—

"(i) in which the plan is insolvent (within the meaning of section 418E(b)(1)), and

"(ii) beginning with the first plan year beginning after the expiration of all relevant collective bargaining agreements which were in effect in the plan year in which the plan became insolvent, the plan's valuation contribution base is the greater of the number of contribution base units for which contributions were received for the first or second plan year preceding the first plan year in which the plan is insolvent, adjusted as provided in clause (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (A).

"(3) Contribution base unit.—For purposes of this subpart, the term 'contribution base unit' means a unit with respect to which an employer has an obligation to contribute under a multiemployer plan (as defined in regulations prescribed by the Secretary).

"(d) Limitation on Required Increases in Rate of Employer Contributions.—

"(1) In general.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the minimum contribution requirement applicable to any plan for any plan year which is determined under subsection (b) (without regard to subsection (b)(2)) shall not exceed an amount which is equal to the sum of—

"(A) the greater of—

"(i) the funding standard requirement for such plan year, or

"(ii) 107 percent of—

"(I) if the plan was not in reorganization in the preceding plan year, the funding standard requirement for such preceding plan year, or

"(II) if the plan was in reorganization in the preceding plan year, the sum of the amount determined under this subparagraph for the preceding plan year and the amount (if any) determined under subparagraph (B) for the preceding plan year, plus

"(B) if for the plan year a change in benefits is first required to be considered in computing the charges under section 412(b)(2)(A) or (B), the sum of—

"(i) the increase in normal cost for a plan year determined under the entry age normal funding method due to increases in benefits described in section 418(b)(4)(A)(ii) (determined without regard to section 418(b)(4)(B)(ii)), and

"(ii) the amount necessary to amortize in equal annual installments the increase in the value of vested benefits under the plan due to increases in benefits described in clause (i) over—

"(I) 10 years, to the extent such increase in value is attributable to persons in pay status, or

"(II) 25 years, to the extent such increase in value is attributable to other participants.

"(2) Funding standard requirement.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the funding standard requirement for any plan year is an amount equal to the net charge to the funding standard account for such plan year (as defined in section 418(b)(2)).

"(3) Special rule for certain plans.—

"(A) In general.—In the case of a plan described in section 4216(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, if a plan amendment which increases benefits is adopted after January 1, 1980—

"(i) paragraph (1) shall apply only if the plan is a plan described in subparagraph (B), and

"(ii) the amount under paragraph (1) shall be determined without regard to subparagraph (1)(B).

"(B) Eligible plans.—A plan is described in this subparagraph if—

"(i) the rate of employer contributions under the plan for the first plan year beginning on or after the date on which an amendment increasing benefits is adopted, multiplied by the valuation contribution base for that plan year, equals or exceeds the sum of—

"(I) the amount that would be necessary to amortize fully, in equal annual installments, by July 1, 1986, the unfunded vested benefits attributable to plan provisions in effect on July 1, 1977 (determined as of the last day of the base plan year); and

"(II) the amount that would be necessary to amortize fully, in equal annual installments, over the period described in subparagraph (C), beginning with the first day of the first plan year beginning on or after the date on which the amendment is adopted, the unfunded vested benefits (determined as of the last day of the base plan year) attributable to each plan amendment after July 1, 1977; and "(ii) the rate of employer contributions for each subsequent plan year is not less than the lesser of—

"(I) the rate which when multiplied by the valuation contribution base for that subsequent plan year produces the annual amount that would be necessary to complete the amortization schedule described in clause (i), or

"(II) the rate for the plan year immediately preceding such subsequent plan year, plus 5 percent of such rate.

"(C) Period.—The period determined under this subparagraph is the lesser of—

"(i) 12 years, or

"(ii) a period equal in length to the average of the remaining expected lives of all persons receiving benefits under the plan.

"(4) Exception in case of certain benefit increases.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to a plan, other than a plan described in paragraph (3), for the period of consecutive plan years in each of which the plan is in reorganization, beginning with a plan year in which occurs the earlier of the date of the adoption or the effective date of any amendment of the plan which increases benefits with respect to service performed before the plan year in which the adoption of the amendment occurred.

"(e) Certain Retroactive Plan Amendments.—In determining the minimum contribution requirement with respect to a plan for a plan year under subsection (b), the vested benefits charge may be adjusted to reflect a plan amendment reducing benefits under section 412(c)(8).

"(f) Waiver of Accumulated Funding Deficiency.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary may waive any accumulated funding deficiency under this section in accordance with the provisions of section 412(d)(1).

"(2) Treatment of waiver.—Any waiver under paragraph (1) shall not be treated as a waiver funding deficiency (within the meaning of section 412(d)(3)).

"(g) Actuarial Assumptions Must Be Reasonable.—For purposes of making any determination under this subpart, the requirements of section 412(c)(3) shall apply.

"Sec. 418C. Overburden Credit Against Minimum Contribution Requirement

"(a) General Rule.—For purposes of determining the contribution under section 418B (before the application of section 418B(b)(2) or (d)), the plan sponsor of a plan which is overburdened for the plan year shall apply an overburden credit against the plan's minimum contribution requirement for the plan year (determined without regard to section 418B(b)(2) or (d) and without regard to this section).

"(b) Definition of Overburdened Plan.—A plan is overburdened for a plan year if—

"(1) the average number of pay status participants under the plan in the base plan year exceeds the average of the number of active participants in the base plan year and the 2 plan years preceding the base plan year, and

"(2) the rate of employer contributions under the plan equals or exceeds the greater of—

"(A) such rate for the preceding plan year, or

"(B) such rate for the plan year preceding the first year in which the plan is in reorganization.

"(c) Amount of Overburden Credit.—The amount of the overburden credit for a plan year is the product of—

"(1) one-half of the average guaranteed benefit paid for the base plan year, and

"(2) the overburden factor for the plan year.

The amount of the overburden credit for a plan year shall not exceed the amount of the minimum contribution requirement for such year (determined without regard to this section).

"(d) Overburden Factor.—For purposes of this section, the overburden factor of a plan for the plan year is an amount equal to—

"(1) the average number of pay status participants for the base plan year, reduced by

"(2) the average of the number of active participants for the base plan year and for each of the 2 plan years preceding the base plan year.

"(e) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) Pay status participant.—The term 'pay status participant' means, with respect to a plan, a participant receiving retirement benefits under the plan.

"(2) Number of active participants.—The number of active participants for a plan year shall be the sum of—

"(A) the number of active employees who are participants in the plan and on whose behalf contributions are required to be made during the plan year;

"(B) the number of active employees who are not participants in the plan but who are in an employment unit covered by a collective bargaining agreement which requires the employees' employer to contribute to the plan unless service in such employment unit was never covered under the plan or a predecessor thereof, and

"(C) the total number of active employees attributed to employers who made payments to the plan for the plan year of withdrawal liability pursuant to part 1 of subtitle E of title IV of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, determined by dividing—

"(i) the total amount of such payments, by

"(ii) the amount equal to the total contributions received by the plan during the plan year divided by the average number of active employees who were participants in the plan during the plan year.

The Secretary shall by regulations provide alternative methods of determining active participants where (by reason of irregular employment, contributions on a unit basis, or otherwise) this paragraph does not yield a representative basis for determining the credit.

"(3) Average number.—The term 'average number' means, with respect to pay status participants for a plan year, a number equal to one-half the sum of—

"(A) the number with respect to the plan as of the beginning of the plan year, and

"(B) the number with respect to the plan as of the end of the plan year.

"(4) Average guaranteed benefit.—The average guaranteed benefit paid is 12 times the average monthly pension payment guaranteed under section 4022A(c)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 determined under the provisions of the plan in effect at the beginning of the first plan year in which the plan is in reorganization and without regard to section 4022A(c)(2).

"(5) First year in reorganization.—The first year in which the plan is in reorganization is the first of a period of 1 or more consecutive plan years in which the plan has been in reorganization not taking into account any plan years the plan was in reorganization prior to any period of 3 or more consecutive plan years in which the plan was not in reorganization.

"(f) No Overburden Credit in Case of Certain Reductions in Contributions.—

"(1) In general.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a plan is not eligible for an overburden credit for a plan year if the Secretary finds that the plan's current contribution base for any plan year was reduced, without a corresponding reduction in the plan's unfunded vested benefits attributable to pay status participants, as a result of a change in an agreement providing for employer contributions under the plan.

"(2) Treatment of certain withdrawals.—For purposes of paragraph (1), a complete or partial withdrawal of an employer (within the meaning of part 1 of subtitle E of title IV of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974) does not impair a plan's eligibility for an overburden credit, unless the Secretary finds that a contribution base reduction described in paragraph (1) resulted from a transfer of liabilities to another plan in connection with the withdrawal.

"(g) Mergers.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, if 2 or more multiemployer plans merge, the amount of the overburden credit which may be applied under this section with respect to the plan resulting from the merger for any of the 3 plan years ending after the effective date of the merger shall not exceed the sum of the used overburden credit for each of the merging plans for its last plan year ending before the effective date of the merger. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the used overburden credit is that portion of the credit which does not exceed the excess of the minimum contribution requirement determined without regard to any overburden credit under this section over the employer contributions required under the plan.

"Sec. 418D Adjustments in Accrued Benefits.

"(a) Adjustments in Accrued Benefits.—

"(1) In general.—Notwithstanding section 411, a multiemployer plan in reorganization may be amended, in accordance with this section, to reduce or eliminate accrued benefits attributable to employer contributions which, under section 4022A(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, are not eligible for the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation's guarantee. The preceding sentence shall only apply to accrued benefits under plan amendments (or plans) adopted after March 26, 1980, or under collective bargaining agreement entered into after March 26, 1980.

"(2) Adjustment of vested benefits charge.—In determining the minimum contribution requirement with respect to a plan for a plan year under section 418B(b), the vested benefits charge may be adjusted to reflect a plan amendment reducing benefits under this section or section 412(c)(8), but only if the amendment is adopted and effective no later than 2½ months after the end of the plan year, or within such extended period as the Secretary may prescribe by regulations under section 412(c)(10).

"(b) Limitation on Reduction.—

"(1) In general.—Accrued benefits may not be reduced under this section unless—

"(A) notice has been given, at least 6 months before the first day of the plan year in which the amendment reducing benefits is adopted, to—

"(i) plan participants and beneficiaries,

"(ii) each employer who has an obligation to contribute (within the meaning of section 4212(a) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974) under the plan, and

"(iii) each employee organization which, for purposes of collective bargaining, represents plan participants employed by such an employer, that the plan is in reorganization and that, if contributions under the plan are not increased, accrued benefits under the plan will be reduced or an excise tax will be imposed on employers;

"(B) in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary—

"(i) any category of accrued benefits is not reduced with respect to inactive participants to a greater extent proportionally that such category of accrued benefits is reduced with respect to active participants,

"(ii) benefits attributable to employer contributions other than accrued benefits and the rate of future benefit accruals are reduced at least to an extent equal to the reduction in accrued benefits of inactive participants, and

"(iii) in any case in which the accrued benefit of a participant or beneficiary is reduced by changing the benefit form or the requirements which the participant or beneficiary must satisfy to be entitled to the benefit, such reduction is not applicable to—

"(I) any participant or beneficiary in pay status on the effective date of the amendment, or the beneficiary of such a participant, or

"(II) any participant who has attained normal retirement age, or who is within 5 years of attaining normal retirement age, on the effective date of the amendment, or the beneficiary of any such participant; and

"(C) the rate of employer contributions for the plan year in which the amendment becomes effective and for all succeeding plan years in which the plan is in reorganization equals or exceeds the greater of—

"(i) the rate of employer contributions, calculated without regard to the amendment, for the plan year in which the amendment becomes effective, or "(ii) the rate of employer contributions for the plan year preceding the plan year in which the amendment becomes effective.

"(2) Information required to be included in notice.—The plan sponsors shall include in any notice required to be sent to plan participants and beneficiaries under paragraph (1) information as to the rights and remedies of plan participants and beneficiaries as well as how to contact the Department of Labor for further information and assistance where appropriate.

"(c) No Recoupment.—A plan may not recoup a benefit payment which is in excess of the amount payable under the plan because of an amendment retroactively reducing accrued benefits under this section.

"(d) Benefit Increases Under Multiemployer Plan in Reorganization.—

"(1) Restoration of previously reduced benefits.—

"(A) In general.—A plan which has been amended to reduce accrued benefits under this section may be amended to increase or restore accrued benefits, or the rate of future benefit accruals, only if the plan is amended to restore levels of previously reduced accrued benefits of inactive participants and of participants who are within 5 years of attaining normal retirement age to at least the same extent as any such increase in accrued benefits or in the rate of future benefit accruals.

"(B) Benefit increases and benefit restorations.—For purposes of this subsection, in the case of a plan which has been amended under this section to reduce accrued benefits—

"(i) an increase in a benefit, or in the rate of future benefit accruals, shall be considered a benefit increase to the extent that the benefit, or the accrual rate, is thereby increased above the highest benefit level, or accrual rate, which was in effect under the terms of the plan before the effective date of the amendment reducing accrued benefits, and

"(ii) an increase in a benefit, or in the rate of future benefit accruals, shall be considered a benefit restoration to the extent that the benefit, or the accrual rate, is not thereby increased above the highest benefit level, or accrual rate, which was in effect under the terms of the plan immediately before the effective date of the amendment reducing accrued benefits.

"(2) Uniformity in benefit restoration.—If a plan is amended to partially restore previously reduced accrued benefit levels, or the rate of future benefit accruals, the benefits of inactive participants shall be restored in at least the same proportions as other accrued benefits which are restored.

"(3) No benefit increases in year of benefit reduction.—No benefit increase under a plan may take effect in a plan year in which an amendment reducing accrued benefits under the plan, in accordance with this section, is adopted or first becomes effective.

"(4) Retroactive payments.—A plan is not required to make retroactive benefit payments with respect to that portion of an accrued benefit which was reduced and subsequently restored under this section.

"(e) Inactive Participant.—For purposes of this section, the term 'inactive participant' means a person not in covered service under the plan who is in pay status under the plan or who has a nonforfeitable benefit under the plan.

"(f) Regulations.—The Secretary may prescribe rules under which, notwithstanding any other provision of this section, accrued benefit reductions or benefit increases for different participant groups may be varied equitably to reflect variations in contribution rates and other relevant factors reflecting differences in negotiated levels of financial support for plan benefit obligations.

"Sec. 418E. Insolvent Plans.

"(a) Suspension of Certain Benefit Payments. — Notwithstanding section 411, in any case in which benefit payments under an insolvent multiemployer plan exceed the resource benefit level, any such payments of benefits which are not basic benefits shall be suspended, in accordance with this section, to the extent necessary to reduce the sum of such payments and the payments of such basic benefits to the greater of the resource benefit level or the level of basic benefits, unless an alternative procedure is prescribed by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation under section 4022A(g)(5) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

"(b) Definitions.—For purposes of this section, for a plan year—

"(1) Insolvency. — A multiemployer plan is insolvent if the plan's available resources are not sufficient to pay benefits under the plan when due for the plan year, or if the plan is determined to be insolvent under subsection (d).

"(2) Resource benefit level.—The term 'resource benefit level' means the level of monthly benefits determined under subsections (c)(1) and (3) and (d)(3) to be the highest level which can be paid out of the plan's available resources.

"(3) Available resources.—The term 'available resources' means the plan's cash, marketable assets, contributions, withdrawal liability payments, and earnings, less reasonable administrative expenses and amounts owed for such plan year to the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation under section 4261(b)(2) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

"(4) Insolvency year.—The term 'insolvency year' means a plan year in which a plan is insolvent.

"(c) Benefit Payments Under Insolvent Plans.—

"(1) Determination of resource benefit level.—The plan sponsor of a plan in reorganization shall determine in writing the plan's resource benefit level for each insolvency year, based on the plan sponsor's reasonable projection of the plan's available resources and the benefits payable under the plan.

"(2) Uniformity of the benefit suspension.—The suspension of benefit payments under this section shall, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, apply in substantially uniform proportions to the benefits of all persons in pay status (within the meaning of section 418(b)(6)) under the plan, except that the Secretary may prescribe rules under which benefit suspensions for different participant groups may be varied equitably to reflect variations in contribution rates and other relevant factors including differences in negotiated levels of financial support for plan benefit obligations.

"(3) RESOURCE BENEFIT LEVEL BELOW LEVEL OF BASIC BENEFITS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (2), if a plan sponsor determines in writing a resource benefit level for a plan year which is below the level of basic benefits, the payment of all benefits other than basic benefits shall be suspended for that plan year.

"(4) EXCESS RESOURCES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If, by the end of an insolvency year, the plan sponsor determines in writing that the plan's available resources in that insolvency year could have supported benefit payments above the resource benefit level for that insolvency year, the plan sponsor shall distribute the excess resources to the participants and beneficiaries who received benefit payments from the plan in that insolvency year, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(B) EXCESS RESOURCES.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'excess resources' means available resources above the amount necessary to support the resource benefit level, but no greater than the amount necessary to pay benefits for the plan year at the benefit levels under the plan.

"(5) UNPAID BENEFITS.—If, by the end of an insolvency year, any benefit has not been paid at the resource benefit level, amounts up to the resource level which were unpaid shall be distributed to the participants and beneficiaries, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, to the extent possible taking into account the plan's total available resources in that insolvency year.

"(6) RETROACTIVE PAYMENTS.—Except as provided in paragraph (4) or (5), a plan is not required to make retroactive benefit payments with respect to that portion of a benefit which was suspended under this section.

"(d) PLAN SPONSOR DETERMINATION.—

"(1) TRIENNIAL TEST.—As of the end of the first plan year in which a plan is in reorganization, and at least every 3 plan years thereafter (unless the plan is no longer in reorganization), the plan sponsor shall compare the value of plan assets (determined in accordance with section 418B(b)(3)(B)(ii)) for that plan year with the total amount of benefit payments made under the plan for that plan year. Unless the plan sponsor determines that the value of plan assets exceeds 3 times the total amount of benefit payments, the plan sponsor shall determine whether the plan will be insolvent in any of the next 3 plan years.

"(2) DETERMINATION OF INSOLVENCY.—If, at any time, the plan sponsor of a plan in reorganization reasonably determines, taking into account the plan's recent and anticipated financial experience, that the plan's available resources are not sufficient to pay benefits under the plan when due for the next plan year, the plan sponsor shall make such determination available to interested parties.

"(3) DETERMINATION OF RESOURCE BENEFIT LEVEL.—The plan sponsor of a plan in reorganization shall determine in writing for each insolvency year the resource benefit level and the level of basic benefits no later than 3 months before the insolvency year.

"(e) NOTICE REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IMPENDING INSOLVENCY.—If the plan sponsor of a plan in reorganization determines under subsection (d)(1) or (2) that the plan may become insolvent (within the meaning of subsection (b)(1)), the plan sponsor shall—

"(A) notify the Secretary, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, the parties described in section 418A(a)(2), and the plan participants and beneficiaries of that determination, and

"(B) inform the parties described in section 418A(a)(2) and the plan participants and beneficiaries that if insolvency occurs certain benefit payments will be suspended, but that basic benefits will continue to be paid.

"(2) RESOURCE BENEFIT LEVEL.—No later than 2 months before the first day of each insolvency year, the plan sponsor of a plan in reorganization shall notify the Secretary, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, the parties described in section 418A(a)(2), and the plan participants and beneficiaries of the resource benefit level determined in writing for that insolvency year.

"(4) POTENTIAL NEED FOR FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—In any case in which the plan sponsor anticipates that the resource benefit level for an insolvency year may not exceed the level of basic benefits, the plan sponsor shall notify the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation.

"(4) REGULATIONS. — Notice required by this subsection shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, except that notice to the Secretary shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(5) CORPORATION MAY PRESCRIBE TIME.—The Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation may prescribe a time other than the time prescribed by this section for the making of a determination or the filing of a notice under this section.

"(f) FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—

"(1) PERMISSIVE APPLICATION.—If the plan sponsor of an insolvent plan for which the resource benefit level is above the level of basic benefits anticipates that, for any month in an insolvency year, the plan will not have funds sufficient to pay basic benefits, the plan sponsor may apply for financial assistance from the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation under section 4261 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

"(2) MANDATORY APPLICATION.—A plan sponsor who has determined a resource benefit level for an insolvency year which is below the level of basic benefits shall apply for financial assistance from the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation under section 4261 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

"(g) FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—Any amount of any financial assistance from the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation to any plan, and any repayment of such amount, shall be taken into account under this subpart in such manner as determined by the Secretary.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of subparts for part I of subchapter D of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subpart:

"Subpart C. Special rules for multiemployer plans.".

"(A) any amount described in paragraph (2)(B)(ii), (2)(B)(iii), or (3)(B)(i) of this subsection which arose in a plan year beginning before such date shall be amortized in equal annual installments (until fully amortized) over 40 plan years, beginning with the plan year in which the amount arose;

"(i) shall be eliminated by an offsetting credit or charge (as the case may be), but

"(ii) shall be taken into account in subsequent plan years by being amortized in equal annual installments (until fully amortized) over 30 plan years.

"(D) Interim withdrawal liability payments.—Any amount paid by an employer pending a final determination of the employer's withdrawal liability under part 1 of subtitle E of title IV of such Act and subsequently refunded to the employer by the plan shall be charged to the funding standard account in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(E) For purposes of the full funding limitation under subsection (c)(7), unless otherwise provided by the plan, the accrued liability under a multiemployer plan shall not include benefits which are not nonforfeitable under the plan after the termination of the plan (taking into consideration section 411(d)(3))."; and

"(2) Controlled group deductions.—In the case of a payment described in paragraph (1) made by an entity which is liable because it is a member of a commonly controlled group of corporations, trades, or businesses, within the meaning of subsection (b) or (c) of section 414, the fact that the entity did not directly employ participants of the plan with respect to which the liability payment was made shall not affect the deductibility of a payment which otherwise satisfies the conditions of section 162 (relating to trade or business expenses) or section 212 (relating to expenses for the production of income).

"(3) Coordination with subsection (a).—Any payment described in paragraph (1) shall (subject to the last sentence of subsection (a)(1)(A)) be deductible under this section when paid.".

Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980

April 23, 1980

Mr. Ullman, from the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted the following report together with supplemental and minority views to accompany H.R. 3904 which on May 3, 1979, was referred jointly to the Committee on Education and Labor and the Committee on Ways and Means.[1]

[Including cost estimate of the Congressional Budget Office]

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 3904) to amend the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1] and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended, for the purpose of improving retirement income security under private multiemployer pension plans by strengthening the funding requirements for those plans, authorizing plan preservation measures for financially troubled multiemployer pension plans, and revising the manner in which the pension plan termination insurance provisions apply to multiemployer plans, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with amendments and recommend that the bill as amended do pass.

The amendment to the text of the bill is a complete substitute therefor and appears in boldface roman type in the reported bill.

The title of the bill is amended to reflect the amendment to the text of the bill.

[2] I. OVERVIEW

Background

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) established a program of insurance for employee benefits under most tax-qualified, private, domestic, defined benefit pension plans.[1] The program is administered by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC), a corporation within the Department of Labor. The Board of Directors of the PBGC consists of the Secretary of Labor (Chairman), the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of Commerce.

The PBGC maintains a trust fund and a revolving fund for insurance of benefits under terminated multiemployer defined benefit pension plans (multiemployer plans), as well as a trust fund and a revolving fund for insurance of benefits under all other terminated defined benefit pension plans (referred to as "single-employer plans"). The PBGC presently is not "on budget" and the United States is not liable for debts of the PBGC.

The insurance program (referred to as "termination insurance") is funded by (1) premiums paid by plans, (2) assets of plans that have terminated with insufficient funds to provide insured benefits, (3) payments by employers who maintained plans which terminated with insufficient funds to provide insured benefits, and (4) earnings on investments. The funds maintained for multiemployer plans are the sole source of guaranteed benefits under terminated multiemployer plans. Similarly, the funds maintained for single-employer plans are the sole source of guaranteed benefits under single-employer plans.

Under present law, the guarantee by the PBGC of benefits under a multiemployer plan is within the discretion of the PBGC until April 30, 1980. Beginning on May 1, 1980, the guarantee of these benefits becomes mandatory.

Consideration by Education and Labor Committee

The bill (H.R. 3904), as approved by the House Committee on Education and Labor, provides a new definition for the term "multiemployer plan," imposes liability for unfunded benefits upon employers who withdraw from a multiemployer plan and allows a deduction for payments of the liability, permits multiemployer plans in financial distress to reduce certain benefits for workers, retirees and beneficiaries, imposes funding requirements for multiemployer plans, provides new rules for mergers and transfers of assets or liabilities involving multiemployer plans, authorizes the PBGC to provide financial assistance [3] to insolvent multiemployer plans, and provides new enforcement powers for the PBGC and others. In addition, the bill increases premiums payable to the PBGC by multiemployer plans, makes insurance of basic benefits under multiemployer plans by the PBGC mandatory, but modifies the level of plan benefits guaranteed by the PBGC, modifies the rules relating to employer liability to the PBGC and the plan in the event of the insolvency or termination of a multiemployer plan, and changes the insurable event to plan insolvency. The amendments made by the bill are generally effective upon enactment.

[1] See ERISA sec. 4021. A defined benefit pension plan provides a specified level of benefits for participants (e.g., the Federal Civil Service Retirement plan). A church pension plan is generally exempt from the insurance program unless the plan has elected to be subject to ERISA standards. Also, plans of certain professional service employers are excluded from the program.

Ways and Means Committee Amendment

The Ways and Means Committee considered H.R. 3904 as approved by the Education and Labor Committee. The Ways and Means Committee further amended the bill, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the bill as amended by the Education and Labor Committee.

The Ways and Means Committee amendment provides additional safeguards for employee benefits and provides additional protection for employers against escalating increases in the cost of maintaining a multiemployer plan. The Committee amendment also provides rules (1) to ease the computation and collection of liability with respect to a withdrawing employer, and (2) to provide relief from the retroactive application of withdrawal liability in limited circumstances. Additionally, the Committee amendment provides for Congressional review of premiums for certain new guarantees provided by the bill and clarifies the effect of the bill with respect to premiums for single-employer plans. Further, the Committee amendment includes the receipts and disbursements of the PBGC in the budget of the United States (i.e., places the PBGC "on budget"). The amendment also makes numerous technical changes in the bill.

[10] III. GENERAL REASONS FOR THE BILL

During the period following the enactment of ERISA, the PBGC has learned that a significant number of multiemployer plans which would automatically be covered by termination insurance on May 1, 1980, are experiencing financial difficulty.

The termination insurance program was established by ERISA because of concern that the Act could not otherwise secure employee pension benefits against loss due to premature plan termination. The program was designed, in part, on the basis of an Administration study[1] which considered the effects of the termination of single-employer and multiemployer pension plans during a period preceding the enactment of ERISA. Because of substantial uncertainty as to the need for the insurance in the case of multiemployer plans and the effects of insuring such plans, the insurance of benefits under multiemployer plans was generally left to the discretion of the PBGC until January 1, 1978. The date for nondiscretionary insurance of benefits under multiemployer plans was subsequently delayed until May 1, 1980, because of concerns that the program, if nondiscretionary, might encourage the premature termination of multiemployer plans.

Under ERISA, an employer who has paid all required contributions to a multiemployer plan can withdraw from the plan and, if the plan does not terminate within 5 years after the withdrawal, the employer will have no further responsibility for any part of the unfunded liabilities of the plan. Where this occurs, employers who continue to maintain the plan "inherit" the liability which would have been satisfied by the withdrawing employer. The committee believes that, in this regard, present law provides an undesirable incentive for employers to withdraw from plans and an unfair burden on the employers who continue to maintain the plans.

Before ERISA, multiemployer plans in financial distress sometimes delayed funding, reduced benefits, or imposed further restrictions on eligibility for benefits. The ERISA standards designed to require systematic plan funding, and to protect employee benefits, have accordingly reduced the ability of multiemployer plans to deal with financial distress. The PBGC has indicated that the combined effect of the availability of guaranteed benefits, limited employer liability on termination, and ERISA restrictions on the ability of a plan to reduce its liabilities has made termination attractive for multiemployer plans covering workers in declining industries. According to the PBGC, in a significant number of cases, plan termination will be less expensive for employers maintaining a particular multiemployer plan than continuation of the plan. H.R. 3904 deals with these problems of multiemployer [11] plans by (1) increasing the funding requirements for multiemployer plans in most cases, (2) requiring further, accelerated funding of plans in financial distress, subject to restrictions designed to avoid undue financial strain on employers maintaining seriously overburdened plans, (3) relaxing the vesting rules of ERISA to permit benefit reductions in limited circumstances, (4) modifying the level of benefits guaranteed so that in most cases, contiuation of a plan will be more beneficial to employees than plan termination, (5) requiring continued funding of terminated plans, and (6) making plan insolvency the only insurable event. The bill also provides for increased termination insurance premiums, additional reporting requirements, and enforcement authority.

[12] IV. EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

A. Findings and Declaration of Policy (Sec. 3 of the Bill)

[1] Department of the Treasury and Department of Labor, Study of Pension Plan Terminations, 1972—Interim Report, February 1973.

The statement of policy included in ERISA does not specifically provide that ERISA is for the purpose of encouraging the growth and maintenance of multiemployer plans.

The policy of the bill, as declared therein, is to make specified changes in the pension rules applicable to multiemployer plans (1) to protect the interests of participants and beneficiaries in financially distressed multiemployer plans, and (2) to encourage the growth and maintenance of multiemployer plans.

B. Definition of Multiemployer Plan (Secs. 108(d), 207, and 302 of the Bill and Sec. 414(f) of the Code, and Secs. 3(37) and 4403 of ERISA)

Present law

Under present law, a plan is a multiemployer plan for a year if (1) more than one employer is required to contribute to the plan, (2) the plan is maintained pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement between employee representatives and more than one employer, (3) the amount of contributions made under the plan for the year by each employer is less than 50 percent of the aggregate employer contributions for that year (unless a special rule is satisfied), (4) benefits under the plan are payable to each participant without regard to the cessation of contributions by the employer of the participant except to the extent the benefits accrued because of service with the employer before the employer was required to contribute to the plan, and (5) the plan satisfies other requirements imposed by Labor Department regulations.[1]

All corporations, which are members of a controlled group of corporations, are treated as a single employer in determining the status of a plan as a multiemployer plan for purposes of the tax law.

Reasons for change

The Ways and Means Committee believes that the definition of a multiemployer plan under ERISA which is limited to a plan in which (1) no employer contributes more than 50 percent of the total employer contributions for the year and (2) employers share liability for participants' benefits accrued for service while the employer maintained the plan creates two major problems. First, not all plans that share the basic characteristics of multiemployer plans (i.e., plans to which more than one employer is required to contribute and which are maintained pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement) are considered multiemployer plans under the definition pres-[13]ently in ERISA. Second, a plan could move in and out of multiemployer plan status from year to year. The Committee has determined to remove the limitations from the definition of multiemployer plan so that generally plans which share the basic characteristics of multiemployer plans are treated consistently under the law.

Explanation of provisions

Under the bill, the test relating to proportionate employer contributions (the 50-percent test) is deleted, and the test relating to continuity of benefits in the event of a cessation of employer contributions is preserved in the minimum vesting standard of ERISA. The bill provides that all trades and businesses (whether or not incorporated) under common control are considered a single employer for purposes of testing the status of a plan as a multiemployer plan. In addition, the bill provides that a plan continues to be a multiemployer plan after its termination if it was a multiemployer plan for the plan year ending before its termination date.

A plan which is a single-employer plan under present law (even though more than one employer maintains the plan) and which has paid PBGC premiums for the three plan years preceding the date of enactment as a single-employer plan is permitted to irrevocably elect to be considered a single-employer plan where the plan would otherwise be a multiemployer plan under the bill.

Effective date

The provision will apply upon enactment, except that the present law definition will continue for plan years beginning before enactment.

[14] C. Employer Withdrawal Liability, Mergers, Etc. (Secs. 104 and 108 of the Bill, Secs. 411, 412, 418-418F and 4917 of the Code, and Secs. 4201-4206, 4221-4224, 4241-4246, 4261, 4281, 4301 and 4303 of ERISA)

Present law

Employer liability

Under present law, if an employer maintained or contributed to a multiemployer plan (or a single-employer plan to which more than one employer contributes) during the 5-year period preceding the termination of the plan, and if the plan terminates with insufficient assets to provide benefits at the level guaranteed by the PBGC, the employer is liable to the PBGC for a share of the insufficiency. The insufficiency is generally allocated to employers on the basis of each employer's proportionate share of the total contributions required under the plan during the 5-year period. The liability of any particular employer, however, is limited to 30 percent of that employer's net worth (before taking the liability to the PBGC into account.[1] In addition, if a "substantial employer" withdraws from a plan to which more than one employer contributes, the employer is required to pay to the PBGC (or to post a bond for payment of) an amount equal to the employer's share of the insufficiency which would arise if the plan were to terminate. The payment is returned to the employer (or the bond is cancelled) if the plan does not terminate within 5 years after the withdrawal. Under present law, an employer is a substantial employer for a plan year if the employer's contributions during (1) each of the two preceding plan years, or (2) both the second and third preceding plan years were at least equal to 10 percent of the total contributions paid to the plan for each of such years.[2]

In the case of a single-employer plan to which only one employer contributes, liability for an insufficiency is allocated in full to that employer, subject to the "30 percent of net worth" limit. The substantial employer rules do not apply in such a case.[3]

Mergers, transfers, etc.

Under the Code and under the nontax provisions of ERISA, a plan is not permitted to merge or consolidate with, or transfer its assets or liabilities to, another plan unless certain conditions are met. The applicable conditions require that the benefits which each participant in the plan would receive if the plan were to terminate immediately after the merger, etc., will not be less than the benefits the participant would receive under the merged plan if that plan terminated immediately before the merger, etc.

[15] In the case of a single-employer plan to which only one employer contributes, liability for an insufficiency is allocated in full to that employer, subject to the "30 percent of net worth" limit. The substantial employer rules do not apply in such a case.

Reasons for change

The Ways and Means Committee believes that the current rules governing an employer's liability upon withdrawal from a multiemployer plan fail to adequately protect plan participants, the employers who remain in the plan and the PBGC premium payers. The present-law rules have the effect of increasing the liabilities of employers who remain with a plan until it terminates and rewarding those employers who leave the plan early. When an employer withdraws from a multiemployer plan, the remaining employers must assume the burden for funding benefit liabilities left by the withdrawing employer. In addition, a withdrawal may reduce the plan's contribution base and necessitate an increase in the rate of contributions to the plan.

The Committee finds it necessary to adopt statutory withdrawal rules to protect a multiemployer plan from the adverse financial impact of employer withdrawal. The Committee believes that a rule which requires an employer who withdraws from a multiemployer plan to continue funding a share of the plan's unfunded benefit obligations removes the present incentive for employer withdrawals and provides protection to remaining employers where withdrawals nevertheless occur. The Committee, however, intends that these rules not deter new employers from entering a multiemployer plan.

The Committee believes that, because in the construction industry and in certain segments of the entertainment industry, the withdrawal of an employer from a plan may not eliminate jobs from a plan's contribution base unless the employer continues working in the area, liability for employers in these industries should be narrowly limited.

Under present law, the PBGC is authorized to determine the extent to which the statutory rules governing mergers and transfers of assets and liabilities apply to multiemployer plans. The Committee believes that these statutory rules are not readily adaptable to multiemployer plans. Accordingly, appropriate rules are needed to protect participants in multiemployer plans when a merger or transfer of assets occurs. In addition, the rules should prevent transfers that would create unnecessary liability for the PBGC. The Committee believes that the rules contained in the bill protect plan participants and PBGC premium payers.

The Committee understands that the purpose of plan reorganization is to require a plan facing financial difficulties to take corrective action to stabilize or improve its financial condition. Generally, reorganization would (1) prevent plans in financial distress from funding new past service liabilities over unreasonably long periods of time, and (2) require plans with severe financial difficulties to raise contributions.

However, with respect to plans in declining industries, the contribution requirements could result in inappropriately high and escalating pension costs. The Committee therefore believes that the funding standard for plans in reorganization should be adjusted in certain circumstances for overburdened plans. To encourage the continuation [16] of plans, the Committee believes that PBGC funds should be available to make up the difference between the guaranteed level of benefits and the level supportable by the plan. The Committee believes that through the mechanism of reorganization, PBGC involvement and assistance will be deferred until absolutely necessary, which will result in significant premium savings. In addition, administrative responsibility would largely remain with the plan, thereby simplifying administration of the guarantee program.

Explanation of provisions

1. Employer withdrawal liability

Under the bill, an employer who withdraws from a multiemployer plan generally is liable to the plan for the portion of the plan's unfunded benefit obligations (if any) assigned to the employer. The bill provides four alternative methods, any of which a plan could uniformly use to determine this liability. In addition, a plan could devise its own method of computation subject to the approval of the PBGC.

a. Definition of withdrawal

(1) Complete withdrawal

The bill treats an employer as withdrawing from a multiemployer plan when the employer (1) permanently ceases to have an obligation to contribute under the plan, or (2) permanently ceases all covered operations under the plan. A withdrawal does not occur, however, where an employer ceases to exist merely by reason of a change in form or structure, as long as the employer is replaced by a successor employer and there is no interruption in the successor employer's contributions to the plan or obligation to contribute under the plan. For example, if P Corporation owns 100 percent of the stock of S Corporation, a subsidiary that has an obligation to contribute to a multiemployer plan on behalf of its employees, the controlled group consisting of P and S would be considered an employer with an obligation to contribute to the plan. If P sells all of its interest in S to an unrelated party, the controlled group consisting of P and S would cease to exist. However, if S continues to have an obligation to contribute to the plan, no withdrawal would be considered to have taken place merely because of the change in ownership of S.

In addition, a withdrawal does not take place merely because an employer suspends making plan contributions during a labor dispute which involves its employees.

Generally if a withdrawal occurs, the date of the withdrawal is considered to be the last day of the plan year in which the employer permanently ceased to have an obligation to contribute under the plan (other than for delinquent contributions or withdrawal liability) or permanently ceased all covered operations under the plan. Under certain circumstances the date of the withdrawal of an employer who has an obligation to contribute under a plan for work performed in the building and construction industry or in certain segments of the entertainment industry is the date on which the employer's obligation to contribute under the plan ceases.

[17] With respect to an employer who has completely withdrawn from a multiemployer plan and who subsequently resumes covered operations under the plan or renews an obligation to contribute to the plan, the PBGC is to prescribe regulations regarding the reduction or waiver of the employer's withdrawal liability to the extent consistent with the policy of protecting remaining employers, beneficiaries, and other participants. In addition, the PBGC is to prescribe regulations or a procedure under which a plan can provide rules for the reduction or waiver of withdrawal liability with respect to such an employer in appropriate circumstances.

(2) Partial withdrawal

Under the bill, an employer becomes subject to withdrawal liability in some cases in the event of a partial withdrawal, that is, where the employer neither completely ceases to have an obligation to contribute under the plan nor permanently ceases all covered operations under the plan. Under the bill, a partial withdrawal arises because of the occurrence of any of several specified events which could significantly decrease the employer's obligations for contributions under the plan. Under the bill, a partial withdrawal occurs—

(1) if the number of contribution base units (e.g., hours worked) with respect to which the employer is required to contribute for each of three consecutive plan years does not exceed 40 percent of the number of contribution base units with respect to which the employer was obligated to contribute under the plan for any one of the five plan years preceding the three-year period (a 60-percent decline in contribution base units);

(2) if, because the employer ceased substantially all of its covered operations at one or more facilities, the number of contribution base units with respect to which the employer is required to contribute under the plan for the plan year does not exceed 75 percent of the number of contribution base units with respect to which the employer was required to contribute under the plan for any one of the preceding five plan years; or

(3) if any employer who is required to contribute to a plan under two or more collective bargaining agreements ceases to have an obligation to contribute under at least one but not all of the agreements.

The liability which an employer incurs in the case of a partial withdrawal is to be a pro rata portion of the liability which the employer would incur in the event of a complete withdrawal on the same date. In addition, the bill provides that there is to be no obligation for withdrawal liability in the case of a partial withdrawal of an employer who made less than two percent of the average annual contributions to the plan in the five-year period immediately preceding the withdrawal, except where the plan specifically provides for liability in such a case.

Whenever an event giving rise to a partial withdrawal occurs, the date of the partial withdrawal is generally the last day of the plan year in which the event takes place. However, if a partial withdrawal takes place under the 3-year/40-percent rule described above, for purposes of calculating the amount of an employer's liability, the first plan [18] year of the 3-year period is considered the year in which the employer partially withdrew.

The bill provides that a plan may be amended to eliminate partial withdrawal liability, in whole or in part, to the extent permitted by PBGC regulations. Also, PBGC regulations may prescribe a procedure by which a plan may, by amendment, adopt rules providing for alternative events which will trigger partial withdrawal liability.

For purposes of the partial withdrawal rules, unless a plan provides another definition of "facility", the term means an economic unit, generally at a single physical location, where business is conducted or industrial operations are performed.

The bill provides for abatement of all or part of an employer's partial withdrawal liability in the event of (1) a two-year 90 percent restoration of contributions, (2) a one-year complete restoration of contributions, (3) a two-year reversal of the reduction of contributions which triggered the liability, or (4) a ten percent contribution increase. In addition, the PBGC is authorized to prescribe regulations providing for the reduction or elimination of partial withdrawal liability under conditions where the PBGC determines that such an abatement is consistent with the policy of protecting remaining employers. Also, under a PGBC regulatory procedure, a plan may adopt rules for abatement of partial withdrawal liability under any other conditions, subject to PBGC approval to be based on a determination that the rules are consistent with the policy of protecting remaining employers.

A two-year 90 percent restoration of contributions occurs where, for any two consecutive plan years after the partial withdrawal, the number of contribution base units applied to determine the employer's required plan contributions is at least 90 percent of the number of contribution base units to determine the employer's required contributions for any one of the five plan years (1) immediately preceding the three consecutive plan years used to test for a partial withdrawal in the case of a partial withdrawal caused by a 60 percent decline in contribution base units, or (2) immediately preceding the year of the partial withdrawal in the case of a partial withdrawal caused by a facility closing or the cessation of contribution obligations under a collective bargaining agreement (the five-year base period). An abatement under this rule completely eliminates the employer's partial withdrawal liability for plan years following the two consecutive plan years in which the 90-percent restoration of contributions takes place.

A one-year complete restoration of contributions occurs where the number of contribution base units used to determine the employer's required contributions for a plan year equals or exceeds the number of such units for the year in the five-year base period for which such units were the highest. Where such a restoration takes place, the employer may, in lieu of continuing to pay partial withdrawal liability, post a bond to the plan for an amount determined by the plan sponsor not exceeding 50 percent of the otherwise required annual partial withdrawal liability payment. If the plan sponsor determines that the employer has no further partial withdrawal liability, the liability is completely eliminated and the bond is cancelled. If the plan sponsor determines that the employer continues to have partial withdrawal liability, [19] (1) the plan may realize on the bond, (2) the employer remains liable for the amount of the year's liability not covered by the bond, and (3) no abatement takes place.

A two-year reversal of the reduction in contributions which triggered the liability occurs where for any two consecutive plan years after the partial withdrawal (1) the number of contribution base units applied to determine the employer's required plan contributions exceeds (a) 40 percent of the number of such units for the year in the five-year base period for which such units were the highest, in the case of a partial withdrawal caused by a 60 percent decline in contribution base units, or (b) 75 percent of the number of such units for the year in the base period for which such units were the highest, in the case of a partial withdrawal caused by a facility closing or the cessation of contributions under a collective bargaining agreement, and (2) the total number of contribution base units applied to determine required plan contributions for all employers is not less than 90 percent of the total number of such units for the year of the partial withdrawal. An abatement under this rule completely eliminates the employer's partial withdrawal liability for plan years following the two consecutive years in which the reversal of the reduction in contributions takes place.

A ten percent contribution increase occurs where, for a plan year following the partial withdrawal, the number of contribution base units applied to determine the employer's required plan contributions exceeds the number of such units for the year of the partial withdrawal by at least 10 percent. In the case of an abatement under this rule, the employer's partial withdrawal liability payment for the year of the abatement is reduced pro rata under PBGC regulations. A plan may use a percentage other than 10 percent in applying this rule, except for a percentage prohibited by PBGC regulations.

(3) Construction etc., industry exception

In the case of certain plans under which an employer has an obligation to contribute for work performed in the building and construction industry, a withdrawal is considered to take place only if an employer ceases to have an obligation to contribute under the plan, and (1) continues to perform work in the jurisdiction of the collective bargaining agreement, of the type for which contributions were previously required, or (2) resumes work in the jurisdiction within five years after the date the employer's obligation to contribute under the plan ceased without renewing such obligation if, when the employer resumes work, (i) other employers have an obligation to contribute under the plan, and (ii) the plan would have permitted the employer to contribute.

An employer contributing to a plan is subject to these special rules only if substantially all of the employees for whom the employer has an obligation to contribute perform work in the building and construction industry, and (1) the plan covers primarily employees in the building and construction industry, or (2) the plan is amended to provide that the rules apply to employers with an obligation to contribute for work performed in the building and constuction industry.

The partial withdrawal rules apply to an employer subject to the special building and construction industry rules only where the em-[20]ployer so substantially reduces its involvement with a plan that the employer's continuing obligation to make contributions is for only a token portion of its work of the type for which contributions to the plan are required in the craft and area jurisdiction of the particular collective bargaining agreement. The partial withdrawal rules apply to an employer subject to the special entertainment industry rules only to the extent provided in PBGC regulations.

(4) De minimis rules

(a) General de minimis rule.—In any case where the withdrawal liability of an employer (computed before any pro rata reduction in the case of a partial withdrawal) the greater of (a) $25,000, or (b) 0.75 percent of the plan's unfunded benefit obligations determined as of the close of the plan year immediately preceding the withdrawal, the bill does not impose any withdrawal liability on the employer. A plan may provide, however, for a lower de minimis amount or for no de minimis amount.

The de minimis rule under the bill does not apply in the case of a mass withdrawal from a plan. Thus, the rule does not apply to an employer who withdraws from a plan in a plan year in which substantially all employers withdraw, or to an employer who withdraws under an agreement or arrangement under which substantially all employers withdraw from the plan in one or more plan years. Where substantially all employers withdraw from a plan within a period of three plan years, it is presumed that such an agreement or arrangement exists unless the contrary is shown by a preponderance of the evidence.

(b) Two-percent de minimis rule.—Under the bill, an employer will not incur withdrawal liability in the case of a partial withdrawal if the average annual contributions during the five plan years preceding the year of withdrawal were less than two percent of the total average annual contributions of all employers contributing to the plan. However, the bill permits a plan to provide that this two percent exception to partial withdrawal liability will not apply.

(5) Exception for new employers

The bill provides a rule under which an employer first entering a plan would not be subject to withdrawal liability, either in the case of a complete withdrawal or of a partial withdrawal, if certain conditions are met. The applicable conditions are as follows:

a. the employer was first obligated to make plan contributions after the date of enactment of the bill;

b. the employer was not required to make plan contributions for more than the lesser of (1) six consecutive plan years preceding the date of withdrawal or (2) the number of years required for vesting under the plan;

c. for each plan year for which contributions by the employer were required, the employer's contributions were less than 2 percent of all employer contributions to the plan for the plan year;

d. the plan does not primarily cover employees in the building and construction industry; and

e. the employer did not previously have the benefit of this exception with respect to the plan.

[21] In addition, the exception applies only if (1) the plan provides for its application; (2) the plan provides that benefits of participants accrued on the basis of service for the employer before the employer was required to contribute to the plan may not be payable if the employer ceases contributions to the plan and (3) the ratio of plan assets to benefit payments during the plan year preceding the first plan year for which the employer was required to make plan contributions was at least 8 to 1. Of course, the rule requiring that a plan provide for cancellation of benefits where the employer ceases contributions to the plan would not require any reduction of benefits to participants or beneficiaries whose benefits are in pay-status at the time of the cessation and who are not working in employment covered by the plan.

b. Computation of withdrawal liability

(1) Presumptive method

The bill, in its presumptive method for computing withdrawal liability, draws a distinction between employers who contributed to a plan for a plan year ending before February 28, 1979, and employers who did not contribute to the plan for such a year. As to employers who contributed to a plan for such a year, the computation of withdrawal liability is based on (1) the unfunded benefit obligations[4] of the plan attributable to those years, as well as on (2) changes in the unfunded benefit obligations of the plan for plan years ending on or after February 28, 1979, in which the employer was required to contribute to the plan. In the case of an employer who was not required to contribute to the plan for a plan year ending before February 28, 1979, the employer's withdrawal liability is computed solely with reference to changes in the unfunded benefit obligations under the plan for plan years ending on or after February 28, 1979, in which the employer was required to contribute to the plan. Under the bill, the presumptive method generally applies unless a plan adopts one of the alternative methods.

In particular, withdrawal liability under the presumptive method is divided into two parts, as follows:

(1) liability with respect to changes in unfunded benefit obligations for plan years ending on or after February 28, 1979, in which the employer was obligated to contribute under the plan; and

(2) liability with respect to unfunded benefit obligations for plan years ending before February 28, 1979.

In the case of an employer who was not required to contribute to a plan until a plan year ending on or after February 28, 1979, the second component of withdrawal liability does not apply.

The portion of an employer's withdrawal liability attributable to plan years ending after February 28, 1979, is computed in four steps, as follows:

(1) The first step is to determine what is known as the "change in a plan's unfunded benefit obligations" for each plan year [22] ending on or after February 28, 1979. Under the bill, this amount is calculated for each plan year as the difference between (a) the unfunded benefit obligations as of the end of the plan year which precedes the plan year, and (b) the sum of (i) the unfunded benefit obligations on the last day of the last plan year ending before February 28, 1979, reduced by five percent for each succeeding plan year which precedes the plan year, and (ii) the sum of the changes in unfunded benefit obligations for each plan year ending on or after February 28, 1979, and preceding the plan year (computed with each such change reduced by five percent for each succeeding plan year preceding the plan year).

(2) The second step is to determine what is known as "the unamortized amount of the change in a plan's unfunded benefit obligations with respect to a plan year". This amount is determined by reducing the change in a plan's unfunded benefit obligations for a plan year (determined under step (1)) by five percent for each succeeding plan year.

(3) The third step is to calculate the employer's "proportional share" of the unamortized amount of the change in the plan's unfunded benefit obligations for each plan year involved. This is accomplished by multiplying the unamortized amount of the change for each plan year, determined as of the end of the plan year in which the employer withdraws from the plan, by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the sum of contributions which the employer was required to make to the plan for the year of the change and for the preceding four plan years. The denominator of the fraction is the sum of contributions which all employers made to the plan for the year of the change and for the preceding four plan years.

[4] Generally, the term "unfunded benefit obligations" is intended to mean the plan's unfunded liability for benefits for which participants have met service requirements (including early retirement subsidies, Social Security supplements, and vested accrued benefits).

(4) The final step is to add up the employer's proportional share of the unamortized amount of the change in the plan's unfunded benefit obligations for each of the plan years. This total is the employer's proportional share of the unamortized amount of the change in the plan's unfunded benefit obligations for all plan years ending on or after February 28, 1979.

The portion of an employer's withdrawal liability with respect to plan years ending before February 28, 1979, is determined by multiplying (1) the amount of the unfunded benefit obligations under the plan at the close of the last plan year ending before February 28, 1979 (reduced by five percent for each succeeding plan year) by (2) a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the sum of contributions which the employer was required to make to the plan for the last five plan years ending before February 28, 1979. The denominator of the fraction is the sum, for the same five plan years, of plan contributions made by all employers who (a) had an obligation to contribute under the plan for the first plan year ending on or after February 28, 1979, and (b) had not withdrawn from the plan before February 28, 1979.

Under the bill, except as otherwise provided by PBGC regulations, the plan's unfunded benefit obligations will be increased by (1) the present value of uncollectible withdrawal liability if the plan sponsor [23] determines the withdrawal liability to be uncollectible, and (2) an amount equal to an employer's potential withdrawal liability if the plan sponsor determines that the employer is not liable for the withdrawal liability because of the bill's de minimis rule.

(2) First alternative method

The first alternative method also draws a distinction between employers who contributed to a plan for plan years ending before February 28, 1979, and employers who did not contribute to the plan for such years. As in the case of the presumptive method, only employers who contributed for years ending before February 28, 1979, are to have their withdrawal liability computed with reference to unfunded benefit obligations under the plan attributable to such years. Other employers are to have their withdrawal liability computed solely with reference to the plan's unfunded benefit obligations attributable to plan years ending on or after February 28, 1979. However, unlike the presumptive method, under the first alternative method, an employer's withdrawal liability is to be based on the aggregate change in unfunded benefit obligations with respect to all plan years ending on or after February 28, 1979, rather than on the changes in unfunded benefit obligations for each separate plan year for which the employer was required to contribute to the plan.

In particular, the first component of withdrawal liability under the first alternative method is to be obtained by multiplying (1) the plan's unfunded benefit obligations as of the end of the last plan year ending before February 28, 1979, reduced as if that amount were being amortized thereafter in level annual installments over 15 years, by (2) a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the sum of the plan contributions required of the employer for the last plan year ending before February 28, 1979, and for the preceding four plan years. The denominator of the fraction is the sum of the contributions made by included employers for that period of five plan years. An employer is included if (1) the employer was required to contribute to the plan for the first plan year ending on or after February 28, 1979, and (2) the employer had not withdrawn from the plan before that date.

The second component of withdrawal liability under the first alternative method is to be obtained by computing the excess of the plan's unfunded benefit obligations (as of the last day of the plan year in which the employer withdraws) over the sum of (1) the value on such date of all outstanding claims for withdrawal liability (with respect to employers withdrawing before the plan year) which can reasonably be expected to be collected and (2) the portion of the plan's unfunded benefit obligations as of the last day of the last plan year ending before February 28, 1979 (as reduced by 15-year amortization) which is allocable to remaining included employers and multiplying such excess by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the total amount required to be contributed by the employer for the last plan year ending before withdrawal and for the four preceding four plan years. The denominator of the fraction is the total amount contributed by all employers for those five plan years, increased by employer contributions for earlier periods that are collected during the [24] five plan years, and reduced by the contributions made by any employer who withdrew from the plan during any of the five plan years. An employer is included in this case if the employer was required to contribute to the plan for the first plan year ending on or after February 28, 1979, as well as for the plan year of the withdrawal.

(3) Second alternative method

The second alternative method for computing withdrawal liability draws no distinction between employers who were required to contribute to a plan for plan years ending before February 28, 1979, and employers who were required to contribute only for plan years ending on or after February 28, 1979. Accordingly, employers in both categories are to have their withdrawal liability computed with reference to all of a plan's unfunded benefit obligations.

Under this method, withdrawal liability is to be determined by multiplying (1) the plan's unfunded benefit obligations as of the end of the plan year of the withdrawal, reduced by the value as of such date of outstanding claims for withdrawal liability (with respect to employers withdrawing before the plan year) which can reasonably be expected to be collected by (2) a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the amount which the employer was required to contribute to the plan for the five plan years preceding the plan year of the withdrawal. The denominator of the fraction is the total amount contributed by all employers for those five plan years, increased by employer contributions for earlier periods that are collected during the five plan years, and reduced by the contributions made by any employer who withdrew from the plan during any of the five plan years.

(4) Third alternative method

The third alternative method takes a substantially different approach to computing withdrawal liability. Rather than determining the liability based upon the employer's share of plan contributions during a five-year period, the method is intended to compute the portion of the plan's unfunded benefit obligations which are attributable to service of plan participants with the employer. This is generally to be done by attributing portions of the unfunded benefit obligations to each employer in accordance with specified rules. In addition, the plan's unfunded benefit obligations which are not attributable to any present employer is also to be computed. A portion of those "unattributable obligations" is then to be allocated to the employer. An employer's withdrawal liability is then to be determined as the sum of (1) the portion of the plan's unfunded benefits obligations which are attributable to plan participants' service with the employer, and (2) the portion of "unattributable obligations" which is allocated to the employer. All determinations are to be made as of the end of the plan year of the withdrawal.

The portion of an employer's withdrawal liability arising from plan unfunded benefit obligations attributable to plan participants' service with the employer is computed in four steps, as follows:

(1) The first step is to determine the actuarial present value of benefit entitlements under the plan which are attributable to [25] participants' service with the employer (attributable entitlements).

(2) The second step is to determine the value of plan assets allocated to benefit entitlements attributable to service with the employers with an obligation to contribute under the plan in the plan year of the withdrawal (obligated employers). This is accomplished by multiplying (a) the value of plan assets as of the end of the year of the withdrawal, by (b) a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the actuarial present value of benefit entitlements attributable to service with obligated employers. The denominator of the fraction is the actuarial present value of all benefit entitlements for the year of the withdrawal.

(3) The third step is to determine the share of the value of the assets (determined under step (2)) which is allocated to the withdrawn employer. This is done by multiplying the value of such assets by one of three alternative fractions. The fraction used by a particular plan is to be designated by plan amendment. Under the first alternative fraction, (1) the numerator is the actuarial present value of benefit entitlements attributable to service with the employer, and (2) the denominator is the actuarial present value of benefit entitlements attributable to service with all employers required to contribute in the plan year of the withdrawal. Under the second alternative fraction, (1) the numerator is the actuarial present value of all plan contributions by the employer for the plan year of the withdrawal and all preceding plan years, and (2) the denominator is the actuarial present value of all plan contributions, for the plan year of the withdrawal and all preceding plan years, by employers required to contribute in the plan year of the withdrawal. Under the third alternative fraction, (1) the numerator is the difference between (a) the amount determined as the numerator of the second alternative fraction, and (b) the actuarial present value of plan benefit payments, for the plan year of the withdrawal and preceding plan years, attributable to service with the employer; and (2) the denominator is the difference between (a) the amount determined as the denominator of the second alternative fraction, and (b) the actuarial present value of plan benefit payments, for the plan year of the withdrawal and all preceding plan years, attributable to service with employers required to contribute in the plan year of the withdrawal.

(4) The final step is to subtract (1) the employer's share of the plan assets (determined under step (3)) from (2) the employer's attributable entitlements (determined under step (1)).

The portion of unattributable obligations which is allocated to the employer is determined in two steps, as follows:

(1) The first step is to calculate the unattributable obligations. This is accomplished by subtracting from the difference between two amounts the value of outstanding claims for withdrawal liability (with respect to employers withdrawing before the plan year of the withdrawal) which can reasonably be expected to be collected. The first amount is equal to (a) the actuarial present value of all plan benefit entitlements at the end of the year of the [26] withdrawal, less (b) the actuarial present value of plan benefit entitlements on that date attributable to participants' service with employers required to contribute to the plan for the year of the withdrawal. The second amount is equal to (a) the value of plan assets at the end of the year of the withdrawal, less (b) the value of plan assets computed at such date under step (2) of the calculation of the portion of the plan's unfunded benefit obligations which are attributable to plan participants' service with the employer.

(2) The second step is to allocate the amount determined under step (1) under any allocation method used under the presumptive method or any of the other alternative methods. The plan must provide for the specific method of allocation to be utilized.

The PBGC is authorized by the bill to prescribe regulations setting forth other methods a plan may adopt to allocate assets in determining withdrawal liability for (1) unfunded benefit obligations attributable to service with the employer, and (2) unattributable obligations.

(5) Other methods

The bill authorizes the PBGC to prescribe by regulations a procedure by which a plan may adopt other methods for determining withdrawal liability. The PBGC, before approving any such method, is to be required to determine that the method would not significantly increase the risk of loss to plan participants, beneficiaries, or the PBGC. In addition, the PBGC is to be authorized to prescribe standard approaches for alternative methods for which approval would either not be necessary or would be necessary only under a modified procedure. Any such alternative method is to be required to allocate to employers all of the plan's unfunded benefit obligations.

In determining an employer's withdrawal liability under the presumptive method or any of the alternative methods, if the method specifies the use of a five plan year period in the numerator or denominator of a fraction, the plan could provide instead for the use of a period of more than five, but not more than 10, plan years, unless PBGC regulations provide otherwise.

(6) Other rules.

Under the bill, in the event of a transfer of liabilities from the plan from which a withdrawal takes place to another plan in connection with a withdrawal, withdrawal liability is to be reduced by an amount equal to the actuarial present value, determined at the end of the last plan year ending on or before the date of the withdrawal, of the transferred unfunded benefit obligations.

In the case of a withdrawal by an employer following a merger of multiemployer plans, withdrawal liability is to be computed under the applicable method in accordance with PBGC regulations. However, in the case of a withdrawal in the first plan year beginning after the merger, withdrawal liability is determined as if the plans had remained separate.

Under the bill, a plan may be amended to adopt rules, consistent with the interests of plan participants, beneficiaries and contributing employers, which provide for reduction or waiver of withdrawal liability to the extent the employer's obligation to contribute under [27] the plan or make withdrawal liability payments is assumed by another employer.

In the case of certain plans established prior to January 1, 1954, as a result of an agreement between employee representatives and the Government of the United States during a period of government operation, under seizure powers, of a major part of the productive facilities of an industry (Code sec. 404(c)), the presumptive method for determining withdrawal liability is the second alternative method for computing such liability. In addition, (1) the general de minimis rule, and (2) the exception for new employers, do not apply to such a plan unless the plan is amended to provide for their application.

c. Payment of withdrawal liability

(1) In general

An employer who withdraws from a multiemployer plan is to be required to pay its withdrawal liability to the plan in accordance with a payment schedule to be determined by the plan sponsor under standards set forth in the bill.[5] As soon as practicable after a withdrawal, the plan sponsor is to be required to notify the employer of (1) the amount of withdrawal liability, and (2) the payment schedule. In addition, the plan sponsor is to be required to demand that the employer make payment of withdrawal liability in accordance with the payment schedule.

In calculating the payment schedule, the plan is to compute the annual payment under a formula set forth in the bill. The employer is generally to be required to make this payment to the plan for the lesser of (1) the number of years it would take to amortize its withdrawal liability (determined under the assumptions used for the most recent actuarial valuation for the plan) or (2) 30 years. The amount of each annual payment under the formula is to be determined as the product of two amounts. The first amount is the average number of contribution base units (e.g., hours worked, tons of coal mined) for the three consecutive plan years, during the period of 10 plan years ending with the plan year in which withdrawal occurs, in which the number of units was the highest. The second amount is the highest contribution rate (e.g., cents per hour) which the employer had an obligation to contribute under the plan during the period of 10 plan years ending with the year of withdrawal.

However, with respect to these two amounts a plan could provide that for the first plan year ending on or after February 28, 1979, the number "5" is substituted for the number "10" and is increased by one for each succeeding plan year until it becomes 10.

For example, assume that an employer's withdrawal liability is $1 million and that the plan's valuation rate of interest is 6 percent. Assume that in the 3 years for which the contribution base units were the highest during the 10 most recent plan years during which the employer was obligated to contribute to the plan, the number of such units were 80,000 hours, 85,000 hours and 90,000 hours respectively, and that during the last ten plan years the highest contribution [28] rate applicable to the employer under the plan was 75 cents an hour. The product of 85,000 hours (the average of 80,000, 85,000, and 90,000) and 75 cents an hour is $63,750. This would result in the amortization of the liability over approximately 49 years. Because the 49-year schedule is longer than 30 years, the employer would be liable to the plan for 30 annual payments of $63,750.

In the event that a multiemployer plan terminates upon (1) withdrawal of all employers in the plan or (2) withdrawal of substantially all employers in the plan pursuant to an agreement or arrangement to withdraw (a "mass withdrawal"), the annual amount of withdrawal liability payable by each employer is to be computed without regard to the 30-year limit, and total unfunded benefit obligations of the plan are allocated to all employers under PGBC regulations. Thus in the above example, if all employers were to withdraw, the liability of the employer would be $63,750 a year for approximately 49 years, unless the amount or payment period were to differ because of PBGC regulations which allocate unfunded benefit obligations.

In the case of a "partial withdrawal," withdrawal liability payments are to be made in the same fashion as in the instance of a complete withdrawal, but the amount payable would be only a pro rata portion of the payment required in the case of a complete withdrawal.

[5] The plan sponsor of a multiemployer plan is generally a Joint Board of Trustees which administers the plan.

(2) Time for payment

Payment of withdrawal liability is to begin no later than 60 days after the date on which a demand for payment is made by the plan sponsor. Under the bill, payments are generally to be made in four equal quarterly installments unless a particular plan provides for payment at other intervals. In any case where payment is not made when due, the bill requires interest to accrue with respect to the unpaid amount based on the prevailing market rate.

An employer is to be permitted to prepay its withdrawal liability obligations plus accrued interest, if any, in whole or in part without penalty.

In the event of default by an employer in payment of its withdrawal liability, the plan sponsor is to be permitted to require immediate payment of the balance of the employer's withdrawal liability plus any accrued interest thereon. Default is generally considered to occur where an employer fails to make any payment with respect to withdrawal liability when due, and further fails to make payment within 60 days after receiving written notice from the plan sponsor that payment of withdrawal liability is due but unpaid. In addition, the plan is to be permitted to adopt rules which would provide for other instances of default where it is indicated that there is a reasonable likelihood that an employer will be unable to pay its withdrawal liability.

A multiemployer plan may adopt rules consistent with the bill which set forth other terms and conditions for the satisfaction of an employer's withdrawal liability.

In the case of a multiemployer plan which terminates, each employer's obligation to make withdrawal liability payments for the future is to cease at the plan year in which the plan's assets, exclusive of outstanding withdrawal liability claims, are sufficient to meet all of its obligations. This determination of sufficiency is to be made by the PBGC.

[29] (3) Notice requirements and furnishing of information

Withdrawal liability is to be collectible upon notice and demand to the withdrawn employer by the plan sponsor. In order for the plan sponsor to be in a position to accurately determine liability, the bill requires the employer to furnish information to the plan sponsor. After an employer withdraws from a plan, the plan sponsor is to request in writing that the employer furnish such information as the plan sponsor reasonably considers necessary for it to fulfill its duties in computing and collecting withdrawal liability. The bill requires an employer to furnish the requested information within 30 days after such a written request from the plan sponsor.

The actual demand for payment of liability in accordance with the payment schedule is to be made by the plan sponsor. The bill requires that before the plan sponsor demands payment the plan must afford the employer a reasonable opportunity (1) to identify errors in the determination of withdrawal liability, (2) to identify errors in the payment schedule, and (3) to furnish to the plan sponsor any additional pertinent information. The plan sponsor also is required, if requested, to make relevant plan records reasonably available to the employer for review and duplication.

After the plan sponsor demands payment of withdrawal liability, an employer is permitted to request the plan sponsor to review any item relating to the calculation of the liability and the payment schedule. Any such request for review is to be made within 90 days after the employer receives the initial notice and demand for payment of the liability. In response to such a request by an employer, the plan sponsor is required to conduct a reasonable review of any matter questioned and to notify the employer of (1) its decision, (2) the grounds for its decision, and (3) the reason for any modification in the employer's withdrawal liability or of the payments schedule.

(4) Determination of actuarial assumptions, etc.

The PBGC is authorized to prescribe regulations setting forth actuarial assumptions which a plan may use in calculating withdrawal liability. However, a plan may provide instead that its own assumptions will be used to determine withdrawal liability rather than those developed by the PBGC.

In determining the unfunded benefit obligations under a plan, the plan's actuary and the plan administrator are permitted to rely on data available or on data secured by certain sampling techniques in situations where complete and definitive data is absent, provided such data can reasonably be expected to be representative of the status of the entire plan. In addition, a complete valuation of the plan is not required by the bill to be made more often than once every three years for the purpose of computing unfunded benefit obligations under the withdrawal liability provisions and reasonable estimates would be permitted in the interim years. However, the bill continues the authority of the Internal Revenue Service to require more frequent valuations in appropriate cases.

Under the bill, the plan sponsor may initially determine withdrawal liability on the basis of the latest available determination of contributions made to the plan by employers and the latest available actuarial valuation or, if later, the latest actuarial estimate.

[30] (5) Plan rules and amendments

There are several situations where plans, in the application of their own rules, either initially or by amendment, are permitted a wide degree of latitude in allocating and calculating withdrawal liability. In order to protect an employer from certain retroactive changes in a plan's rules, the bill prohibits the retroactive application of a plan rule or amendment relating to withdrawal liability from applying to a withdrawal occurring before its date of adoption, unless the employer consents to its earlier application.

The bill also requires that plan rules and amendments operate and be applied uniformly with respect to all employers except to the extent that lack of uniformity would be required to take into account employers' credit ratings.

Under the bill, when a plan rule or amendment affects withdrawal liability, the plan sponsor is required to give notice of the adoption of the rule or amendment to all employers required to contribute to the plan and to all employee organizations representing employees covered by the plan.

(6) Notice to the PBGC

Under regulations the PBGC is permitted to require a plan sponsor to notify the PBGC in any case where the withdrawal from a plan of an employer has resulted, or will result, in a significant reduction in total contributions to the plan.

(7) Relationship to other rules

Actions taken under the bill pursuant to the withdrawal liability rules are not to be considered prohibited self-dealing transactions for purposes of the nontax provision of ERISA.

In addition payments of withdrawal liability are not to be considered employer contributions for purposes of calculating withdrawal liability.

(8) Approval of amendments

If an amendment to a multiemployer plan authorized under the withdrawal liability provisions is adopted more than 36 months after the effective date of the bill, the amendment will be effective only if (1) the PBGC approves the amendment, or (2) within 90 days after it receives notice of the amendment from the plan sponsor, the PBGC fails to disapprove the amendment. However, certain amendments regarding methods for computing withdrawal liability could be adopted only in accordance with the section of the bill authorizing the amendments. The PBGC is to disapprove of a plan amendment only where it determines that the amendment creates an unreasonable risk of loss to plan participants, beneficiaries, or the PBGC.

(9) Determinations presumed correct

Under the bill, a determination of withdrawal liability by a plan would be presumed correct unless the party seeking to contest the determination shows by a preponderance of the evidence that the determination is unreasonable or clearly erroneous.

The determination by a plan as to the amount of its unfunded benefit obligations for a plan year is to be presumed correct, unless a party [31] seeking to contest the determination shows by a preponderance of the evidence that (1) the actuarial assumptions and methods used in the determination were unreasonable in the aggregate, or (2) a significant error was made by the plan's actuary in applying actuarial assumptions or methods.

(10) Supplemental fund for reimbursement for uncollectible withdrawal liability

Under the bill, the PBGC is required to establish a supplemental program by May 1, 1982, to reimburse multiemployer plans for withdrawal liability payments which are uncollectible because of bankruptcy or similar proceedings involving the employer. Under the program, the PBGC could also provide for reimbursement of a plan for withdrawal liability which is uncollectible for any other appropriate reason. A plan could elect coverage under the supplemental program and, if it did so, would be charged a premium for such coverage. The cost of the program (including appropriate administrative and legal costs) could be paid only out of premiums collected under the program. The PBGC could carry out the program in whole or in part under an arrangement with private insurers.

(11) Definition of obligation to contribute

For purposes of the withdrawal liability rules, an employer has an obligation to contribute if its obligation arises under one or more collective bargaining (or related) agreements or as a result of a duty under applicable labor-management relations law. An obligation to pay withdrawal liability or delinquent contributions is not considered an obligation to contribute.

2. Merger or transfer of plan assets or liabilities

a. Mergers and transfers to multiemployer plans

Under the bill, unless otherwise provided in PBGC regulations, a plan sponsor is not to be permitted to allow a multiemployer plan to merge (or consolidate) with one or more other multiemployer plans or to engage in a transfer of assets or liabilities to or from another multiemployer plan unless certain conditions are met. The applicable conditions are that:

(1) The accrued benefit of any participant or beneficiary will not be lower after the merger or transfer than it was before the merger or transfer;

(2) the benefits of participants and beneficiaries are not reasonably expected to be reduced under the reorganization or insolvency provisions of the bill during the five-year period following the year in which the merger or transfer is effective;

(3) it is not reasonably expected that the risk of loss to the PBGC with respect to any of the affected plans will increase significantly;

(4) an actuarial valuation of assets and liabilities of each of the affected plans for the plan year preceding the merger or transfer has been performed and the valuation is based on data not more than two years old; and

(5) the merger or transfer is agreed to by the plan sponsors of all the affected plans.

[32] Under the bill, action taken under the merger, etc. provisions does not constitute a prohibited self-dealing transaction under the nontax provisions of ERISA.

The plan sponsor of a multiemployer plan which is affected by a proposed merger is to be permitted to request an advisory opinion from the PBGC that the proposed merger complies with the requirements of the bill.

b. Transfers between a multiemployer plan and a single-employer plan

The bill provides that, in the case of a transfer of assets or liabilities from a multiemployer plan to a single-employer plan, the accrued benefit of any participant could not be lower immediately after the transfer than it was immediately before the transfer. In addition, in the case of a transfer of liabilities from a single-employer plan to a multiemployer plan or a merger of a single-employer plan into a multiemployer plan, no accrued benefit could be lower immediately after the transfer or merger than it was immediately before the transfer or merger.

As a general rule, the bill requires that, where a multiemployer plan transfers liabilities to a single-employer plan, the multiemployer plan is to be liable to the PBGC in the event of the termination of the single-employer plan within 60 months after the transfer. Under the bill, the amount of the liability is to be the lesser of (1) the excess of the insufficiency of plan assets of the terminated single-employer plan over 30 percent of the net worth of the employer maintaining the single-employer plan, or (2) the actuarial present value of the unfunded benefits transferred to the single-employer plan and guaranteed by the PBGC (such present value to be determined at the time of the transfer). This liability is to apply to a multiemployer plan unless the PBGC determines that the interests of the participants and the PBGC are otherwise adequately protected or the PBGC fails to make a determination. The PBGC is to make such determination within 120 days after receipt of a complete application from the plan sponsor of the multiemployer plan that such a determination be made. If the PBGC fails to make the determination within the prescribed period, the multiemployer plan is not to have contingent liability. A multiemployer plan is not to be liable under the bill because of the transfer of liabilities to a single-employer plan where (1) the liabilities had previously accrued under a single-employer plan that merged with the multiemployer plan, (2) the present value of the liabilities is not greater than the present value of liabilities for benefits which accrued before the single-employer plan merged with the multiemployer plan, and (3) the value of the assets which would have been in the single-employer plan if the employer had maintained and funded it as a separate plan under which no benefits accrued after the merger. This exception to the liability provision is sometimes referred to as the "in and out rule" because it is designed to protect multiemployer plans which merge with but later spin off single-employer plans.

In any case where a multiemployer plan is liable under the bill because of a merger or transfer, the PBGC is authorized to make arrangements for satisfaction of the liability.

[33] Where benefits are transferred to a single-employer plan under the merger or transfer rules, the benefits are thereafter to be governed by the termination insurance rules applicable to single-employer plans.

As a general rule, a multiemployer plan is not to be permitted to transfer assets to a single-employer plan unless the plan sponsor of the single-employer plan agrees to the transfer. In the case of a transfer under the "in and out" rule, however, the plan sponsor need not so consent if advance agreement is obtained from the employer who, after the transfer, will be obligated to contribute to the single-employer plan.

c. Partition

Partition could occur under the bill when, pursuant to court order obtained by the PBGC, a portion of the assets and liabilities of a multiemployer plan is segregated and held as a separate fund. Under the bill, a plan sponsor is permitted to request the PBGC to petition a Federal District Court for an order of partition upon a showing of certain facts. The plan sponsor would have to show that (1) a bankruptcy or similar proceeding with respect to an employer has resulted or will result in a subtantial reduction in the aggregate amount of contributions to the plan, and (2) it has determinel that the participants and beneficiaries' vested benefits which would be partitioned are directly attributable to service with the employer involved in the bankruptcy or similar proceeding.

If the PBGC determines that a multiemployer plan is likely to become insolvent as a result of a reduction of contributions because an employer is involved in a bankruptcy or similar proceeding, the PBGC may petition the Federal District Court for partition, if the PBGC determines that partition will significantly decrease the risk that insolvency of the multiemployer plan will occur. In such a case, the PBGC is required to notify the plan sponsor and the plan participants and beneficiaries whose benefits would be partitioned. The PBGC, in its petition, is to be permitted to propose a transfer of only vested benefits directly attributable to service with the employer involved in the bankruptcy or similar proceeding and an equitable share of the plan's assets.

The portion of the multiemployer plan which is partitioned is treated under the bill as a terminated multiemployer plan under which only the employer involved in the bankruptcy or similar proceeding would have withdrawal liability.

d. Assets transferable

Under the bill, multiemployer plans are required to provide rules regarding the transfer of assets to another plan. The rules could not restrict unreasonably the transfer of plan assets in connection with a transfer of plan liabilities and are to operate and be applied uniformly with respect to all transfers, except that reasonable variations are to be permitted to take into account the potential financial impact of a particular transfer on a multiemployer plan.

e. Other rules

Under the bill, the PBGC is required to prescribe regulations exempting de minimis transfers of assets from the merger, etc. rules. In addition, the merger, etc. rules do not apply to transfers of assets [34] pursuant to written reciprocity agreements except to the extent provided in PBGC regulations.

3. Reorganization and minimum contribution requirement

a. In general

Under the bill, certain financially troubled multiemployer plans are to be considered in a status of "reorganization." Once a plan enters a status of reorganization (1) benefits under the plan, including benefits currently being paid to retirees or their beneficiaries, could be reduced, (2) certain modifications to the otherwise applicable funding requirements of ERISA are to apply, and (3) certain prohibitions against increases in benefits are to apply if reductions are made.

b. Reorganization status

Under the bill, if the financial condition of a multiemployer plan becomes sufficiently poor under standards set forth in the bill, the plan is to be considered in reorganization and become subject to certain special rules regarding funding and adjustments in accrued benefits.

A multiemployer plan is to be in reorganization for a year if the plan's reorganization index is greater than zero. The reorganization index is the excess of the "benefit entitlements charge" of the plan over the net charge to the plan's funding standard account (see I. Minimum Funding Requirements) for the year without taking into account (1) credits for actual contributions to the plan for the year, (2) credits with respect to any waived funding deficiency for the year, and (3) credits with respect to any switchback liability for the year.[6] "Benefit entitlements charge" is defined as the amount necessary to amortize, in equal annual installments, the unfunded benefit obligations of the plan, determined as of the close of the plan year, (1) over 10 years in the case of obligations attributable to persons whose benefits are in pay status, and (2) over 25 years in the case of unfunded benefit obligations for other participants.

Under the bill, the determination of unfunded benefit obligations for purposes of calculating the benefit entitlements charge is based on a valuation of the plan performed as of the last day of the "base plan year", with certain adjustments. The "base plan year" for any plan year is the last plan year ending at least six months before the earliest of the effective dates of the "relevant collective bargaining agreements". A relevant collective bargaining agreement is a collective bargaining agreement (1) which is in effect for more than six months during the plan year for which the charge is determined and (2) which has not been in effect for more than three years as of the end of the plan year.[7] In any case where there is no relevant collective bargaining agreement, the base plan year is the plan year ending at least one year before the beginning of the plan year in which the determination of unfunded benefit obligations is made. Of course, the Secretary of the Treasury is to have the authority to require that the benefit entitlements charge and the charges and credits to the funding standard account are computed on a consistent basis.

[35] c. Prohibition of certain payments

Under the bill, while a plan is in reorganization, the present value of a participant's vested benefits derived from employer contributions is not to be permitted to be distributed in a form other than substantially level pension payments for life if the present value distribution would exceed $1,750. This prohibition is not to apply (1) in the case of a death benefit distribution, or (2) if the PBGC approves the payment of benefits in accordance with the plan in a greater amount after determining that the payment is in the interest of the plan's participants and beneficiaries and does not unreasonably add to the PBGC's risk of loss with respect to the plan.

d. Termination of reorganization status

A terminated multiemployer plan is not considered to be in reorganization after the date on which the last employer maintaining the plan withdraws from the plan. For this purpose, the determination of whether a withdrawal takes place is to be made in accordance with the definition of withdrawal contained in the bill's withdrawal liability provisions (see C. Employer Withdrawal Liability, Mergers, Etc., Explanation of provisions, 1. Employer withdrawal liability, a. Definition of withdrawal, (1) Complete withdrawal) and partial withdrawals are not to be taken into account.

e. Notice of reorganization

Under the bill when a multiemployer plan is in reorganization and would require an increase in contributions (before taking into account the credit for overburdened plans and accrued benefit reductions permitted under the reorganization provisions), the plan sponsor is required to notify interested parties of the reorganization status in the plan's summary annual report. The persons to be notified are (1) plan participants and beneficiaries, (2) employers required to contribute to the plan, and (3) employee organizations representing plan participants with respect to the plan. In addition to stating that the plan is in reorganization status, the notice must state that if contributions to the plan are not increased, then accrued benefits under the plan may be reduced or an excise tax may be imposed on employers if they fail to increase plan contributions.

In addition, the PBGC is to be authorized to issue regulations prescribing additional or alternative requirements for assuring adequate notice to, and access to relevant information, by interested parties.

f. Minimum contribution requirement

(1) In general

Under the bill, a plan in reorganization or a plan under which plan assets are not more than a specified multiple of benefit payments is to continue to maintain its funding standard account, but such a plan is also to be required to meet special minimum funding requirements. These requirements are to be met for a plan year if the sum of the "minimum contribution requirement" plus any accumulated funding deficiency for the preceding plan year did not exceed the amounts contributed by employers to the plan year, including amounts contributed to meet withdrawal liability obligations. If these requirements are not met, the accumulated funding deficiency for that plan year is to be the excess of the sum of the "minimum contribution re-[36]quirement" and the accumulated funding deficiency for the preceding plan year over the plan contributions, and employers are to be subject to the current excise taxes on accumulated funding deficiencies (or subject to the current conditions for having such deficiencies waived by the Internal Revenue Service).

[6] In the case of a multiemployer plan using the "shortfall" method in computing actuarial costs, shortfall gains and losses in that plan year are to be taken into account in computing the net charge for the plan year.

[7] The six-month period may be, for example, the first six months or last six months of a particular agreement.

The bill defines the minimum contribution requirement as the sum of (1) the plan's benefit entitlements charge,[8] and (2) in certain cases where the plan has been amended to increase benefits while the plan is in reorganization, the excess, if any, of the normal cost attributable to such plan amendment reduced by 15 percent of the normal cost computed without regard to the amendment. The minimum contribution requirement is reduced proportionately where the plan's current contribution base (e.g., hours of service) for which employer contributions are required for the plan year is less than the plan's valuation contribution base. A plan's "valuation contribution base" is generally equal to the plan's contribution base for the plan year for which the actuarial valuation used to determine unfunded benefit obligations under the plan was made, with certain adjustments for upward or downward trends. Special rules apply for determining a plan's valuation contribution base for a plan year in which the plan is insolvent.

In the case of a plan in reorganization, if the plan's benefit entitlements charge is less than the plan's "cash flow amount" for a plan year, the minimum contribution requirement is determined by substituting the "cash flow amount" for the benefit entitlements charge. For this purpose, "cash flow amount" is the aggregate amount of benefits payable under the plan increased by the plan's administrative expenses for the plan year and decreased by the value of available plan assets, as determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. Also, in determining a plan's minimum contribution requirement for a plan year, the benefit entitlements charge may be adjusted to reflect a subsequent plan amendment which reduces benefits under the reorganization or plan termination provisions of the bill or under the funding standard. This adjustment would only take place, however, if the amendment is adopted and effective no later than 2½ months after the close of the plan year, or within an extended period for making the amendment as prescribed in regulations issued by the Secretary of the Treasury.

In addition, during the period that a plan is required to meet the "minimum contribution requirement," a credit or charge balance may build up in the plan's funding standard account which is being maintained. The bill provides that if a plan is not required to meet the "minimum contribution requirement" for a plan year but was required to meet such requirement for the preceding plan year, any balance in the funding standard account is to be eliminated by an offsetting credit or charge (as appropriate) which is to be amortized over the following 30 years.

[37] Under the bill, a multiemployer plan is considered not to have a reorganization deficiency for a plan year if the rate of employer contributions under the plan equals or exceeds (1) the net charges to the funding standard account plus (2) seven percent of such amount for each year for which the minimum contribution requirement has applied to the plan. This seven percent limitation does not apply if a plan amendment is adopted while the plan is in reorganization and the amendment increases benefits with respect to service performed before the date the amendment is adopted.

(2) Credit for overburdened plans

Where a plan is considered to be financially overburdened for a plan year (determined under standards set forth in the bill), the plan is required to apply an "overburden credit" against its minimum contribution requirement for the plan year. Accordingly, the overburden credit would reduce the additional funding needed to satisfy the minimum contribution requirement.

A plan is considered overburdened for a plan year under the bill if (1) the average number of participants in pay status in the year exceeds the average of the average number of active participants in that year and in the preceding two plan years, and (2) the rate of employer contributions to the plan is at least equal to the greater of the rate of contributions for the preceding plan year or the rate of contributions for the year before the first plan year in which the plan was in reorganization (or in which the plan assets were not more than a specified multiple of benefit payments). For purposes of this rule, "pay status participant" means a retired employee receiving pension payments as an annuity, and "active participant" means (1) any plan participant who has not failed to accrue a benefit for the year because of insufficient active employment, (2) any active employee who is not a plan participant but who is in an employment unit covered by a collective bargaining agreement requiring the employee's employer to contribute to the plan, and (3) any active employee considered an employee of the employer under a special formula in the bill which treats certain employees as the employer's employees on the basis of the employer's withdrawal liability contributions to the plan. Also, for purposes of applying the overburden credit rules, in determining the first plan year in which a plan is in reorganization, years in which the plan was previously in reorganization are disregarded if followed by three consecutive plan years in which the plan is not in reorganization.

The amount of overburden credit for a plan year is to be the product of two amounts. The first amount is one-half of the "average guaranteed benefit paid" in the base plan year and the second amount is the "overburden factor" for the plan year. The "average guaranteed benefit paid" is 12 times the average monthly pension payments guaranteed under the bills, computed by dividing (1) the total guaranteed annuity pension payments under the plan by (2) the number of pay status participants in the plan for the plan year. The "overburden factor" for a plan for a plan year is the excess of (1) the average number of pay status participants for the base plan year over (2) the average of the average number of active participants in the plan in that plan year and the two preceding plan years.

[8] Where the benefit entitlements charge is less than 115 percent of the amount of benefits payable during a plan year, reduced by the plan's investment income for the year, and plan reserves are very low, such amount is substituted for the benefit entitlements charge.

[38] Under the bill, the Secretary of the Treasury could deny a plan an overburden credit for a plan year upon a finding that (1) the plan's current contribution base was reduced without a correlative reduction in the plan's unfunded benefit obligations attributable to pay status participants, and (2) such reduction resulted from a change in an agreement providing for employer contributions to the plan. Accordingly, a plan that has excluded active employees is not to be eligible for the overburden credit. However, an employer withdrawal from a plan is not to prevent the plan from being eligible for the overburden credit, unless the Secretary of the Treasury finds that in connection with the withdrawal a contribution base reduction resulted from a transfer of plan liabilities to another plan.

Under the bill, in the case of the merger of plans involving one or more multiemployer plans which are in reorganization, there is to be a limit on the amount of overburden credit which could be applied to the minimum contribution requirement of the merged plan. The maximum credit for any of the first three plan years ending after the merger could not exceed the sum of the overburden credits applied by each of the plans to avoid a reorganization deficiency for the last plan year ending before the merger. Of course, the rules relating to mergers also apply in computing the overburden credit in the case of a consolidation of plans.

g. Adjustments in accrued benefits

With very limited exceptions, under present law, plan amendments are not permitted to reduce benefits already accrued by an employee. However, in the case of a multiemployer plan in reorganization, the bill permits plan amendments to reduce accrued benefits attributable to employer contributions under specified circumstances. The accrued benefits which are subject to reduction are those which have been in effect under the plan for less than 60 months and are not eligible for guarantee by the PBGC.

The conditions which must be met in order for a plan's accrued benefits to be reduced are as follows:

a. A notice must be given, at least six months in advance of the first day of the plan year in which the amendment reducing accrued benefits is adopted, to plan participants and beneficiaries, to each employer with an obligation to contribute to the plan, and to each affected employee organization. The notice must state that the plan is in reorganization and that if contributions to the plan are required to be increased and the increase is not made, accrued benefits under the plan are required to be reduced or the failure to increase employer contributions to the plan may result in an excise tax for failure to meet the minimum funding standard.

b. Under regulations to be issued by the Secretary of the Treasury—

(i) accrued benefits of inactive participants are not to be reduced to a greater extent proportionally than accrued benefits for active participants are reduced;

(ii) benefits attributable to employer contributions other than accrued benefits (such as death benefits or health benefits) and the rate of future benefit accruals are to be decreased [39] at least as much as accrued benefits of active participants are decreased; and

(iii) if the reduction in accrued benefits takes the form of a change in the mode of benefit or the requirements for benefit entitlements, the reduction may not affect benefits in pay status on the effective date of the amendment or benefits of any participant who has reached, or is within five years of reaching, normal retirement age on the effective date of the amendment.

c. The rate of employer contributions for the plan year in which the amendment becomes effective and for all future years while the plan is in reorganization must at least equal the greater of (i) the rate of employer contributions (without regard to the amendment) for the plan year in which the amendment becomes effective, or (ii) the rate of employer contributions for the preceding plan year.

Where accrued benefits are decreased by a plan amendment, a plan is not to be permitted to recapture a benefit payment which has already been made under the plan's accrued benefit provisions determined before the amendment is adopted.

Once a plan has been amended to decrease accrued benefits, a future plan amendment is not to be permitted to increase (1) accrued benefits, or (2) the rate of future benefit accrual, only if the plan is first amended to restore previously eliminated accrued benefits of inactive participants and participants within five years of normal retirement age at least to the extent of the amount or rate by which the plan amendment increases benefit accruals. Moreover, where a plan is amended so that it partially restores previously accrued benefit levels or the previous rate of accrual, the benefits of inactive participants must be restored in at least the same proportion as accrued benefits are restored overall.

Under the bill, no increase in benefits under a plan is to be permitted to take effect in a plan year in which an amendment reducing accrued benefits is adopted or first becomes effective.

Where a benefit is reduced and later restored, a plan is not required to make retroactive benefit payments to participants who received payment under the reduced accrued benefit levels.

For purpose of applying the benefit reduction rules, an inactive participant is an individual whose benefits are in pay status under the plan or an individual not currently in service under the plan but who nevertheless has a vested plan benefit.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prescribe regulations permitting benefit reductions or increases for different groups of participants on an equitable basis to reflect variations in contribution rates and other relevant factors reflecting differences in bargained-for levels of financial support for plan benefit obligations.

h. Insolvent plans

Under the bill, if a multiemployer plan is insolvent for a plan year, the plan is to be required to suspend the payment of benefits, other than basic benefits, which exceed the "resource benefit level." The suspension rule does not apply, however, if the PBGC prescribes a procedure for the guarantee of supplemental benefits (retirement ben-[40]efits exceeding basic benefits) to the extent supplemental benefits are guaranteed by the PBGC. A multiemployer plan is considered insolvent for a plan year if (1) it is in reorganization, (2) it has been amended to reduce benefits to the level of basic benefits, and (3) it does not have available resources sufficient to pay benefits under the plan when due for the plan year. The term "resource benefit level" means the highest level of monthly benefits which the plan could pay out of its available resources.

For each year for which a multiemployer plan is insolvent, the plan sponsor is to be required to determine and certify the resource benefit level of the plan, based on its reasonable projection of available resources and benefits payable. Where the suspension of benefits above the resource benefit level takes place, benefits are to be suspended in substantially uniform proportions with respect to all persons whose benefits are in pay status under the plan. The proportionate suspension is to be done in a manner consistent with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. In addition, the Secretary of the Treasury is to be authorized to prescribe rules under which the benefits of different participant groups could be suspended in disproportionate fashion if varied equitably to reflect variations in contribution rates and other relevant factors reflecting differences in bargained-for levels of financial support for plan benefit obligations.

A plan sponsor is not to be permitted to determine and certify a resource benefit level which is below the level of basic benefits for a plan year, except in a case where payment of all benefits other than basic benefits was suspended for the plan year.

If, by the end of a plan year for which a plan is insolvent, the plan sponsor determines that benefits can be paid above the resource benefit level, the plan sponsor is required to direct the distribution of such additional benefits in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. Where by the end of the year, benefits up to the resource benefit level have not been paid, the amount necessary to bring benefits up to that level are required to be distributed in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, to the extent possible, considering the plan's available resources.

Every three years during the period when a plan is in reorganization, beginning with the end of the first such plan year, the plan sponsor is required to compare the value of plan assets with the total amount of benefit payments for the year. Except where plan assets exceed three times the total amount of benefit payments, the plan sponsor is to be required to make a determination regarding whether the plan will be insolvent during any of the next three plan years. In addition, if at any time the plan sponsor determines, on the basis of experience, that available resources are not sufficient to pay benefits when due for the forthcoming plan year, the sponsor is required to certify that the plan will be insolvent for that year. Such certification is required no later than three months before the commencement of the plan year.

For each year for which a plan is insolvent, the plan sponsor is required to determine and certify the resource benefit level and the level of basic benefits no later than three months before the commencement of the plan year. In addition, if the plan sponsor determines that [41] the plan may be insolvent any time in the next three plan years, the sponsor is to be required to so notify (1) the Secretary of the Treasury, (2) the PBGC, (3) plan participants and beneficiaries, (4) each employer required to contribute to the plan, and (5) each affected employee organization. In addition, the above parties other than the Secretary of the Treasury and the PBGC are to be informed that, in the event of insolvency, payments in excess of basic benefits are to be suspended (unless guaranteed as supplemental benefits). No later than two months before the first day of a year for which a plan is insolvent, the plan sponsor is required to notify each of the above parties of the plan's resource benefit level.

Where the plan sponsor believes that the resource benefit level for a plan year for which a plan is insolvent may not exceed the level of basic benefits, the plan sponsor is to so notify PBGC no later than six months before the first day of the plan year.

Where a plan sponsor determines and certifies a resource benefit level below the level of basic benefits, the sponsor is to apply for PBGC financial assistance. Where the plan sponsor determines a resource benefit level above the level of basic benefits but anticipates that for any month during a year for which the plan is insolvent the plan will not have sufficient assets to pay basic benefits, the plan sponsor is to be permitted to apply to the PBGC for financial assistance.

4. Financial assistance

Under the bill, if the PBGC receives an application for financial assistance from a plan and verifies that the plan will be insolvent and unable to pay basic benefits when due, the PBGC is to provide financial assistance to the plan in an amount sufficient to permit the plan to pay its basic benefits. Such financial assistance is to be provided under such conditions as the PBGC determines to be equitable and appropriate to prevent unreasonable loss to the PBGC with respect to the plan. Where a plan receives financial assistance from the PBGC, it is to repay the PBGC for such assistance on reasonable terms which are consistent with regulations to be issued by the PBGC.

While the PBGC is determining the amount of assistance necessary to permit a plan to pay basic benefits, the PBGC is to be permitted to provide interim financial assistance in an amount appropriate to avoid undue hardship to plan participants and beneficiaries.

5. Benefits under certain terminated plans

Under the bill, where a plan terminates by a mass withdrawal of employers the plan sponsor is required to amend the plan (1) to reduce benefits, and (2) to suspend certain benefit payments. The reduction in benefits is to be to a level at which plan assets will be sufficient to discharge the plan's obligations when due, but not to a level of benefits below the level eligible for guarantee. In making the determination of this level, the present value of vested benefits under the plan and the value of plan assets are to be determined and certified as of the end of the plan year in which the plan terminates, and as of the end of every plan thereafter. For this purpose, (1) plan assets include the value of outstanding claims for withdrawal liability that are not uncollectible, and (2) for the year in which the plan terminates and for the following two plan years plan assets also include certain additional assets [42] attributable to employer withdrawal liability, as prescribed in regulations issued by the PBGC in order to avoid premature benefit reductions.

Any plan amendment reducing benefits as to (1) limit the reduction to the extent necessary to permit the payment of vested benefits, (2) eliminate or reduce only those accrued benefits which are not guaranteed by the PBGC, (3) except to the extent permitted by the PBGC, make reductions only in accordance with the reorganization rules and only to the extent permitted under such rules, and (4) become effective no later than six months after the plan year in which it was determined that the present value of vested benefits exceeds plan assets. The Committee expects that a reduction of benefits for a participant or beneficiary to a greater extent than is permitted under the bill will be considered a violation of the minimum standards of ERISA (e.g., the vesting and fiduciary standards) and that fiduciaries will act prudently in discharging their duties to retirees and other participants and beneficiaries.

The benefit payments which are to be suspended where a plan terminates are all nonbasic benefits that cannot be provided out of plan resources.

6. Enforcement

a. Civil actions

Under the bill, certain parties could bring a civil action for appropriate legal relief, equitable relief, or both. These parties are (1) a plan fiduciary, an employer, a plan participant, or a plan beneficiary, any of whom are adversely affected by an act or omission of any party under the provisions of the bill with respect to multiemployer plans, as well as (2) an employee organization which represents an affected plan participant. However, no such action could be brought against the Secretary of the Treasury or the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

In any case where a civil action is brought to compel an employer to pay withdrawal liability, the court may award (1) the unpaid liability plus interest as well as (2) liquidated damages payable to the plan. In general, the district courts of the United States have exclusive jurisdiction for civil actions under the bill without regard to the amount in controversy. In the case of an action brought by a plan fiduciary to collect withdrawal liability, State courts of competent authority are also to have jurisdiction.

The proper venues in Federal district court for bringing an action under the bill are to be (1) the district where the plan is administered, (2) the district where a defendant resides, or (3) the district where a defendant does business. Service of process is to be permitted in any district where a defendant (1) resides, (2) does business, or (3) may be found. In addition, a copy of the complaint in any action brought under the bill is to be served on the PBGC by certified mail. The PBGC may intervene in any action brought under the bill.

In the case of an action under the bill, the court is permitted to award to the prevailing party all or a portion of costs and expenses in connection with the action, including reasonable attorney's fees.

The period of limitations for the commencement of an action under the bill is to expire six years after the date on which the cause of action arose.

[43] b. Penalty for failure to provide notice

If any person fails without reasonable cause to provide any notice required under the termination insurance program for multiemployer plans or under implementing regulations the bill provides that the person is to be liable to the PBGC in an amount up to $100 for each day that the failure continues. The PBGC is authorized to bring a civil action against the person failing to give notice. The action could be brought in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia or in any United States district court within the jurisdiction where (1) the plan assets are located, (2) the plan is administered, or (3) a defendant resides or does business. Service of process for such an action may take place in any district where a defendant (1) resides, (2) does business, or (3) may be found.

General effective date

The provisions of the bill generally apply on the date of enactment. One exception is that the withdrawal liability rules take effect as of February 27, 1979. For purposes of determining whether an employer has withdrawn from a multiemployer plan, the definition of multiemployer plan in effect at the time of the withdrawal is to be applied. Another exception is that the reorganization provisions take effect on the first day of the first plan year beginning after the earlier of (1) the expiration date of the last collective bargaining agreement in effect on the date of enactment of the bill or (2) 3 years after the date of enactment of the bill.

Also, the bill provides that where an employer has withdrawn from a multiemployer plan before the date of enactment of the bill, and a bond or escrow has been provided by the employer under present law, the PBGC is to pay the bond or escrow to the plan if, because of the withdrawal of all employers from the plan, the plan terminates before February 27, 1984. In any case in which the plan is not terminated before February 27, 1984, the liability of the employer is abated and any payment held in escrow is to be refunded without interest to the employer or the employer's bond is to be cancelled.

[44] Ways and Means Committee Amendment

1. Definition of withdrawal—two-percent de minimis rule

Under the bill, an employer who is obligated to make less than two percent of the total contributions to a plan is generally not charged with withdrawal liability for a partial withdrawal from the plan. The Committee determined that it is inappropriate automatically to relieve employers of partial withdrawal liability where a plan has substantial unfunded benefit obligations.

The Committee amendment revises the two-percent de minimis rule for partial withdrawals. Under the amendment, the rule automatically applies only in the case of a plan with unfunded benefit obligations, determined as of the close of the plan year of a partial withdrawal, not exceeding $1.25 million. In the case of a plan with unfunded benefit obligations of more than $1.25 million, the two-percent de minimis rule applies only if the plan provides for its application.

2. Computation of withdrawal liability—West Coast longshore labor

Under the bill, withdrawal liability is imposed on employers who maintain multiemployer pension plans. Also under the bill, withdrawal liability, absent a plan provision to the contrary, is generally computed under a rule which draws a distinction between unfunded benefit obligations created in plan years ending before February 28, 1979, and unfunded benefit obligations incurred in plan years ending on or after February 28, 1979.

The Committee has concluded that in the case of multiemployer plans covering West Coast longshore labor the PBGC should be authorized to define the term "employer". In addition the Committee has concluded that the presumptive method for computing withdrawal liability under the bill is inappropriate for a plan covering West Coast longshore labor and that withdrawal liability under such a plan should be computed under a method which draws no distinction with respect to whether unfunded benefit obligations are incurred in plan years ending before February 28, 1979, or in plan years ending on or after February 28, 1979.

The Committee amendment provides special rules for a West Coast longshore labor plan. Under the amendment (1) a West Coast longshore labor plan is to be required to use the second alternative method of computing withdrawal liability, and (2) the term "employer" with respect to such a plan will be defined under regulations prescribed by the PBGC. The amendment defines a West Coast longshore labor plan as a plan which covers longshore labor in all major ports with the western coastal area of the United States between Canada and Mexico.

[45] 3. Payment of withdrawal liability

a. Determination by reference to prior average contributions

Under the bill, the annual amount of the withdrawal liability payments of an employer is based on the product of the average contribution base units and the employer's rate of contribution to the plan, determined with reference to a prior period.

The Ways and Means Committee recognizes that for purposes of computing the amount of an employer's annual withdrawal liability payments, a plan, at this time, may not have ready access to the records necessary to compute such payment based on the average number of contribution-base units during a prior period. For this reason, the Committee has decided for a transition period to permit plans to base the computation on the average required employer contributions during the prior period.

Under the amendment, a plan could provide that for any plan year ending before 1986, the amount of an employer's annual withdrawal liability payment would, be the average of the required employer contributions under the plan for the period of three consecutive plan years for which such contributions were the highest during the period of ten consecutive plan years ending with the plan year in which the withdrawal occurs. This method could not be used by a plan for determining withdrawal liability payments in any case in which the plan terminates because of mass withdrawal. If a plan provides the computation method permitted by the Committee amendment and then the plan is amended to provide for use of the original method provided under the bill, the plan must use the original method thereafter.

b. Charge to employer for calculating withdrawal liability

Under the bill, because an employer who withdraws from a multiemployer plan may incur withdrawal liability, employers may be expected to request plan sponsors periodically to calculate potential withdrawal liabilities. The Committee has concluded that the expense of such calculations should not necessarily be borne by the plans.

Under the amendment, if any employer requests the plan sponsor to make an estimate of the employer's potential liability upon withdrawal from the plan, the plan sponsor may require the employer to pay the reasonable cost of providing the estimate. This specific authorization to adopt a plan provision under which a reasonable charge may be imposed for providing estimates of withdrawal liability is not intended by the Committee to limit the right of a plan to adopt other provisions for other reasonable charges authorized by the bill.

c. Withdrawal liability payment fund

Under the bill, a fund would be established to pay uncollectible employer withdrawal liability. The fund would be established and administered by the PBGC.

The Committee has concluded that a privately established fund for payment of withdrawal liability should be available as an alternative to a fund administered by the PBGC. In addition, the Committee has concluded that premiums for the PBGC maintained fund should be subject to Congressional review. The Committee believes that the [46] PBGC should not be permitted to set unrealistically low premiums because such conduct could attract additional plan participation in the voluntary program in reliance on low premium levels.

Accordingly, the Committee amendment permits plan sponsors of multiemployer plans to establish and participate in private funds for the purpose of paying withdrawal liabilities under certain circumstances. Any such fund which meets the applicable requirements is to be a tax-exempt organization. The fund could be required to maintain agreements for collection of premiums and payment of withdrawal liability with respect to a substantial portion of the participants in the multiemployer plan eligible to participate in the fund. The fund is to be administered by a board of trustees on which there is equal representation of employers and employees.

Under the Committee amendment, the fund would receive contributions from participating plans. Contributions by a plan to the fund during a plan year are to reduce the amount considered contributed to the plan for the year for purposes of the minimum funding standard and the minimum contribution requirement. The Committee expects that, in considering whether to approve a waiver of the funding requirements for a plan under section 412(d) of the Code for a plan year during which the plan has made a contribution to a withdrawal liability payment fund, the amount and nature of the payment will be taken into account.

The eligibility of a plan to participate in a fund is to be determined by the rules of the fund. Where an employer has withdrawn from a participating multiemployer plan and has incurred withdrawal liability, the fund would pay to the plan on behalf of the employer an amount not exceeding the portion of the employer's withdrawal liability which is not attributable to plan participants' service with an employer who was obligated to contribute to the plan on or after February 28, 1980 (unattributable liability). The fund could also pay withdrawal liability-type amounts which are not due from an employer solely because of (1) the special two-percent de minimis rule for partial withdrawal, (2) the general de minimis rule, or (3) the 30-year cap on withdrawal liability payments. In addition, the fund could pay withdrawal liability payments to the extent that they are uncollectible. The extent to which these types of amounts would be paid by the fund is generally to be determined under the rules of the fund. These payments are to be treated in the same manner as payments of withdrawal liability to the plan.

To the extent the fund pays unattributable withdrawal liability incurred by an employer, the employer is to be relieved of the liability.

Where a fund has paid uncollectible withdrawal liability to a plan, the fund is to be subrogated to the rights of the plan against the employer. If a withdrawal liability payment fund is terminated, any assets of the fund at termination are to revert to the participating plans and are not to revert to employers. Under the Committee amendment, the fund is not to lend its assets to participating plans or to the PBGC and the fund is not to borrow from participating plans or the PBGC.

The Committee amendment authorizes the PBGC to prescribe regulations with respect to withdrawal liability payment funds. The [47] Committee expects that such regulations will assure that the funds do not have the effect of undermining the purposes of the withdrawal liability rules. For example, the Committee expects the PBGC regulations will assure that payments by a fund with respect to unattributable liability are not in excess of appropriate levels. Of course, PBGC rules with respect to the withdrawal liability payment fund and with respect to the PBGC-administered fund are not to be designed or administered for the purpose of providing either of the arrangements a competitive advantage over the other.

The fund is to be maintained for the exclusive purpose of paying the specified withdrawal liability and withdrawal liability-type payments to plans as well as paying reasonable administrative expenses in connection with its operation.

Payments are not to be permitted from a withdrawal liability payment fund to a plan in the event of a withdrawal or partial withdrawal where the employees in the bargaining unit that has withdrawn from the plan continue, after the withdrawal, to be represented in negotiations with the employer by the labor organization representing the employees immediately before the withdrawal.

The amendment also provides for Congressional review of premiums for coverage under the PBGC maintained fund. Under the amendment, no revision of the premium schedule for this coverage could be adopted by the PBGC unless the revised schedule has been submitted to the Congress. The PBGC could adopt the revised schedule unless, within 60 days after the submission, the Congress disapproves of the revised schedule by a concurrent resolution which has been referred to the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Education and Labor of the House, and to the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate. The Committee expects that if the Congress disapproves of a revised premium schedule recommended by the PBGC, the PBGC will make appropriate adjustments to payments from the fund.

4. Notice of reorganization—content of notice to encompass beneficiary rights and remedies

Under the bill, a multiemployer plan in reorganization must notify interested parties of potential benefit reductions. Under the Committee amendment, the notices are to inform plan participants and beneficiaries of their rights and remedies and of the manner in which they may contact the Department of Labor for certain information. The Committee expects that the Department of Labor will refer inquiries from participants and beneficiaries to the Internal Revenue Service or to the PBGC in appropriate cases.

5. Minimum contribution requirement —seven-percent limitation on annual increase in contribution rate

Under the bill, a plan in reorganization is subject to a minimum contribution requirement which may require contributions greater than would be required under the minimum funding standard of ERISA, generally not to exceed the net charges to the funding standard account plus 7 percent of such amount for each year the minimum contribution requirements have applied to the plan. The Committee has determined that the minimum contribution requirement should not be [48] permitted to increase the rate of plan contributions above those required for the prior year by more than a reasonable amount.

Under the amendment, the minimum contribution requirement applicable to a plan for a particular plan year could not exceed an amount which would require a rate of employer contributions in excess of the rate which would be required to meet the greater of (1) the net charges under the plan's funding standard account as if it were not in reorganization (without regard to any credit balance in the funding standard account) or (2) 107 percent of the amount required for the preceding year. This limitation does not apply with respect to a plan if, while the plan is in reorganization, a plan amendment is adopted which increases benefits with respect to service performed before the date the amendment is adopted.

6. Adjustments in accrued benefits—prohibition against reducing benefits scheduled on or before March 26, 1980

Under the bill, a multiemployer plan in reorganization may reduce certain accrued benefits. The Committee has determined that retroactive application of the accrued benefit reduction provision to a date before the day following the date the Committee considered the provision is not appropriate.

The Committee's amendment limits the reduction in accrued benefits which could be made by a plan in reorganization. Under the amendment, only a net increase in accrued benefits due to plan amendments (or plans) adopted after March 26, 1980, or under collective bargaining agreements entered into after March 26, 1980, could be reduced. The Committee intends that benefit increases which occur after March 26, 1980, but which were bargained for before that date, would be protected from reduction under the reorganization rules. However, the Committee does not intend to protect increases in benefits which are provided for under a plan before March 26, 1980, as part of a schedule of benefits which could be bargained for, but which are bargained for after March 26, 1980 (so called "bargaining-up").

7. Enforcement — liquidated damages with respect to delinquent contributions

Under the bill, in the case of an action to collect withdrawal liability, a court may award a plan liquidated damages. The Committee has concluded that in certain situations, reasonable attorney's fees, court costs, and liquidated damages should be awarded to a plaintiff in an action to collect delinquent plan contributions.

The Committees amendment provides that in the case of a civil action by any person to collect delinquent multiemployer plan contributions, regardless of otherwise applicable law, the court before which the action is brought may award the plaintiff (1) reasonable attorney's fees, (2) court costs, and (3) liquidated damages not to exceed 20 percent of the amount of delinquent contributions as determined by the court. However, these items are to be awarded to a plaintiff only to the extent that the multiemployer plan in question provided for such an award. The bill preempts any State or other law which would prevent the award of reasonable attorney's fees, court costs or liquidated damages or which would limit liquidated damages to an amount below the 20 percent level. However, the bill does not [49] preclude the award of liquidated damages in excess of the 20 percent level where an award of such a higher level of liquidated damages is permitted under applicable State or other law. The Committee amendment does not change any other type of remedy permitted under State or Federal law with respect to delinquent multiemployer plan contributions.

a. Certain withdrawals completed before July 31, 1979

Under the bill, the withdrawal liability rules are generally effective on February 27, 1979. The Committee has concluded, however, that the rules should not apply to certain partial or complete withdrawals completed before July 31, 1979.

The Committee's amendment creates an exception to the general effective date for withdrawal liability. Under the amendment, if (1) on March 23, 1979, an employer publicly announced (for example, by a press release or other appropriate means) a decision to cease covered operations at a number of facilities, (2) before May 3, 1979, such decision was communicated to the labor organizations which represented employees at the facilities, and (3) before July 31, 1979, the employer ceased all covered operations at any of the facilities, then the employer's withdrawal liability, if any, attributable to such facilities, could not exceed the amount determined under a special formula. The Committee intends that notice given at the national or local level of a labor organization is adequate notice to the labor organization for purposes of the amendment.

The special formula generally would limit withdrawal liability to the excess of an amount deemed to be the employer's liability to the plan less an amount deemed to be an accumulation of the employer's contributions to the plan. In addition, for a partial withdrawal, the employer, in the event of any future withdrawal, is to have its withdrawal liability computed as if it had paid its full liability for the partial withdrawal rather than only the amount determined under the special formula.

b. Certain partial withdrawals announced before December 13, 1979

Under the bill, in the case of a partial withdrawal, the withdrawal liability rules are generally effective on February 27, 1979. The Committee has concluded that the rules should not apply to certain withdrawals announced before December 13, 1979.

The Committee's amendment creates an exception to the general effective date for partial withdrawal liability. Under the amendment, if an employer (1) publicly announced the total cessation of covered operations at a facility before December 13, 1979, and such cessation occurs within 12 months after the announcement; (2) had not been obligated to make contributions to the multiemployer plan on behalf of the employees at such facility for more than eight years; and (3) after the cessation, does not commence operations which would be covered by the plan within the same State for one year, then the employer's partial withdrawal liability attributable to such facility could not exceed the amount determined under a special formula. The special formula generally would limit partial withdrawal liability to the excess of the present value of vested benefits under the plan considered [50] to be attributable to the withdrawing employer (determined on the basis of actual employee data for the period preceding the date of the partial withdrawal and on the basis of actuarial estimates thereafter) less an amount deemed to be an accumulation of employers' contributions to the plan.

8. Related technical changes

a. Notice provisions in connection with collection of withdrawal liability

Under the bill, an employer is permitted a 90-day period to request a review of a plan sponsor's determination of the employer's withdrawal liability and schedule payments. The Committee amendment makes it clear that the 90-day period begins to run the day after the employer receives notice from the plan sponsor of the amount of its withdrawal liability and of the payment schedule.

b. Determination of reorganization status

The bill provides a test to determine whether a plan is in reorganization. Under the test, as a general rule, a plan will be in reorganization for a plan year unless the net charges to the funding standard account under the plan for the year are sufficient to amortize the plan's unfunded benefit obligations in equal annual installments over 10 years in the case of obligations attributable to persons in pay status and over 25 years in the case of other obligations.

The Committee amendment clarifies the precise tests to be applied under the bill in determining whether a plan is in reorganization for a year.

c. Partial withdrawal liability

Under the bill, an employer will generally be liable to a multiemployer plan for withdrawal liability in the event of what is known as a "partial withdrawal." A partial withdrawal occurs where the employer does not completely withdraw from the plan but where an event occurs indicating a meaningful reduction in the base for computing the employer's contributions to the plan. Under the bill, the amount of withdrawal liability in the case of a partial withdrawal is a pro rata portion of the amount of liability which would be applicable if the withdrawal were a complete withdrawal.

The Committee amendment clarifies the three events which trigger a partial withdrawal and the rules for computing the liability for a partial withdrawal.

Under the amendment, as under the bill, the three events which will trigger a partial withdrawal from a multiemployer plan are (1) a 60-percent decline in contribution base units; (2) a facility closing resulting in a 25-percent decline in contribution base units; and (3) a cessation of an employer's obligation to contribute to a plan under one but not all of the collective bargaining agreements obligating the employer to contribute to the plan.

(1) 60-percent decline.—

Under the amendment, a 60-percent decline in contribution base units is considered to take place in a plan year if during the plan year and during the preceding two plan years (the "3-year testing period") the number of contribution base units (e.g., hours worked) [51] with respect to which the employer was required to make plan contributions did not exceed 40 percent of the number of such contribution base units during the plan year (in a five-year base period) during which contribution base units were the highest. For example, assume a determination is to be made as to whether a partial withdrawal takes place under this rule for the plan year which is the calendar year 1987. Assume that the employer's contribution base units for 1985, 1986 and 1987 are 35,000 hours, 36,000 hours, and 37,000 hours respectively, and that the employer's contribution base units for 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984 are 100,000 hours, 98,000 hours, 95,000 hours, 91,000 hours, and 85,000 hours, respectively.

Contribution base units are the highest in 1980 when such units are 100,000 hours. Accordingly, to determine if a partial withdrawal occurs in 1987, it must be determined whether the number of contribution base units in each of 1985, 1986 and 1987 does not exceed 40 percent of the number of contribution base units in 1980. Because contribution base units in 1980 are 100,000 hours, a withdrawal does not occur unless contribution base units do not exceed 40,000 hours in each of 1985, 1986 and 1987. In this case, contribution base units are less than 40,000 hours in each year during the three-year testing period. Accordingly, a partial withdrawal in this case would be considered to take place as of the close of 1987.

(2) 25-percent decline.—

Under the amendment, a facility closing resulting in a 25-percent decline in contributions is considered to take place where (1) the facilities closed by an employer during the plan year and during the five preceding plan years accounted in the aggregate for at least 25 percent of that employer's contribution base units under the plan and (2) the employer's contribution base units for the plan year are 75 percent or less of the employer's contribution base units in the plan year during the five plan years preceding the plan year during which contribution base units were the highest. For purposes of this rule, a facility closing means the cessation of substantially all of the employer's covered operations at a facility.

In determining whether facility closing in the plan year and in the five preceding plan years resulted in a 25-percent reduction in contribution base units a formula is applied. Under the formula, a percentage is determined for each particular facility closing during the six-year period. If the sum of the percentages equals or exceeds 25 percent, a 25-percent decline in contribution base units is considered to have occurred. The percentage for each separate facility closing is determined by dividing (1) the number of contribution base units for the facility for the year during the six-year period encompassing the year of the closing and the preceding five years in which the number of such units were the highest (the "high six years") by (2) the number of contribution base units for all facilities with covered operations under the plan for the high six years.

(3) Cessation of an employer's obligation.—

A cessation of an employer's obligation to contribute to a plan under one but not all the collective bargaining agreements obligating the employer to contribute to the plan will not be considered to take [52] place in any case where there is a mere substitution of an agreement with one collective bargaining agent for an agreement with another collective bargaining agent under the same plan.

Once it has been determined that a partial withdrawal has occurred, the amount of withdrawal liability is determined by multiplying the amount of withdrawal liability which would have applied in the case of a complete withdrawal on the same date (or, in the case of a partial withdrawal in the nature of a 60-percent decline in contributions, on the last day of the first plan year in the three-year testing period) by (1) one minus (2) a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the employer's contribution base units for the plan year following the plan year of the partial withdrawal. The denominator of the fraction is the average of the employer's contribution base units for the five plan years immediately preceding the plan year of the partial withdrawal. However, in the case of a partial withdrawal because of a 60-percent decline in contributions, the denominator of the fraction is the average of the employer's contribution base units for the five plan years immediately preceding the three-year testing period.

Under the amendment, if withdrawal liability is determined on account of a partial withdrawal, the amount of the liability is applied as a credit against withdrawal liability for any future withdrawal from the plan, whether partial or complete. In addition, the future withdrawal will not relieve the employer from continuing to make its payments for withdrawal liability with respect to the earlier partial withdrawal. The PBGC is authorized to prescribe regulations necessary to make appropriate adjustments in the credit for future events so that withdrawal liability in the event of a future withdrawal properly reflects the employer's proper share of the plan's unfunded benefits obligations.

For purposes of computing an employer's annual withdrawal liability payment, a partial withdrawal in the nature of a 60-percent decline in contributions is deemed to occur on the last day of the first plan year in the three-year testing period.

[64] I. Minimum Funding Requirements (Secs. 203 and 304 of the Bill, Sec. 412 of the Code and Secs. 301 and 302 of ERISA)

Present law

In general

Under the Code and the nontax provisions of ERISA,[1] multiemployer pension plans are required to meet a minimum funding standard on an annual basis. As an administrative aid in the application of this standard, ERISA requires that each plan must establish and maintain a special account called a "funding standard account" to which specified charges and credits (including credits for contributions to the plan) must be made for each plan year. If, as of the close of a plan year, the account does not have a balance of charges, the plan is treated as satisfying the minimum funding standard for that year. Thus, as a general rule, the minimum contribution for a year is determined as the amount by which charges to the account would exceed credits to the account if no contribution were made to the plan.

For example, in the case of a plan the plan year of which is the calendar year, if, as of the close of 1980, charges to the plan's funding standard account would exceed credits to the account by $200,000 if no contribution were made to the plan for 1980, a minimum contribution for the year of that amount would generally be required for the plan to meet the minimum funding standard for 1980.

If, as of the close of any plan year, charges to the funding standard account exceed credits to the account, the excess is called an "accumulated funding deficiency." The deficiency is subject to a five-percent nondeductible excise tax and, if not corrected within a specified correction period, is also subject to a 100-percent nondeductible excise tax. The tax is payable by the employers responsible for contributing to the plan for the year.

Actuarial cost methods

In computing the amounts which are required to be contributed to a defined benefit pension plan for a plan year in order to meet the minimum funding standard for the year, the plan utilizes what is known as an "actuarial cost method." [2] Generally, an actuarial cost method breaks up the cost of the benefits into annual charges consisting of two elements with respect to benefits that are effective for the plan year. These elements are called (1) normal cost, and (2) past service cost. Normal cost generally represents the cost of future benefits under the plan for current employees and, under some funding methods, for separated employees, which will be funded by future con-[65]tributions to the plan (1) in level dollar amounts, (2) as a uniform percentage of payroll, (3) as a uniform amount per unit of service (e.g., 50 cents per hour), or (4) on the basis of the actuarial present values of benefits accruing under the plan in particular plan years. Past service liability represents the cost of future benefits under the plan (1) on the date the plan is first effective, or (2) on the date a plan amendment increasing plan benefits is first effective, which will not be funded by future plan contributions to meet normal cost.

[1] See sec. 412 of the Code and part 3, Title I of ERISA.

[2] See Temp. Treas. Regs. §§ 11.412(c)(1)-1 and 11.412(c)(1)-2, and Prop. Treas. Regs. §§ 1.412(c)(2)-1 and 1.412(c)(3)-1.

Normal cost and past service cost are key elements in computations under the minimum funding standard. While these costs may differ substantially, depending upon the actuarial cost method used to value a plan's assets and liabilities, they must be determined under an actuarial cost method permitted by ERISA. ERISA enumerates six acceptable actuarial cost methods and provides that additional methods may be permitted under Treasury regulations. Normal cost and past service costs under a plan are computed on the basis of an actuarial valuation of the assets and liabilities of a plan. Generally, an actuarial valuation is required at least once during each period of 3 plan years. More frequent valuations may be required by the Internal Revenue Service.

Charges to funding standard account

Normal cost

Each plan year, the plan's funding standard account must be charged with the normal cost assigned to that year under the plan's actuarial cost method. This will generally mean that the employers maintaining the plan will have to contribute to the plan an amount at least equal to the normal cost to create a credit in the funding standard account to balance off the charge for normal cost.

For example, if the normal cost for a plan for the plan year ending December 31, 1980, is $150,000, the funding standard account is charged for that amount. Assuming there are no credits to the account to offset that charge, an employer contribution to the plan of $150,000 would be required for 1980 in order to avoid an accumulated funding deficiency for that year.

Past service liability

There are three separate charges to the funding standard account which may arise as the result of past service liabilities. The first applies only to a plan in existence on January 1, 1974; the second applies only to a plan which came into existence after January 1, 1974; and the third applies to a plan under which past service liability has increased due to a plan amendment made after January 1, 1974.

In the case of a plan in existence on January 1, 1974, the funding standard account is charged with a portion of the past service liability under the plan determined as of the first day of the plan year beginning in the first year the funding standard applied to the plan (generally 1976). The amount of the liability with which the account is charged in the case of a multiemployer plan is based on amortization of past service liabilities over a period of 40 years. The liability must be amortized (in much the same manner as a mortgage) in equal annual installments over the 40-year amortization period.

[66] For example, assume that a plan in existence on January 1, 1974, uses the calendar year as its plan year and has a past service liability of $500,000 determined as of January 1, 1976. The plan's actuary uses an interest rate of six percent in determining plan costs. The 40-year schedule requires that $31,350 be charged against the funding standard account each year to amortize this liability. Thus, for each year in the 40-year period commencing with 1976, the plan's funding standard account is charged with the amount of $31,350. This will require the employers maintaining the plan to make a contribution to the plan of that amount for each year in the 40-year period to generate a credit to the account to offset the charge, unless it is offset by some other credit to the account or the plan becomes fully funded.

In the case of a plan not in existence on January 1, 1974, the plan is generally required to determine past service liability as of the first day of its first plan year beginning after September 2, 1974. This liability must be amortized by a multiemployer plan in equal annual installments over 40 years (30 years, in the case of a single-employer plan) in the same manner as past service liability is amortized for a plan in existence on January 1, 1974. Each year during the 40-year period, the funding standard is charged with the amount of past service liability amortized in that year unless the plan becomes fully funded.

In any case where a net increase in benefits under a plan takes place as a result of plan amendments in a year, the unfunded past service liability attributable to the net increase is determined and amortized over a period of 40 years in the case of a multiemployer plan (30 years for a single-employer plan). Each year during the 40-year period, the funding standard account is charged with the amount of the amortization for that year, and the employers are required to make sufficient contributions to offset the charge unless it is offset by another credit or the plan becomes fully funded.

Experience losses

In determining plan funding under an actuarial cost method, the plan's actuary generally makes certain assumptions regarding rates of interest, mortality, disability, salary increases, etc. If on the basis of these assumptions the contributions made to the plan result in unfunded liabilities less than that anticipated by the actuary, the excess of the expected unfunded liabilities over the actual unfunded liabilities is called an "experience gain."

On the other hand, if the expected unfunded liabilities fall short of the actual unfunded liabilities, the shortfall is considered an "experience loss." The minimum funding standard requires that an experience loss be amortized in equal installments over a period of 20 years (15 years for a single-employer plan) and that the funding standard account be charged with each year's amortization unless the plan becomes fully funded. (Some funding methods do not separately determine experience gains or losses.)

Changes in actuarial assumptions

If the actuarial assumptions used for funding a plan are revised and under the new assumptions the accrued liability of the plan is less than the accrued liability computed under the old assumptions, the decrease [67] in accrued liability is considered a "gain from changes in actuarial assumptions." "Accrued liability" refers to the actuarial present value of projected pension benefits under the plan which will not be funded by future contributions to meet normal cost. On the other hand, if, after the change in assumptions, accrued liability exceeds accrued liability computed under the old assumptions, the excess is considered a "loss from changes in actuarial assumptions." The amount of the loss from changes in actuarial assumptions must be amortized in equal annual installments over a period of 30 years, and the amount of each year's amortization must be charged to the funding standard account unless the plan becomes fully funded.

Waived funding deficiency

If 10 percent or more of the employers contributing to a multiemployer plan are unable to make contributions which will satisfy the minimum funding standard for a plan year without substantial business hardship, the Internal Revenue Service is permitted to waive all or a portion of the contribution requirements of the minimum funding standard for the plan year if it is determined that requiring the contributions would be adverse to the interests of plan participants in the aggregate. However, the Service is not permitted to grant such a waiver for a plan for more than five plan years in any period of 15 consecutive plan years. The amount of the contribution not required as a result of the waiver is called a "waived funding deficiency."

Under the funding standard, the amount of a waived funding deficiency must be amortized in equal annual installments over a period of 15 years commencing with the year first following the year for which the waiver is granted, and the funding standard account must be charged each year with the amount amortized for that year unless the plan becomes fully funded.

Switchback liability

ERISA provides that certain plans may elect to use an alternative minimum funding standard account for any year in lieu of the funding standard account, and prescribes specified annual charges and credits to the alternative account. If it would take a smaller contribution to balance charges and credits in the alternative account than it would take to balance the funding standard account for a plan year, no accumulated funding deficiency is considered to exist for the year if a contribution satisfying the requirements of the alternative account is made. During years for which contributions are made under the alternative account, an excess of charges over credits may build up in the funding standard account. If the plan later switches back from the alternative account to the funding standard account, this excess of charges over credits must be amortized over a period of five plan years. This amount is known as a "switchback liability."

Credits to funding standard account

Employer contributions

Each plan year, the funding standard account is credited with the amount considered contributed to a plan by employers maintaining the plan for the year. This amount includes contributions made during [68] the year as well as contributions made on account of the year up to two and one-half months after the close of the year. (The Internal Revenue Service can extend the period for an additional six months.)[3]

Past service liability

If plan amendments in a year result in a net decrease in past service liability, the amount of the decrease must be amortized in equal annual installments over a period of 40 years, and each year's amortization during the 40-year period (30 years for a single-employer plan) must be credited to the funding standard account unless the plan becomes fully funded. These credits will help offset charges to the account and will decrease otherwise required contributions to the plan.

Experience gains

If a net experience gain is determined in a plan year, the gain must be amortized in equal annual installments over a period of 20 years (15 years for a single employer plan), and the amount amortized each year must be credited to the funding standard account unless the plan becomes fully funded. These credits also offset charges to the account and thus decrease contribution requirements.

Changes in actuarial assumptions

If a change in actuarial assumptions results in a gain because of a decrease in plan accrued liability under the new assumptions, the gain must be amortized in equal annual installments over a period of 30 years. The amount amortized each year must be credited to the funding standard account unless the plan becomes fully funded and the credit will reduce plan contributions otherwise required for the year.

Switchback liability

When a plan switches back from the alternative minimum funding standard account to the funding standard account, the funding standard account is credited with the excess of charges over credits which have built up in that account. If this were not done, the entire excess would have to be offset by a contribution (or other credit) to the account in the year of the switchback to prevent an accumulated funding deficiency.

Extension of amortization periods

The Internal Revenue Service is permitted to extend for up to 10 years the period for amortizing any unfunded past service liability under a multiemployer plan.[4] If such an extension is granted, the period over which the funding standard account is charged with amortization of the liability is similarly extended. Before granting such an extension, the Service must determine that (1) the extension will carry out the purposes of ERISA, (2) the extension will provide adequate protection to plan participants and beneficiaries, and (3) the failure to grant the extension will (a) result in a substantial risk of plan termination or in substantial reduction of pension benefits or [69] compensation, and (b) be adverse to the interest of plan participants in the aggregate.

[3] See Temp. Treas. Regs. § 11.412(c)-12.

[4] Under Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978, referral to the Secretary of Labor may be required.

Reasons for change

The Ways and Means Committee believes that existing minimum funding requirements may not provide adequate safeguards to insure that multiemployer plans will be able to meet their pension obligations. However, the Committee is also concerned that when applied to an overburdened multiemployer plan, the present funding requirements may result in an undue financial burden on employers.

Explanation of provisions

1. In general

The bill modifies the periods over which past service liabilities and experience gains and losses under multiemployer plans would be required to be amortized for the purpose of making charges and credits to the funding standard account. In general, the new amortization periods follow those required of single-employer plans for funding purposes. However, certain transitional rules are provided under which the present law amortization periods continue to apply to multiemployer plans in certain circumstances.

In addition, the Secretary of the Treasury is to be authorized to prescribe regulations requiring additional charges and credits to the funding standard account to prevent withdrawal liability payments from being unduly reflected as advance funding of plan liabilities.

The bill also makes conforming amendments to the funding rules to take account of changes made in other parts of the bill.

2. Modification of charges to funding standard account

a. Past service liability

Under the bill, certain amounts of unfunded past service liability are to be amortized in equal annual installments over 30 years for purposes of determining charges to the funding standard account. These changes are (1) unfunded past service liability determined as of the first day of the first plan year of a plan not in existence on enactment, and (2) any net increase in unfunded past service liability arising from plan amendments adopted during a plan year.

b. Experience losses

Under the bill, a net experience loss is to be amortized in equal annual installments over 15 years for purposes of determining charges to the funding standard account.

3. Modification of credits to funding standard account

a. Past service liability

Under the bill, any decrease in unfunded past service liability arising from plan amendments adopted during a plan year is to be amortized in equal annual installments over 30 years for purposes of determining credits to the funding standard account.

b. Experience gains

Under the bill, a net experience gain is to be amortized in equal annual installments over 15 years for purposes of determining credits to the funding standard account.

[70] c. Withdrawal liability

Under the bill, any withdrawal liability payment to a plan for a plan year is to be treated as an amount contributed to the plan for the year. Accordingly, it will generate a credit to the funding standard account.

4. Prior amortizable amounts and transitional rules

Under the bill, any amortizable amounts described above that arose in a plan year beginning before the date the bill was enacted are to continue to be amortized over their respective previously established amortization periods. The bill also provides transitional rules under which the amortization periods of present law apply to certain future changes in past service liability.

5. Application of minimum funding standards to terminated multiemployer plan

Under the bill, the minimum funding standard applies with respect to a terminated multiemployer plan until the date on which the last remaining employer withdraws from the plan.

Effective date

These provisions of the bill apply on the date of enactment.

[71] J. Excise Taxes (Sec. 204 of the Bill and Sec. 4971 of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, an employer who maintains a plan to which the ERISA minimum funding standard applies is subject to a two-tier annual nondeductible excise tax on any accumulated funding deficiency under the plan. The initial tax is 5 percent of the deficiency. If the deficiency is not corrected within a correction period, an additional excise tax equal to 100 percent of the deficiency is imposed.

Before issuing a notice of deficiency under this provision, the Internal Revenue Service is required to notify the Secretary of Labor and afford to the Secretary of Labor an opportunity to (1) require the responsible employer to eliminate the deficiency and (2) to comment on the imposition of the tax.

Reason for change

Under the bill, a required contribution to a multiemployer plan may, under certain circumstances (e.g., reorganization) differ from the amount required to satisfy the minimum funding standard of ERISA.

Explanation of provisions

The bill conforms the penalty excise tax provisions relating to the ERISA funding standard to the plan reorganization provisions of the bill by changing the accumulated funding deficiency of a plan in reorganization (the amount to which the excise tax applies) to the reorganization deficiency computed under the bill. The bill also provides that in the case of a multiemployer plan in reorganization, the notice issued by the Internal Revenue Service to the Secretary of Labor with respect to a notice of deficiency for a tax on an accumulated funding deficiency, and the opportunity to comment on the imposition of the tax, are to be provided to the PBGC.

Effective date

These provisions of the bill apply on the date of enactment.

Revenue effect

It is estimated that this provision will result in a negligible net decrease in budget receipts.

[72] K. Deductibility of Employer Liability Payments (Sec. 205 of the Bill and Sec. 404 of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, an employer is allowed a deduction for a contribution to a qualified pension plan for its employees. The deduction is allowed (within limits) in the taxable year for which the contribution is made.[1] Payments of employer liability under the termination insurance program are treated as employer contributions.[2]

Reason for change

The Ways and Means Committee has determined that the payment of withdrawal liability by an employer should be treated as a contribution to the plan by the employer without regard to the usual limitation on employer deductions for contributions to a tax qualified plan.

Explanation of provision

The bill generally allows a deduction for amounts paid by a taxpayer under the employer withdrawal liability provisions of the termination insurance program without regard to the usual limitations on employer deductions for contributions to a tax qualified plan.

Under the bill, for employer tax deduction purposes, withdrawal liability payments are treated as employer contributions to the plan. Thus, the deduction of total plan contributions, including withdrawal liability payments, is subject to the full funding limitation. In addition, withdrawal liability payments are deductible only if paid for a taxable year which ends with or within a taxable year of the plan for which the plan is qualified. Of course, an employer's total contribution to the plan, including withdrawal liability payments, must be ordinary and necessary business expenses of the employer to be deductible. Special rules are provided which allow a deduction for employer liability payments to a taxpayer whose liability for the payments arises out of the liability of an employer who is a member of the same controlled group of companies that includes the taxpayer.

This provision of the bill is effective upon enactment.

Revenue effect

It is estimated that this provision will decrease budget receipts by a negligible amount per year.

[73] L. Minimum Vesting Requirements (Secs. 206 and 303 of the Bill, Sec. 411 of the Code, and Sec. 203 of ERISA)

Present law

Under present law, benefits under a plan which are vested may be forfeited only (1) in the case of death, (2) where benefits are suspended upon reemployment, (3) in the case of certain retroactive plan amendments which reduce benefits, or (4) in the case of certain withdrawals of mandatory employee contributions. Also, under present law, with certain very limited exceptions, all of a participant's years of service with an employer must be taken into account for vesting purposes.

Reason for change

The changes made under the reorganization provisions and the provisions relating to the definition of multiemployer plan require conforming changes in the ERISA rules relating to vesting.

Explanation of provisions

In general

The bill provides for additional circumstances under which vested benefits under a multiemployer plan, which are nonforfeitable under present law, could be forfeited. The bill provides that certain of a participant's years of service with an employer, currently taken into account for vesting purposes, could be disregarded in the case of a multiemployer plan. (Also, see C., Employer Withdrawal Liability Mergers, Etc. 3. Reorganization and minimum contribution requirement, g. Adjustments in accrued benefits.) In addition, the bill conforms the vesting provisions of ERISA to changes made in other parts of the bill.

Cessation of contributions under a multiemployer plan

Under the bill, a multiemployer plan does not fail to meet the vesting requirements of ERISA merely because the plan provides for the forfeiture of accrued benefits attributable to service with a participant's employer before the employer was required to contribute to the plan in the event that the employer ceases making contributions to the plan.

Reduction and suspension of benefits

Under the bill, a multiemployer plan does not fail to meet the vesting requirements of ERISA merely because (1) it is amended to reduce accrued benefits, but not below the level of benefits eligible for the PBGC guarantee, in the event of plan reorganization or plan determination, or (2) benefits payments under the plan, other than basic benefits, are suspended in the event of plan reorganization or plan termination.

[74] Authority to disregard service after withdrawal or plan termination

Under the bill, if an employer withdraws from a multiemployer plan, a participant's years of service with the employer completed after the withdrawal would not have to be taken into account in determining the participant's vested percentage in his accrued benefits under the plan. This rule applies to partial withdrawals only to the extent permitted in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

[76] M. Action Taken Before Regulations are Prescribed
(Sec. 405 of the Bill)

Present law

No provision.

Reason for change

The bill requires that many regulations be prescribed in the effectuation of its rules. The Ways and Means Committee has concluded that the parties affected by the bill should be permitted, pending the issuance of regulations, to act under the bill's provisions in the absence of regulations provided any action so taken is reasonable.

Explanation of provision

Where the manner in which a provision of the bill is to apply is to be set forth in regulations, any reasonable action taken before the regulations are issued is to be treated as complying with the regulations for the period preceding their issuance. However, this rule does not apply if the action is in violation of an instruction or temporary rule which is issued before the action is taken.

Effective date

This provision of the bill is effective upon enactment.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters.

Rev. Proc. 80-57

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to prescribe the procedures to be used by the Internal Revenue Service and taxpayers for resolving issues arising when a taxpayer is or would be subject to inconsistent tax treatment by the Service and the Puerto Rico or Virgin Islands tax authorities. Such issues generally involve: (1) allocations of income, deductions, credits, or allowances between related persons; (2) determination of residency; and (3) determinations of the source of income and related expenses. This revenue procedure does not provide procedures to be used by possession tax authorities.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 The Service has in accordance with the Agreements on Coordination of Tax Administration ("Agreements") with the Department of the Treasury of Puerto Rico (Internal Revenue News Release IR-2123, April 25, 1979, Announcement 79-84, 1979-23 I.R.B. 19) and the Department of Finance of the United States Virgin Islands (Internal Revenue News Release IR-1926, December 30, 1977, Announcement 78-21, 1978-7 I.R.B. 42) (hereinafter "the possession tax agencies") established cooperative programs to resolve tax disputes arising from inconsistent positions taken by the Service and the possession tax agencies.

.02 The Agreements provide that when by reason of inconsistent positions taken by the Service and the possession tax agency a taxpayer is or would be subject to inconsistent tax treatment by the two jurisdictions, the Director of International Operations and the designated possession tax official shall endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties arising from the application of the tax laws of the United States and the possession. In particular, but not by way of limitation, the Director of International Operations and the designated possession tax official may consult together to endeavor to agree: (a) to the same allocation of income, deductions, credits, or allowance between related persons; (b) to the same determination of residency of a particular taxpayer; or (c) to the same determination of the source of particular items of income.

.03 The Agreements provide that the Director of International Operations will be the representative of the Service to handle exchanges of tax returns and tax return information with the possessions, as well as to develop and coordinate cooperative programs designed to improve the administration and enforcement of both federal and possession tax laws.

.04 Requests for assistance under these mutual agreement procedures should be addressed to the Director of International Operations, Internal Revenue Service, 1325 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20225.

SEC. 3. PROCEDURES TO BE FOLLOWED

.01 A taxpayer, or a taxpayer with a related person in a possession, that is subject to double taxation because of inconsistent tax treatment by the Service and the possession tax agency may request assistance in accordance with this revenue procedure.

.02 In addition to the tax assistance request, the taxpayer should file a claim for credit or refund of any overpayment of federal tax that was paid on the income in question, provided the period of limitations prescribed under section 6511 of the Internal Revenue Code, with respect to the claim for credit or refund, has not expired. The taxpayer, or a related person in a possession, should also take whatever steps are necessary under the possession tax code to prevent the expiration of the period of limitations with respect to a claim for credit or refund of the possession tax.

.03 When, in conjunction with a request for assistance under this revenue procedure, a taxpayer seeks relief in the form of a credit or refund of either possession or United States tax, the allowance of such relief is subject to the applicable tax and procedural rules of the possession and the United States.

.04 Federal income tax claims are to be made as appropriate, on: Form 1040X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return; Form 1120X, Amended U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return; or Form 1041, U.S. Fiduciary Income Tax Return. The taxpayer should indicate on the appropriate form that a request for assistance under the possession mutual agreement procedure has been filed pursuant to this revenue procedure and should attach a copy of such request to that form. The claim should be computed on the assumption that the taxpayer does not qualify for relief through mutual agreement procedures for the year or years in question.

.05 With respect to the computation of the foreign tax credit, either Form 1116, Computation of Foreign Tax Credit, Individual, Fiduciary, or Nonresident Alien Individual, which also covers credits for foreign tax on income received from foreign partnerships and other business organizations, or Form 1118, Computation of Foreign Tax Credit-Corporations, shall be attached to the Form 1040X, Form 1120X, or Form 1041, as appropriate.

.06 If any possession tax issues subject to consideration under the possession mutual agreement procedures are expected to reoccur in the future and if the period for filing Form 1040X, Form 1120X, or Form 1041 is about to expire, the taxpayer should, before the expiration of the period of limitations for the taxable year involved, file a protective claim on Form 1040X, Form 1120X, or Form 1041 and transmit a copy to the Director of International Operations. The claim should describe the expected possession tax agency action and state that the taxpayer plans to file a request for assistance under the possession mutual agreement procedure. If the taxpayer later decides not to file the request, the Director of International Operations should be promptly notified by the taxpayer.

.07 The taxpayer should file a written request for assistance with the Director of International Operations, Internal Revenue Service, 1325 K Street N. W., Washington, D.C. 20225, as soon as the issues are sufficiently developed to indicate that the taxpayer is or would be subject to inconsistent tax treatment by the Service and the possession tax agency. This will: (1) insure consideration while the facts are more easily obtainable; (2) insure adequate time for the representatives of the two jurisdictions to consult and attempt to arrive at an agreement prior to the imposition of any procedural barriers under federal or possession law; and (3) avoid unnecessary delay in the final determination of tax liability.

.08 The Director of International Operations will not accept any taxpayer's request for consideration of a case that is pending in court without the consent of the Chief Counsel of the Service. If the case is pending in the United States Tax Court, the Chief Counsel may in appropriate cases request the court to delay trial pending mutual agreement action. If the case is pending in any other court, the Chief Counsel will consult with the Department of Justice. Final decision on delaying trial rests with the court. Suspension of litigation pending any possession mutual agreement consideration will not relieve the United States taxpayer from any obligation to act with respect to that litigation.

.09 A request for assistance under this revenue procedure shall be signed by the taxpayer or a person having authority to sign the taxpayer's federal income tax returns; shall contain a statement that assistance is requested under the possession mutual agreement procedure; and shall include the following information:

1 the taxpayer's name, address, and employer identification number (individuals not engaged in a trade or business should use their Social Security number) and where applicable the name, address and employer identification number (or for individuals not engaged in a trade or business a Social Security number) of a related person in the United States possession;

2 the taxable year or years in question and the Service Center where the taxpayer's federal income tax return was filed, or if no return was filed, a statement to that effect;

3 when income tax is involved, the type of income at issue (such as salary, dividends, or interest), a description of the transaction, activities, or other circumstances pertinent to the issue and the respective positions taken by the possession tax agency and the taxpayer on the issue raised;

4 the amount of the particular item involved in the issue raised and the amount of the possession tax assessed or proposed for assessment;

5 when applicable, a decription of the control and business relationships between the United States taxpayer and a related person in the possession;

6 when applicable, a statement of the status of the tax liability of the taxpayer and a related person in the possession for the year or years in question, as well as a statement as to whether the taxpayer or related person is entitled to any possession tax incentive or subsidy program benefits for the year or years in question;

7 a copy of any correspondence received from the possession tax agency and also copies of any briefs, protests and other relevant material submitted to the possession tax agency;

8 a copy of possession tax returns for the year or years in question;

9 a statement whether the federal tax return of the United States taxpayer, and where applicable the tax return of a related person in the possession, for the year or years in question were examined, or are in the process of being examined;

10 a statement as to whether a foreign tax credit was claimed in the taxpayer's federal tax return for the taxable year or years in question and, if a credit was claimed, whether it was claimed for all or part of the possession tax paid or accrued with respect to the particular item that is the subject of the request for assistance under a possession mutual agreement procedure;

11 on a separate and single document, a statement that the United States taxpayer consents to the disclosure to the designated possession tax official of any or all of the items of information set forth or enclosed in the request for assistance under this revenue procedure; this statement shall be dated and signed by a person having authority to sign the United States taxpayer's federal tax returns; and 12 other pertinent material the taxpayer may wish to supply.

Sec. 4. Notification to Taxpayer

.01 The taxpayer will be notified whether the facts submitted provide a basis for assistance under the possession mutual agreement procedure.

.02 The Director of International Operations will not assist the taxpayer if:

1 under the facts and circumstances the taxpayer is not entitled to such assistance (for example, the facts do not indicate that inconsistent positions have been taken by the Service and the possession tax agency).

2 the taxpayer indicates unwillingness to accept an agreement under the possession mutual agreement procedure except under conditions that are clearly unreasonable or unfairly prejudicial to the interests of the United States; or

3 the taxpayer does not furnish, upon request, sufficient information to determine the applicability of the possession mutual agreement procedure or otherwise fails to act as required by this revenue procedure.

.03 If the Director of International Operations accepts a request for assistance, the continuing cooperation of the taxpayer is essential. The taxpayer shall supply any additional information needed to resolve the case and keep the Director of International Operations informed as to proceedings in the possession and any other pertinent developments. The taxpayer may also be requested to execute a consent extending the period of limitations on assessment of tax for the taxable year or years in question.

.04 The Director of International Operations will notify a taxpayer requesting assistance under this revenue procedure of any agreement or partial agreement that the Service and the possession tax agency reach with respect to the taxpayer's request. If such agreement or partial agreement is not acceptable to the taxpayer, the taxpayer may pursue all rights to administrative and judicial review otherwise available under the law of the possession and the United States.

.05 When appropriate, in cases covered by this revenue procedure, the taxpayer will be requested to enter into a closing agreement in accordance with sections 6.07 and 6.17 of Rev. Proc. 68-16, 1968-1 C.B. 770.

.06 Rev. Proc. 65-17, 1965-1 C.B. 833, and Amendment I of Rev. Proc. 65-17, 1966-2 C.B. 1211, as amplified by Rev. Proc. 65-31, 1965-2 C.B. 1024, provide that a United States taxpayer must file a request for the treatment provided by Rev. Proc. 65-17 in writing with the appropriate district director before closing action is taken on issues arising under section 482 of the Code that forecloses availability of Rev. Proc. 65-17. Accordingly, if a United States taxpayer desires assistance under this revenue procedure and the benefits provided by Rev. Proc. 65-17, the request filed under this revenue procedure should state that the taxpayer desires the benefits of Rev. Proc. 65-17 before entering into any closing agreement or before any other closing action (as defined in section 4.03 of Rev. Proc. 65-31) is taken.

SEC. 5. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective immediately.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individual has been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension

Announcement of the Suspension, Termination, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension or Termination of Enrollment to Perform Actuarial Services Under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974

Under 20 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 901, an enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the initiation or conclusion of a suspension or termination proceeding, may offer his/her consent to suspension of enrollment. The Executive Director, Joint Board for the Enrollment of Actuaries, may suspend enrollment in accordance with the consent offered. An enrolled actuary whose enrollment is suspended is prohibited from performing actuarial services under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) during the period of suspension.

To enable employees of the Internal Revenue Service and others to identify enrolled actuaries under suspension, the Executive Director will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of enrolled actuaries who have been suspended. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date following suspension and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for at least three successive weeks for each enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

Mr. Charles L. Cormack, Birmingham, Alabama, has been placed under consent suspension from enrollment to perform actuarial services under ERISA. An announcement of his reinstatement will be placed in the Bulletin at the end of the period of suspension.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Prices: Domestic—$2.00 a single copy, $55.00 a year subscription; Foreign—$2.50 a single copy, $68.75 a year subscription.

Wages; legal fees and interest; awarded with back pay. The portion of a court-approved back-pay settlement between a union and a company that is used to pay legal fees incurred in enforcing a collective bargaining agreement on behalf of union members is not wages to the members. Likewise, the portion of back-pay award that is specified for legal fees and interest in connection with a claim against an individual's employer is also excludable from wages. However, the full amount of a similar award that does not specify that a part of the award is for legal fees is wages, even if the individual uses a portion of the award to pay attorney's fees.

Babysitters. Individuals engaged to perform sitting services for the clients of a babysitting agency that receives a fixed percentage of the fee collected by the sitters are not employees of the agency with respect to remuneration received after 1974. The general rule for determining employee status set forth in Rev. Rul. 56-502 only applies to sitting services if the agency pays the sitters directly. Rev. Rul. 74-414 revoked; Rev. Rul. 56-502 modified.

FUTA; credit reduction. The credit against unemployment tax for amounts paid into the unemployment funds maintained by various states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands is reduced for wages paid by employers during 1980 for services performed in those jurisdictions.

Announcement Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issue or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the Tax Court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

The Commissioner ACQUIESCES in the following decisions:

[1] Acquiescence in the issue relating to whether taxpayer was the owner of a partnership interest for the purpose of deducting a share of the loss incurred by the partnership. Acquiescence in result in the issue relating to whether a controlled group of corporations are bound to equally allocate the $25,000 surtax exception as a result of the failure of the group to file an election provided under 1.1561-3A(2) of the regulations. Acquiescence "in result" means acceptance of the decision of the Court but disagreement with some or all the reasons assigned for the decision.

[2] Acquiescence relating to whether an organization that reviews the appropriateness and quality of service provided under Medicare and Medicaid is operated exclusively for charitable purposes.

[3] Acquiescence relating to whether an organization created by a state statute to serve as a component of the University of Massachusetts Medical School and its teaching hospital is organized and operated exclusively for charitable, educational, and scientific purposes.

26 CFR 1.61-1: Gross income.

Whether court awarded payments of interest, attorney's fees and back pay are includible in gross income. See Rev. Rul. 80-364, page 15.

26 CFR 1.61-7: Interest.

Whether interest to be paid on obligations of a city will be exempt from tax. See Rev. Rul. 80-356, below.

Section 103.—Interest on Certain Governmental Obligations

26 CFR 1.103-10: Exemption for certain small issues of industrial development bonds.
(Also Sections 61, 263; 1.61-7, 1.263(a)-2.)

Industrial development bonds; exempt small issue; moving acquired buildings. Bond proceeds that are to be used to pay for moving buildings that a corporation is purchasing from an unrelated corporation to the purchaser's property qualify as amounts used for the acquisition of property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation within the meaning of section 103(b)(6)(A) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 79-135 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-356

ISSUE

Will bond proceeds to be expended for the cost of moving buildings qualify as amounts used for the acquisition of property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation within the meaning of secton 103(b)(6)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS AND LAW

City M proposes to issue industrial development bonds in the amount of $1,000,000 and loan the proceeds to corporation X for use in acquiring and moving several buildings. X will purchase the buildings from an unrelated corporation for $600,000. The cost of moving the buildings to X's property will be $400,000. The bonds will not be arbitrage bonds within the meaning of section 103(c)(2) of the Code.

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that interest on obligations of a political subdivision of a state is excludable from gross income. Section 103(b)(1) provides that, with certain exceptions, industrial development bonds will not be treated as obligations described in section 103(a)(1). Section 103(b)(6)(A) provides that an exempt small issue of $1,000,000 or less will not be treated as an industrial development bond if substantially all (90 percent or more) of the bond proceeds are to be used for the acquisition of land or property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation.

Section 263 of the Code provides that no deduction shall be allowed for any amount paid out for new buildings or for permanent improvement or betterments made to increase the value of any property. Section 1.263(a)-2 of the Income Tax Regulations lists as an example of a capital expenditure the cost of acquiring buildings having a useful life substantially beyond the taxable year.

The application of section 263 of the Code is illustrated in Rev. Rul. 72-113, 1972-1 C.B. 99, which holds that the costs of transporting horses purchased for breeding purposes to a taxpayer's farm are capital expenditures within the meaning of section 263(a) of the Code and are includible in the basis of the horses acquired.

HOLDING

The cost of moving the buildings to X's property will be a capital expenditure that must be added to the basis of the buildings since it is part of the cost of the acquisition of such buildings. Therefore, the bond proceeds used to move the buildings will qualify as amounts used to acquire property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation. Because substantially all (90 percent or more) of the bond proceeds will be used to acquire depreciable property, the bonds will qualify for the exception provisions of section 103(b)(6)(A) of the Code and the interest on the bonds will be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under the provisions of section 103(a)(1).

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 79-135, 1979-1 C.B. 78, which holds, in part, that amounts incurred for moving existing equipment to a new location will not qualify as expenditures for property subject to the allowance for depreciation, is distinguishable because the facts of Rev. Rul. 79-135 do not involve moving costs attributable to the acquisition of property.

Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses

26 CFR 1.162-1: Business expenses.

Whether court awarded payments for attorney's fees to a union on behalf of its members are deductible by the members as a business expense. See Rev. Rul. 80-364, page 15.

Section 165.—Losses

26 CFR 1.165-11: Election in respect of losses attributable to a disaster.

Disaster losses; year of deduction. Disaster areas in which losses during 1980 qualify for special tax treatment under section 165(h) of the Code are listed.

Rev. Rul. 80-357

LAW AND ANALYSIS—HOLDING

Under section 165(h) of the Internal Revenue Code, a taxpayer who suffers a disaster loss may elect to take a deduction for that loss on the federal income tax return for the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year in which the disaster occurred, provided the loss is one that occurred in an area determined by the President of the United States to warrant assistance by the Federal Government under the Disaster Relief Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-288, 1974-2 C.B. 414.

The election to deduct for the preceding year must be made on or before the later of (1) the original due date of the taxpayer's income tax return for the year in which the disaster occurred, or (2) the due date of the preceding year's return (taking into account extensions of time for filing granted to the taxpayer). Section 1.165-11 of the Income Tax Regulations sets forth the procedures for making an election with respect to such losses.

The provisions of section 165(h) of the Code will apply only to losses that are otherwise deductible under section 165(a). An individual taxpayer may deduct losses if they are incurred in a trade or business, if they are incurred in a transaction entered into for profit, or if they are casualty losses under section 165(c)(3).

The President has determined that areas in the states and possession listed below have been adversely affected by disasters of sufficient severity occurring during 1980 to warrant disaster assistance by the Federal Government under the Disaster Relief Act of 1974.

Section 334.—Basis of Property Received in Liquidations

26 CFR 1.334-1: Basis of property received in liquidations.

Liquidations; subsidiary; basis of assets. A personal holding company "purchased," within the meaning of section 334(b)(3) of the Code, all of the stock of a corporation having a wholly owned subsidiary on September 30, 1975, liquidated the parent on December 31, 1976, and liquidated the subsidiary on January 3, 1977. The personal holding company "purchased" the stock of the subsidiary on the date of liquidation of the parent. The "purchase" of the stock of the subsidiary did not occur within the 12-month period specified in section 334(b)(2)(B), and the basis in the subsidiary's assets to the personal holding company is determined under section 334(b)(1).

Rev. Rul. 80-358

ISSUE

Is the parent's (P) basis in a subsidiary's (T) assets received in a complete liquidation within the meaning of section 332(b) of the Internal Revenue Code determined with reference to section 334(b)(1) or section 334(b)(2)?

FACTS

S is a corporation engaged in a service business. For many years S has owned all of the stock of T, a corporation engaged in the same business as S. On September 30, 1975, P, a holding company, purchased, within the meaning of section 334(b)(3) of the Code, all of the outstanding stock of S for cash from an unrelated seller, with T remaining a wholly owned subsidiary of S. On December 31, 1976, P, pursuant to a plan of liquidation, completely liquidated S within the meaning of sections 332(b) and 334(b)(2), thus directly acquiring all of the stock of T. The basis of the stock of T in the hands of P was determined under section 334(b)(2). On January 3, 1977, P, pursuant to a plan of liquidation adopted on that date, liquidated T, within the meaning of section 332(b), and received T's assets.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

The basis of assets received by a corporation upon the liquidation of another corporation within the meaning of section 332(b) of the Code is generally a carryover basis under section 334(b)(1). However, an exception to this general rule is contained in section 334(b)(2), which provides that the basis of assets so received in complete liquidation will be determined with reference to the adjusted basis of the parent corporation in the stock of the liquidated subsidiary, provided the requirements of section 334(b)(2) are met. One of these requirements, contained in section 334(b)(2)(B), is that stock of the distributing corporation possessing at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote, and at least 80 percent of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock (except nonvoting stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends), must have been acquired by the distributee by purchase during a specific 12-month period. For this purpose, the term "purchase" is defined in section 334(b)(3), which provides:

> (3) Purchase defined.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(B), the term "purchase" means any acquisition of stock, but only if—
> (A) the basis of the stock in the hands of the distributee is not determined (i) in whole or in part by reference to the adjusted basis of such stock in the hands of the person from whom acquired, or (ii) under section 1014(a) (relating to property acquired from a decedent),
> (B) the stock is not acquired in an exchange to which section 351 applies; and
> (C) the stock is not acquired from a person the ownership of whose stock would, under section 318(a) be attributed to the person acquiring such stock.
> Notwithstanding subparagraph (C) of this paragraph, for purposes of paragraph (2)(B), the term "purchase" also means an acquisition of stock from a corporation when ownership of such stock would be attributed under section 318(a) to the person acquiring such stock, if the stock of such corporation by reason of which such ownership would be attributed was acquired by purchase (within the meaning of the preceding sentence).

Section 318(a) of the Code provides that for the purposes of those provisions of Subchapter C of the Code to which the rules in this section are expressly made applicable, if 50 percent or more in value of the stock in a corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for any person, that person shall be considered as owning the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for such corporation, in that proportion which the value of the stock which such person so owns bears to the value of all the stock in such corporation.

In the present case, immediately prior to P's liquidation of S and acquisition of the stock of T, P owned all the stock of S. P therefore acquired the stock of T from a corporation (S) whose ownership of the T stock was attributable to P under section 318(a) of the Code. Moreover, P had acquired the stock of S by purchase, within the meaning of section 334(b)(3), from an unrelated seller. P's acquisition of the stock of T therefore qualified as a purchase within the meaning of the second sentence of section 334(b)(3). The issue of whether P's basis in the T stock is determined under section 334(b)(1) or section 334(b)(2) thus depends upon whether P's purchase of the requisite 80 percent of the T stock occurred during the 12-month period specified in section 334(b)(2)(B).

Section 334(b)(2)(B)(ii) of the Code specifies that if any of the stock of the distributing corporation (T) was acquired in an acquisition which is a purchase within the meaning of the second sentence of section 334(b)(3), then the 12-month period within which the 80 percent ownership of the stock of the distributing corporation (T) must be acquired by the distributee (P) begins on the date on which the distributee is first considered under section 318(a) as owning stock owned by the corporation (S) from which such acquisition was made.

P was first considered under section 318(a) of the Code as owning stock of T on September 30, 1975, the date upon which P acquired the stock of S. However, P's "purchase" (within the meaning of section 334(b)(3)) of the stock of T did not occur until December 31, 1976, the date upon which the liquidation of S occurred. Therefore, P's "purchase" of the requisite amount of the stock of T did not occur within the 12-month period specified by section 334(b)(2)(B).

HOLDING

P's basis in T's assets received by P in complete liquidation of T is determined under section 334(b)(1) of the Code.

Section 401.—Qualified Pension, Profit-Sharing, and Stock Bonus Plans

26 CFR 1.401-4: Discrimination as to contributions or benefits.

Discrimination; deferred compensation included in benefit base. An employer adopted a voluntary deferred-payment plan that allows electing employees to defer 5 percent of their compensation earned in any year. The employer also adopted a pension plan that takes into account all compensation for computing benefits, including amounts deferred under the first plan. The inclusion of the deferred amounts in computing benefits may result in discrimination prohibited under section 401(a)(4) of the Code only if the proportion of compensation deferred by rank-and-file employees participating in the second plan is less than that of highly paid employees participating in the plan. Rev. Ruls. 69-145 and 71-225 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-359

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate the positions in Rev. Rul. 69-145, 1969-1 C.B. 126, and Rev. Rul. 71-225, 1971-1 C.B. 124, under current law.

The issue in the revenue rulings is whether a pension plan that determines benefits under the circumstances described below may fail to satisfy section 401(a)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code.

An employer adopted a nonqualified, deferred-payment arrangement for its employees. Under the arrangement any employee of the employer may elect, before the beginning of any taxable year, to defer, until retirement, the receipt of 5 percent of the compensation earned in that year. The deferred amounts are allocated to the employee's account as nonforfeitable credits. The employer has not made any contributions to fund the deferred-payment arrangement.

In the same year, the employer also adopted a pension plan for its employees. The plan provides that all compensation will be considered as the base for purposes of computing benefits regardless of the deferment of payment of any part of such compensation.

Section 401(a)(4) of the Code provides that a plan will satisfy that section if the contributions or benefits under the plan do not discriminate in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated. However, section 401(a)(5) provides that a plan will not be considered discriminatory merely because the contributions or benefits of or on behalf of the employees under the plan bear a uniform relationship to the total compensation or the basic or regular rate of compensation of such employees.

The amounts credited under an unfunded, deferred payment, under which the amounts will not be paid until retirement, are not considered compensation for the purposes of section 401(a)(5) of the Code. Therefore, such deferred amounts may not be used under a qualified plan to compute the employees' benefits if it results in discrimination prohibited under section 401(a)(4). However, these amounts may be used under a qualified plan if they do not result in prohibited discrimination.

In this case, if the proportion of compensation deferred under the unfunded arrangement by rank-and-file employees participating in the qualified plan equals or exceeds that deferred by employees participating in the qualified plan who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated, the basis for computing benefits does not cause prohibited discrimination.

On the other hand, if in the plan under consideration only a few of the lower paid employees elected to participate under the unfunded deferred-payment arrangement, the use of the amounts credited under the unfunded arrangement benefits primarily the highly paid employees and, therefore, the plan in operation may result in discrimination prohibited under section 401(a)(4) of the Code.

Accordingly, the use of deferred amounts and current compensation as the basis for computing benefits will not automatically cause the plan to fail to satisfy section 401(a)(4) of the Code. However, the basis of benefits may, in operation, result in failure to satisfy section 401(a)(4).

This revenue ruling does not deal with whether the nonqualified deferred-payment arrangement may fail to satisfy the funding requirements of Part 3 of Title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1.

This revenue ruling does not consider whether the basis of benefits for the pension plan may result in a violation of the limits of section 415 of the Code.

Rev. Ruls. 69-145 and 71-225 are superseded because the positions stated therein are restated under current law in this revenue ruling.

Section 410.—Minimum Participation Standards

26 CFR 1.410(a)-4: Maximum age conditions and time of participation.

Eligibility; plan provisions. Examples illustrate whether plan provisions that describe the date of eligibility for plan participation meet the eligibility requirements of section 410(a)(4) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-360

Advice has been requested whether the plans described below meet the requirements regarding commencefent of plan participation of section 410(a)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code and section 1.410(a)-4(b) of the Income Tax Regulations.

Plan 1. A plan provides that an employee is eligible to participate in the plan on the first day of the first plan year beginning after the employee's employment commencement date. The plan has no other requirements for participation.

Plan 2. A calendar year plan sets minimum service requirements regarding eligibility for plan participation as the completion of at least one hour of service (as defined in section 2530.200b-2(a) of the Department of Labor Regulations) in each of six calendar months after the employee's employment commencement date. An employee who has not separated from service may enter the plan on the first day of the first plan year beginning after completion of this service. The plan designates 12-consecutive-month periods beginning on the first anniversary of an employee's employment commencement date and succeeding anniversaries thereof as the eligibility computation period after the initial eligibility computation period.

Plan 3. A calendar year plan provides that an employee who has satisfied the minimum age and service requirements of section 410(a)(1)(A) of the Code is eligible to participate in the plan on the first day of the first plan year beginning after the date such requirements are met.

Plan 4. A calendar year defined benefit plan provides that an employee may enter the plan on the first semiannual entry date following attainment of age 25 and completion of one year of service.

Section 410(a)(1)(A) of the Code states that, in general, a qualified plan may not, as a condition of plan participation, require that an employee complete a period of service with the employer extending beyond the date on which the employee attains age 25 or completes one year of service, whichever is later. Section 410(a)(1)(B) sets forth special eligibility guidelines for 1) plans which provide 100 percent vesting after three years of service, and 2) plans maintained by certain specified employers.

Section 410(a)(3)(A) of the Code defines the term "year of service" as a 12-month period during which an employee has completed at least 1,000 hours of service.

Section 410(a)(4) of the Code provides that employees who have met the applicable minimum age and service requirements of section 410(a)(1) and who otherwise are eligible must be allowed to participate in the plan no later than the earlier of 1) the first day of the first plan year beginning after the date on which the employee satisfies these requirements, or 2) the date six months after these conditions are met, unless the employee separates from service prior to such date.

For purposes of section 410(a)(1) of the Code, a "break in service" is defined in section 411(a)(6)(A) as a calendar year, plan year, or other 12-consecutive-month period designated by the plan (and not prohibited under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Labor) during which the participant has not completed more than 500 hours of service.

Section 1.410(a)-4(b) of the regulations provides that if the separated employee returns to service after the time described in section 410(a)(4) of the Code, without incurring a one-year break in service, the employee must commence participation immediately upon the return. Example (3) of section 1.410(a)-4(b) of the regulations describes a situation wherein an employee who separates from service with a vested benefit and then incurs a break in service must be allowed to participate in the plan as of the date of reemployment so long as the employee completes a year of service after his or her return. A plan similarly must accommodate the reentry of certain employees who have satisfied the applicable minimum age and service requirements but who separate from service prior to one of the participation dates referred to in this section (whichever date is applicable). If such an employee later returns after one of these dates, without incurring a one-year break in service, the employee must be allowed to participate in the plan as of his or her return to service.

Section 2530.202-2(a) of the Department of Labor Regulations states that, for purposes of section 410(a)(1)(A)(ii) of the Code, the initial eligibility computation period that a plan must use is the 12-consecutive-month period beginning on the employee's employment commencement date. An employee's employment commencement date is the first day for which the employee is entitled to be credited with an hour of service (as described in section 2530.200b-2(a)(1) of the Department of Labor Regulations) for an employer maintaining the plan.

Section 2530.202-2(b) of the Department of Labor Regulations defines eligibility computation periods after the initial eligibility computation period. According to this section, a plan may, in general, choose one of two methods in measuring years of service for purposes of eligibility to participate after the initial eligibility computation period. The plan may designate the 12-consecutive month periods beginning on the first anniversary of an employee's employment commencement date and succeeding anniversaries thereof as the eligibility computation period after the initial eligibility computation period. Alternatively, a plan may, subject to certain restrictions, designate plan years beginning with the plan year which includes the first anniversary of an employee's employment commencement date as the eligibility computation period after the initial eligibility computation period.

These criteria are applied to the plans described above as follows:

Plan 1. For plans meeting the requirements of section 410(a)(1)(A) of the Code, section 410(a)(4) permits a maximum waiting period of six months after completion of one year of service for employees who are age 25 or over. This plan ensures that an employee always will be able to participate in the plan within a 12-month period after his or her date of employment.

Accordingly, this plan will not fail to satisfy the requirements of section 410(a)(4) (provided the plan also accommodates the immediate reentry exceptions set forth in section 1.410(a)-4(b) of the regulations, as described above.)

Plan 2. These plan provisions will not always permit an employee to participate within the period mandated by section 410(a)(4) of the Code, as illustrated by the following example.

A comences employment on January 2, 1978. On May 29, 1978, A separates from service after having completed over 1,000 hours of service. A returns to full-time work for this employer on July 2, 1979. A completes six months of employment that July and is thus allowed to participate in the plan as of January 1, 1980.

In the above example, the latest date by which A should have been allowed to participate is July 2, 1979, six months after A completed one year of service (as defined in section 410(a)(3)(A) of the Code.) The break-in-service provisions of section 410(a)(5) do not allow A's hours of service completed in 1978 to be disregarded, for purposes of eligibility to participate, because A did not incur a break in service in either the initial eligibility computation period (January 2, 1978 to January 1, 1979) or in A's subsequent eligibility computation period (January 2, 1979 to Janunary 1, 1980.)

Accordingly, this plan will not satisfy the requirements of section 410(a)(4) of the Code.

Plan 3. The plan's single annual entry date violates the requirements of section 410(a)(4) of the Code because operation of the provision will not ensure that an employee always will be eligible to participate within six months of attaining age 25 and completing one year of service. An employee, for instance, who had attained age 25 and completed one year of service on January 2 would be prevented from participating in the plan until the following January 1.

Accordingly, this plan fails to satisfy the requirements of section 410(a)(4) of the Code.

Plan 4. Two semi-annual entry dates are not sufficient to allow the plan to comply with the requirements of section 1.410(a)-4(b) of the regulations, as is evidenced by the following example.

B, after working ten years, separates from service in 1979 with a vested benefit. On March 3, 1984, B returns to employment that is covered by the plan and is allowed to resume plan participation on July 1 of that year.

In the above example, the employee's prior service may not be disregarded because B had a vested benefit upon separation from service. Thus, the plan may not postpone B's participation until July 1 but, rather, must allow B, to participate as of his or her return on March 3, 1984 (subject to B's completion of a year of service after returning to work for this employer.)

Accordingly, this plan will not meet the requirements of section 410(a)(4) of the Code unless it also provides for the reentry of vested employees who return after a break in service (and who complete a year of service after returning) and of certain employees who separate from service and later return to work without incurring a one-year break in service.

Section 451.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Inclusion

26 CFR 1.451-1: General rule for taxable year of inclusion.
(Also Sections 61, 166; 1.61-1, 1.166-1.)

Interest on uncollectible loan; accrual method. An accrual method taxpayer must include in gross income for the taxable year in which a loan payable to the taxpayer becomes uncollectible the interest that accrues on the loan for the part of that year prior to the time the loan becomes uncollectible. If the accrued interest subsequently becomes uncollectible, the taxpayer may be entitled to a bad debt deduction under section 166 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-361

ISSUE

When may a creditor-taxpayer suspend the accrual of interest income on a loan that becomes uncollectible during the taxable year?

FACTS

M, a domestic corporation, is a calendar year taxpayer that uses the accrual method of accounting. M made a secured loan to A in 1975. During 1975 and through the major part of 1976, A's financial condition was such that the interest on the loan obligation to M was collectible. During the latter part of 1976, however, due to sudden and severe financial reverses, A became insolvent, and, as a consequence, the debt became uncollectible. Shortly thereafter, A defaulted on the loan. The security was sufficient to satisfy only the principal amount of the indebtedness.

APPLICABLE LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1.451-1(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that under an accrual method of accounting, income is includible in gross income when all events have occurred that fix the right to receive such income and the amount thereof can be determined with reasonable accuracy.

Rev. Rul. 72-100, 1972-1 C.B. 122, as clarified by Rev. Rul. 74-607, 1974-2 C.B. 149, states that the right to receive interest income becomes fixed ratably over the period of the loan so long as all events have accrued to fix the right to receive income and the amount thereof can be fixed with reasonable accuracy.

A fixed right to a determinable amount does not require accrual, however, if the income item is uncollectible when the right to receive the item arises. Jones Lumber Co. v. Commissioner, 404 F.2d 764 (6th Cir. 1968).

When an income item is properly accrued and subsequently becomes uncollectible, a taxpayer's remedy is by way of deduction rather than through elimination of the accrual. Moreover, this rule is applicable even when the item is accrued and becomes uncollectible during the same taxable year. Spring City Foundry Co. v. Commissioner, 292 U.S. 182 (1934), Ct.D. 829, XIII-1 C.B. 28 (1934). Also Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co. v. Commissioner, 31 B.T.A. 730, 751 (1934), acq., XIV-2 C.B. (1935).

HOLDINGS

The interest, the right to which became fixed during that part of 1976 prior to A's insolvency, accrued as such right arose and therefore must be included in the gross income of M for that year. To the extent that the accrued interest subsequently became uncollectible because of A's insolvency, M is entitled to treat the accrued interest as a bad debt pursuant to section 166 of the Code, provided the requirements of that section are satisfied.

The interest, the right to which became fixed during that part of 1976 after A's insolvency, did not properly accrue, since the interest was uncollectible at the time such right arose, Therefore, such interest need not be included in the gross income of M for 1976.

Section 861.—Income From Sources Within the United States

26 CFR 1.861-5: Rentals and royalties. (Also Sections 871, 1441; 1.871-7, 1.1441-1.)

Income source; royalties for U.S. patent rights; paid by foreign corporation. An individual who is a citizen and resident of a foreign country with which the U.S. has no income tax convention licensed the U.S. rights on a patent to a U.S. corporation for use in the U.S. The patent royalties paid to the individual are subject to U.S. tax, and the Netherlands corporation is required to withhold the tax from the royalties.

Rev. Rul. 80-362

ISSUE

Are royalties paid for the use of a patent in the United States, under the circumstances described below, subject to United States tax?

FACTS

A, a citizen and resident of a country other than the United States or the Netherlands, licenses the United States rights on a patent to X, a Netherlands corporation. X is a bona fide corporation unrelated to A. X agrees to pay A a fixed royalty each year in return for the patent license. X relicenses the patent to Y, a United States corporation, for use in the United States. Y agrees to pay X royalties based on the number of units produced by Y each year under the patent. X's fixed royalty to A is not contingent upon the receipt of royalties from Y. A's royalty income is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States within the meaning of section 871(b) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Article IX(1) of the United States-Netherlands Income Tax Convention, T.D. 5778, 1950-1 C.B. 92, as amended by the United States-Netherlands Supplementary Income Tax Convention, 1967-2 C.B. 472, provides that royalties paid to a resident or corporation of the Netherlands shall be exempt from tax by the United States. There is no income tax convention between A's country of residence and the United States.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 861(a)(4) of the Code provides that royalties for the privilege of using a patent in the United States are treated as income from sources within the United States.

Section 871(a)(1)(A) of the Code imposes a tax of 30 percent of the amount received from sources within the United States by a nonresident alien individual as interest, dividends, rents, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, and other fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income.

Section 1.871-7(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that royalties, including royalties for the use of a patent, constitute fixed or determinable annual or periodical income to which the 30-percent tax rate imposed by section 871(a)(1)(A) applies.

Section 1441(a) of the Code provides that all persons, in whatever capacity acting, having the control, receipt, custody, disposal or payment of any of the items of income specified in section 1441(b) (to the extent that any of such items constitute gross income from sources within the United States), of any nonresident individual shall deduct and withhold from such items a tax equal to 30 percent thereof.

Section 1.1441-2(a) of the regulations provides that royalties are included in the items of income enumerated under section 1441(b) of the Code.

In the present factual situation, the royalties from Y to X are exempt from United States tax under Article IX(1) of the Convention. However, the royalties from X to A are not exempt from taxation by the United States because there is no income tax convention between A's country of residence and the United States providing for such an exemption. Since the royalties from X to A are paid in consideration for the privilege of using a patent in the United States, they are treated as income from sources within the United States under section 861(a)(4) of the Code and are subjec to United States income taxation under section 871(a)(1)(A).

HOLDING

Royalties paid by X to A are subject to United States tax at the 30-percent rate pursuant to section 871(a)(1)(A) of the Code. X, under section 1441(a), is required to withhold from the royalties paid to A a tax equal to 30 percent of such royalties.

Whether royalties paid by a Netherlands corporation that relicenses a patent for use n the United States to the licensor of the patent, an individual who is a citizen and resident of a country other than the United States or the Netherlands, are subject to the 30 percent tax imposed by section 871(a)(1)(A) of the Code. See Rev. Rul. 80-362, page 14.

Section 1441.—Withholding Of Tax On Nonresident Aliens

Whether a Netherlands corporation that relicenses a patent for use in the United States and pays royalties to the licensor of the patent, an individual who is a citizen and resident of a country other than the United States or the Netherlands, is required under section 1441(a) of the Code to withhold from the royalties a tax equal to 30 percent of such royalties. See Rev. Rul. 80-362, page 14.

Section 2001.—Imposition and Rate of Tax

26 CFR 20.2001-1: Rate of tax.

Domicile; employee of international organization. An employee of an international organization who entered the U.S. on a G-4 visa and intended to remain in the U.S. indefinitely, which intent persisted until death, was a resident of the U.S.; Rev. Rul. 74-364 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-363

ISSUE

For purposes of the federal estate tax imposed by Section 2001 of the Internal Revenue Code, was a person who entered the United States as a non-immigrant alien on a "G-4" visa a resident of the United States when that person intended to remain in the United States indefinitely at the date of death?

FACTS

The decedent, D, a citizen of a foreign country, was an employee of an international organization until death. In 1965, D entered and remained in the United States with a "G-4" visa. A "G-4" visa is a non-immigrant visa granted to employees of international organizations. After arrival, D formed the intent to remain in the United States indefinitely and the intent persisted until death in 1978.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2001(a) of the Code imposes a tax on the transfer of the taxable estate of every decedent who is a citizen or resident of the United States.

Section 2101(a) of the Code sets out a table of graduated rates of tax to be applied to the taxable estate of a decedent who was a nonresident not a citizen of the United States at the time of death. The taxable estate of a decedent who was a citizen or resident of the United States is subject to the tax in accordance with the table set out in section 2001.

Section 20.0-1(b)(1) of the regulations provides that a resident decedent is one who, at the time of death, was domiciled in the United States. A person acquires a domicile in a place by living there, for even a brief period of time, with no definite present intention of later moving. Residence without the requisite intention to remain indefinitely will not suffice to constitute domicile.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in Elkins v. Moreno, 435 U.S. 647 (1978), held that, under federal law, a nonimmigrant alien holding a "G-4" visa has the legal capacity to establish domicile within the United States. The Court concluded that when federal law, such as the statute that governs the granting of "G-4" visas, did not impose restrictions on intent or duration of stay, Congress intended that, while permanent immigration would normally occur through immigrant channels, nonrestricted nonimmigrant alients could adopt the United States as their domicile under certain circumstances.

The question of domicile depends on whether the decedent had formed the intent to remain in the United States indefinitely. In the present situation, D was a resident decedent since, at the time of death, domicile had been established in the United States. D had formed the intent and did, in fact, reside in the United States with no definite, present intention of leaving. This is true notwithstanding that D had entered and remained in the United States with a "G-4" visa.

HOLDING

At the date of death, D was a resident of the United States. Therefore, the transfer of D's taxable estate is subject to the federal estate tax imposed by section 2001 of the Code.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

In Rev. Rul. 74-364, 1974-2 C.B. 321, the Service concluded that a French citizen, who was the holder of a "G-4" visa that was valid at date of death, was under a legal disability and could not form the necessary intent to remain indefinitely in the United States. Rev. Rul. 74-364 is hereby revoked.

Pursuant to the authority contained in Section 7805(b) of the Code, this revenue ruling will not be applied with respect to decedents dying prior to December 29, 1980, the date of publication of this revenue ruling in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Legal fees and interest awarded with back pay. Examples illustrate the income tax and employment tax consequences of interest and attorneys' fees being awarded by a court in connection with claims for back pay.

Rev. Rul. 80-364

ISSUE

Whether interest and an attorney's fee awarded by a court in connection with a claim for back pay are wages for federal employment tax purposes.

FACTS

Situation 1. After termination of employment by a company, an individual filed a complaint against the company for back pay owed to the individual. The court awarded the individual 8*x* dollars as back pay, and also awarded interest of $1x$ dollars and an attorney's fee of $1x$ dollars.

Situation 2. An individual sued the individual's employer for $15x$ dollars for back pay. Pursuant to a court order the employer made a payment to the employee of $10x$ dollars. The court order did not indicate that a portion of the award was attorney's fees or interest. The employee paid $1x$ dollars for an attorney's fee which was paid out of the award.

Situation 3. Due to a breach of a collective bargaining agreement a union filed claims on behalf of its members against a company. Subsequently, the union and the company entered into a settlement agreement, later approved by a federal district court, that provided that the company would pay the union $40x$ dollars in full settlement of all claims. The union paid $6x$ dollars of the settlement for atorney's fees and returned $34x$ dollars to the employees for back pay owed to them. The back pay was distributed among the employees in proportion to their claims.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including compensation for services.

Section 3121(a) of the Code relating to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act and section 3306(b) relating to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act provide that the term "wages" means all remuneration for employment. Section 3401(a), relating to income tax withholding, contains a similar definition.

Rev. Rul. 72-268, 1972-1 C.B. 313, holds that payments by employers for previously unpaid minimum wages and overtime compensation under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 are wages for federal employment tax purposes. However, payments of liquidated damages to employees under the Act are not remuneration for employment and are not wages.

HOLDINGS

In Situation 1, while the full amount of the award is income to the employee and must be included in the employee's gross income, only the back pay award of $8x$ dollars is wages for federal employment tax purposes. The payments for interest and the attorney's fee are not wages, because they are not remuneration for employment.

In Situation 2, the full amount of the award is income to the employee and it is also wages for federal employment tax purposes, notwithstanding that a portion of it was spent on attorney's fees.

In Situation 3, the amount of the settlement paid by the union for attorney's fees is not remuneration to the individual employees and, therefore, is not wages for purposes of the federal employment taxes. The attorney's fees portion of the settlement is a reimbursement for expenses incurred by the union to enforce the collective bargaining agreement. The amount allocated to attorney's fees is not includible in the gross income of the individual employees and the individual employees may not deduct the attorney's fees as a business expense. Compare Rev. Rul. 58-301, 1958-1 C.B. 23.

In accordance with directions in Section 15(a) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974, the Railroad Retirement Board has determined that for the quarter beginning January 1, 1981, 20.7 percent of the taxes collected under Sections 3211(b) and 3221(c) of the Railroad Retirement Tax Act shall be credited to the Railroad Retirement Account and 79.3 percent of the taxes collected under such Sections 3211(b) and 3221(c) plus one hundred percent of the taxes collected under Section 3221(d) of the Railroad Retirement Tax Act shall be credited to the Railroad Retirement Supplemental Account.

Rev. Rul. 80-365

ISSUE

Are individuals engaged by a babysitting agency to perform sitting services for the clients of the babysitting agency employees of the agency under sections 3121(d), 3306(i) and 3401(c) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

As a result of section 10 of Pub. L. No. 95-171, 1978-1 C.B. 457, 458, which added section 3506 to the Code, the Internal Revenue Service has given further consideration to Rev. Rul. 56-502, 1956-2 C.B. 688 and Rev. Rul. 74-414, 1974-2 C.B. 334.

Rev. Rul. 56-502 holds that individuals engaged by an agency that is not licensed or registered under state or municipal law as an employment agency to perform domestic service for its clients are employees of the agency for federal employment tax purposes. In that revenue ruling, the agency holds itself out as being engaged in the business of furnishing domestic help and determines the individuals' remuneration. The clients pay the agency for the individual's services, and the agency deducts a stipulated commission from the amount and turns the balance over to the individuals.

Rev. Rul. 56-502 sets forth a general rule to be applied in situations concerning the federal employment tax status of individuals engaged by a company to perform domestic services for its clients. The individuals are considered to be employees of such agency for federal employment tax purposes where the facts show that (1) the agency is engaged in the business of furnishing such services and so holds itself out to the general public, (2) the agency furnishes the employment of the individuals and fixes their remuneration, (3) the parents, homeowners, or others for whom the services are performed look to the agency for duly qualified and trained individuals, (4) the services are necessary to the conduct of the agency's business and promote or advance its business interests, and (5) the total business income of the agency is derived through a percentage of the remuneration received by the individuals for the performance of their services. Rev. Rul. 56-502 states that the above rule is considered applicable whether the agency pays the individuals directly or the individuals are paid directly by the agency's clients.

However, Rev. Rul. 56-502 holds that the foregoing general rule does not apply in those instances where the agency furnishing the services is licensed or registered under state or municipal law as an employment agency that has the function of furnishing applicants for employment to prospective employers and is subject to the applicable laws and regulations respecting the charging of fees, the maintenance of its employment register, etc.

Rev. Rul. 74-414 holds that individuals performing babysitting services for customers of a babysitting agency licensed as an employment agency in accordance with city and state requirements are employees of the agency for federal employment tax purposes, since the agency has retained the primary right to direct and control them. That agency furnishes instructions regarding conduct, requires semimonthly reports, prohibits the individuals from engaging assistants or substitutes or securing work with a client other than through the agency, and determines the fee to be charged. The babysitters collect the total fee for the services from the clients and pay a fixed percentage to the agency.

In addition to its holding, Rev. Rul. 74-414 clarifies Rev. Rul. 56-202 to provide that a state or municipal licensing requirement is not exclusively determinative of the existence of an employer-employee relationship, if, in fact, the agency has the right to control and direct the individual under the common law rules. The clarification is effective with respect to the remuneration received by individuals engaged by a company to perform domestic services for its clients for calendar quarters beginning after August 26, 1974.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Effective with respect to remuneration received after December 31, 1974, section 3506(a) of the Code provides that, for federal employment tax purposes, a person engaged in the trade or business of putting sitters in touch with individuals who wish to employ them shall not be treated as the employer of such sitters (and such sitters shall not be treated as employees of such person) if such person does not pay or receive the salary or wages of the sitters and such person is compensated by the sitters or the persons who employ them on a fee basis.

Section 3506(b) provides that the term "sitters" means individuals who furnish personal attendance, companionship, or household care services to children or to individuals who are elderly or disabled.

Section 31.3506-1(c) of the Employment Tax Regulations provides that sitters are not treated as employees by reason of section 3506 of the Code, shall be deemed to be self-employed for purposes of the tax on self-employment income imposed by section 1401.

HOLDING

The babysitters engaged by the agency in Rev. Rul. 74-414 to perform sitting services for its clients are not treated as employees of the agency for federal employment tax purposes with respect to remuneration received by them after December 31, 1974. However, they are self-employed for purposes of the tax on self-employment income imposed by section 1401 of the Code with respect to remuneration received after that date.

Since the agency in Rev. Rul. 56-502 receives the entire amount of the charges for the domestic services performed by the individuals, retains a percentage, and pays the difference to the individuals, individuals performing sitting services remain the employees of the agency under the facts of that revenue ruling and are not affected by the provisions of section 3506 of the Code.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 74-414 is revoked, effective with respect to remuneration received by the sitters after December 31, 1974.

Rev. Rul. 56-502 is modified to state that the general rule set forth in that ruling only applies to sitting services if the agency pays the sitters directly.

The clarification of Rev. Rul. 56-502, effective with respect to remuneration for calendar quarters beginning after August 26, 1974, remains in effect.

Estimated tax; beneficiary of farming trust. Income to a beneficiary who receives more than two-thirds of the beneficiary's yearly gross income from a trust that is engaged solely in the business of farming is considered to be gross income from farming for estimated tax purposes; Rev. Rul. 63-26 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-366

ISSUE

Is income to a beneficiary from a trust that is engaged in the business of farming considered to be gross income from farming to the beneficiary for estimated tax purposes?

FACTS

A is the beneficiary of a trust described in section 651 of the Internal Revenue Code that is engaged solely in the business of farming. A does not participate in the operation or management of the farm. For 1978, more than two-thirds of A's gross income was attributable to payments from the trust. A is a calendar year taxpayer.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 652(a) of the Code provides that beneficiaries of trusts must include in income the amount required to be distributed to them whether or not distributed.

Section 652(b) of the Code provides that the amounts distributed to the beneficiary shall have the same character in the hands of the beneficiary as in the hands of the trust.

Section 6015(f)(1) of the Code and the regulations thereunder provide that if an individual referred to in section 6073(b) files a return for the taxable year for which the declaration is required on or before March 1 of the succeeding taxable year, and pays in full at the time of filing the amount computed on the return as payable, such return shall be considered a declaration of estimated tax.

Section 6073(b) of the Code concerns individuals whose estimated gross income from farming or fishing for the taxable year is at least two-thirds of their estimated gross income from all sources for the taxable year.

Section 1.6073-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that estimated gross income from farming is the estimated income from oyster farming, the cultivation of the soil, the raising or harvesting of any agricultural or horticultural commodities and the raising of livestock, bees, or poultry. The regulation also provides that the requisite gross income from farming must be derived from the operations of a stock, dairy, poultry, fruit, or truck farm, or plantation, ranch, nursery, range, orchard, or oyster bed. If an individual receives for the use of the land income in the form of a share of the crops produced thereon, such income is from farming.

The legilsative history of section 60(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939, the predecessor of section 6073(b) of the 1954 Code, indicates that it was created in recognition of the difficulty of accurately estimating early in the tax year the amount of income derived from farm operations since unexpected crop failures and market prices may have a drastic bearing on the result of farming operations. See H. Rep. No. 78-401, 78th Cong., 1st Sess. 36 (1943) 1943 C.B. 1283, 1310. The income of a beneficiary of a trust described in section 651 that is engaged in farming is as variable and as difficult to estimate as that of a person actively involved in farming operations.

Under Section 652(b) of the Code, income from farming to a trust described in section 651 is considered income from farming to the trust's beneficiary.

Rev. Rul. 63-26, 1963-1 C.B. 295, concerns whether gains from the sale of livestock held for draft, breeding, or dairy purposes, and gains from the sale of farm land and depreciable farm equipment constitute gross income from farming for purposes of section 6073(b) of the Code. In resolving these questions the ruling appropriately referred to the definition contained in section 1.175-5(a)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations. However, since section 175 and section 6073(b) have different objectives, the definition of gross income from farming for purposes of section 175 will not, in all instances, apply for purposes of section 6073(b). Accordingly, Rev. Rul. 63-26 is modified to remove the implication that the same meaning is attributable to that term in interpreting both section 175 and section 6073(b).

HOLDING

Income to a beneficiary from a trust that is engaged in the business of farming is considered to be gross income from farming to the beneficiary for estimated tax purposes.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Obsolete rulings. Certain post-1952 rulings dealing with engineering and corporate matters, including reorganizations, are declared obsolete.

Rev. Rul. 80-367

Rev. Proc. 67-6, 1967-1 C.B. 576, anounced a program for the review of rulings published before 1953 with the immediate objective of identifying and publishing lists of those rulings that, although not specifically revoked or suspended, are not considered determinative with respect to future transactions.

Consistent with the objectives of that program, the Internal Revenue Service has undertaken a review of certain rulings that were published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin after 1952. The purpose of this revenue ruling is to publish a list of post 1952 rulings dealing with engineering and corporate matters, including reorganizations that, although not specifically revoked or suspended, are not considered determinative with respect to future transactions because (1) the applicable statutory provisions have been changed or repealed; (2) the ruling position is specifically covered by statute, regulations, or a subsequent published position; or (3) the facts set forth no longer exist or are not sufficient to permit application to the current statute.

Accordingly, the rulings listed below are declared obsolete.

The purpose of this declaration of obsolescence is to make clear to all concerned that the above-listed rulings are not determinative with respect to future transactions. It is not the purpose of this revenue ruling to determine their applicability to past transactions.

Other rulings published after 1952 relating to reorganization, corporate and engineering matters will continue to be reviewed to ascertain those that are inapplicable to future transactions. Therefore, failure to include any particular ruling in the above list should not be construed as an indication that the ruling necessarily is determinative with respect to future transactions.

ations by Hon. Clement J. Zablocki, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

[6] On July 24, 1980, the Subcommittee on International Operations held an open hearing on H.R. 7085 during which testimony was received from Hon. Ben H. Read, Under Secretary of State for Management; Maj. Gen. R. Dean Tice, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Military and Personnel Policy; and Louisa L. Kennedy, spokesperson for FLAG (Family Liaison Action Group), which is composed of families and relatives of the hostages being held in Iran.

The subcommittee held an open markup session on September 3 on the legislation and reported to the full committee, H.R. 7085, as amended. On September 10 the full committee met in open session to consider the bill and ordered it favorably reported, as amended, by voice vote, a quorum being present.

PURPOSE

The purpose of the legislation, as amended, is to provide certain relief benefits to U.S. hostages in Iran and their families, as well as to U.S. Government employees in future hostage situations. The benefits provided would apply to civilian and military employees of the U.S. Government and are based on those benefits available to U.S. military prisoners of war from the Vietnam era. The benefits include the following: (1) establishment of a special interest-bearing savings fund for deposit of hostages' salaries; (2) reimbursement for expenses of family members, spouses, dependents, or the hostages for medical and health care which are incurred because of the ordeal; (3) protection of civilian Government employees from civil suit while they are in a missing status; (4) educational benefits for the spouse and dependent children for the duration of the hostile action against the United States, except in certain circumstances where the benefits could be extended; (5) educational benefits, under special circumstances, for the hostages themselves; (6) educational benefits for the spouse and dependent children of a hostage should the hostage die while being held hostage; (7) exemption from taxes on compensation received while a military or civilian Government employee is a hostage or missing as a result of a hostile action abroad against the United States; (8) complete income tax exclusion for income received by an employee who dies as a result of a hostile action; and (9) clarification of authority to allow the spouse of a hostage to file a joint tax return and to defer payment of certain taxes for up to 180 days after the return of a hostage or missing military or civilian employee.

BACKGROUND AND COMMITTEE COMMENT

H.R. 7085 was introduced on April 17, 1980, the 166th day of captivity of American citizens in Iran. At this writing, the hostages have been held 321 days.

This legislation is intended as an expression of the Nation's recognition of the difficulties faced by those held hostage as a result of their Government service. While such legislation has been enacted in the past for those in the military service, the Congress has not had reason until today to expand such protection to civilians in Government service. The benefits contained in H.R. 7085, as amended, are based on those which were given to POW's as a result of the Vietnam [7] war. Some of those benefits are still in effect and thus give the military who are being held hostage some relief, but the civilian Government employees have no such relief for themselves or their families.

Despite intensive diplomatic efforts of our Government, U.S. Government personnel continue to be held in Iran in gross violation of international law. These hostages have been incarcerated cruelly and unjustly since November 4, 1979. In addition to the prisoners' intolerable situation, the families of these individuals have also undergone severe mental, and in some cases financial, strain due to this forced separation.

The Congress must act now to alleviate, to the extent possible, the burdens of the hostages and their families and to make certain that all necessary assistance is provided upon their return home. It must assure that any assistance these families require is readily available.

The executive branch has suggested that the benefits contained in the legislation be temporary to permit further study before permanent legislation is proposed.

The committee feels that the problems dealt with in H.R. 7085 have been sufficiently studied in the 10 months that our hostages have been held in Iran. The legislation has been written to apply to hostage situations, generally, as well as to the Iran problem specifically. The authorities are available to be used as needed, and can certainly be amended at a later date if the need arises. The important point now is to insure that protections are in place for individuals caught in any future hostage situation.

The recent attacks on the U.S. Ambassador in Lebanon and on the U.S. Embassy in El Salvador underline the increasingly hostile environment in which U.S. personnel serve and, therefore, the increased likelihood of additional hostage situations. Experience with the problems confronting American POW's in the past, coupled with the more recent hostage situations in Latin America and Iran, provide sufficient background upon which to formulate permanent legislation Permanent legislation would avoid unnecessary delays in future situations and enable the provision of benefits as they are needed by the hostage and hostage family rather than at a later date.

The benefits provided by H.R. 7085, as amended, such as access to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act, which has been in effect for the military for over 40 years, are not extraordinary. The legislation has also been written to give the President sufficient discretion to adjust to the vagaries of any future case.

The committee feels that legislation is needed which will be effective not only after a hostage situation is over, but also during the period of captivity, since the hostages' families are affected from the beginning. The committee is therefore convinced that permanent legislation is the desirable course to follow.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF THE BILL AS AMENDED

SHORT TITLE

The short title of H.R. 7085 is the Hostage Relief Act of 1980.

[11] TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO THE INTERNAL REVENUE OF 1954

Title II contains amendments to the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 which would provide certain tax benefits to hostages or persons missing as a result of hostile action against the United States. The committee did not consider this title of the legislation since it falls within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means. However, a summary of the provisions is included here in order to provide a complete analysis of the bill.

Section 201—Exemption from Income Taxes

Section 201 of H.R. 7085 would add a new subsection (e) to section 112 of the Internal Revenue Code regarding certain combat pay of members of the Armed Forces.

New subsection (e)(1) would exempt from gross income all compensation received for active service as a Government employee during any month the employee was in a missing status as a result of a hostile action against the United States in a foreign area. It would also exempt from gross income compensation received for any month during any part of which such employee was hospitalized as a result of such hostile action, but within 2 years of the date of termination of the hostile action.

Subsection (e)(2)(A) defines "hostile action against the United States" as an action abroad which is directed against the United States that occurs on or after November 1, 1979, which the Secretary of State identifies for this purpose in a letter published in the Federal Register.

Subsection (e)(2)(B) defines "Federal employee" to include any person who is an employee, whether direct or indirect, of any agency or instrumentality of the United States. The term would include any person whose presence abroad is for the purpose of implementing a federally funded program as determined by the Secretary of State.

Section 202—Income Taxes on Government Employees on Death

Section 202 amends section 692 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 by adding a new subsection relating to foreign hostile actions.

New subsection 692 (c)(1) provides for exclusion from payment of federal income tax if a Government employee should die as a result of injuries sustained during a hostile action against the United States. Under subsection 692 (c)(1)(A), this exclusion would be effective only for income received during the year of death and during any prior year the Government employee first entered into a missing status as a result of such hostile action.

Subsection 692(c)(1)(B) stipulates that any unpaid tax (including interest, additions to the tax, and additional amounts) will not be assessed, that any assessment will be voided, and that any tax collected will be credited or refunded as an overpayment.

The subsection also provides that the date of death of the employee shall be determined under 5 U.S.C. 5565 (agency review), but that the provisions shall not apply for any taxable year beginning more than 2 years after the date of termination of the hostile action.

Subsection 692(c)(2) defines "active service", "employee", and "hostile action against the United States" for the purposes of the section.

[12] Section 203—Joint Return Where Individual is in a Missing Status

Section 203 amends section 6013(f)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to permit an individual otherwise entitled to file a joint return to file such a return if the individual's spouse is in a missing status as a result of a hostile action against the United States.

Section 204—Federal Tax Deferment

Section 204 would amend section 7508(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to include within that section U.S. citizens or resident aliens who are in a missing status because of a hostile action against the United States or who are hospitalized outside the United States because of such hostile action. Specifically, section 7508 (a) relates to exemptions from time deadline for filing tax returns in meeting other time requirements relating to tax liability.

Section 205—Applicability to all Teheran Hostages

Section 205 would make the bill's amendments to the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 applicable to all citizens and resident aliens of the United States held hostage in Iran, as determined by the Secretary of State, at any time during November 1979, whether or not they are Federal employees. The exemptions would apply only to those who file an income tax return for the period in question.

Section 206—Effective Date

Section 206 provides that the title II tax provisions shall apply to taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1979.

HOSTAGE RELIEF ACT OF 1980

SEPTEMBER 19, 1980

Mr. ULLMAN, from the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted the following report to accompany H.R. 7085[1] which on April 17, 1980, was referred jointly to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, and the Committee on Ways and Means.

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 7085) to amend title 5 of the United States Code and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to provide certain benefits to individuals held hostage in Iran and to similarly situated individuals, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with amendments and recommend that the bill as amended do pass.

The amendment to the text of the bill is shown in the reported bill, with the matter proposed to be stricken shown in linetype and the matter proposed to be inserted shown in italic type.

The title of the bill is amended to conform to the amendment to the text of the bill.

[2] I. SUMMARY

The tax provisions of the bill provide tax relief to the American hostages in Iran and other American hostages. Federal employees held hostage could exclude from income their Federal compensation. If death results from captivity, all income tax liability of that individual from the initial year of captivity to the year of death would be forgiven. The spouse of a hostage would be permitted to file a joint return. Various deadlines under the tax laws would be postponed during the period of captivity for 180 days thereafter. Finally, the staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation is directed to make a study of this area.

II. EXPLANATION OF THE BILL

Tax Treatment of Hostages

Present law

Gross income does not include certain combat pay of members of the Armed Forces. (The exclusion is limited to $500 monthly in the case of officers.) Also, if a member of the Armed Forces dies as a result of service in a combat zone, he is not subject to Federal income tax on any of his income beginning with the first year he served in the combat zone and ending with the year of his death. Comparable rules do not apply to civilian employees.

If a member of the Armed Forces serves in a combat zone or is hospitalized as a result of that service, he generally is excused from meeting a variety of deadlines under the Internal Revenue Code for the period of service or hospitalization and 180 days thereafter.

More limited relief is provided for other Federal employees. Generally, if such an individual is in a missing status, no return need be filed, and no tax need be paid, until three months and fifteen days following the cessation of his missing status. (Other deadlines, however, are not waived.) The Internal Revenue Service has announced that this provision will apply in the case of the American hostages in Iran.

Ordinarily, if married individuals elect to file a joint return rather than separate returns, the return must actually be signed by both spouses. The Internal Revenue Service has announced that it will accept joint returns signed by only one spouse if the other is being held in Iran.

Reasons for change

[The committee believes that it is important to extend tax relief to] the American hostages in Iran and their families beyond the limited relief which is permitted by current law. In many ways, the ordeal suffered by these hostages is comparable to that of members of Armed Forces in combat zones. The committee believes that, at least insofar as matters within its jurisdiction are involved, comparable treatment is warranted. The relief provided by the committee's bill would also extend to other Americans being held hostage.

[3] At the same time, the committee has made the provisions of the bill temporary, rather than permanent, to facilitate a further review by the committee of the issues presented. While no one disputes the need to provide relief to the American hostages in Iran, the committee believes that permanent legislation should be drawn to deal more clearly with a number of issues should similar incidents arise in the future. Accordingly, the committee bill requires the staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation to conduct a study and to report its findings to the tax-writing committees of the Congress.

Explanation of provisions

Exclusion for compensation

Under the bill, gross income of an individual who was at any time an American hostage would not include compensation from the Federal Government received for any month during any part of which the individual was in captive status or hospitalized as a result of captive status.

For purposes of the tax provisions of the bill, the term "American hostage" means any individual who is placed in a captive status during the "hostage period" while (1) in the civil service or the uniformed services of the United States, or (2) a citizen or resident alien of the United States rendering personal service to the United States abroad similar to the service of a civil officer or employee of the United States (as determined by the Secretary of State). The hostage period began on November 4, 1979. It will end on the earlier of two dates: the date the President specifies, by Executive order, as the date on which all citizens and resident aliens of the United States who are placed in a captive status due to the seizure of the United States Embassy in Iran have been returned to the United States or otherwise accounted for, or December 31, 1981. An individual is in captive status if he is in a missing status arising because of a hostile action abroad which is directed against the United States during the hostage period. An individual is in missing status if he is in that status under the appropriate provision of law (5 U.S.C. § 5561 (5) for civilian Federal employees; 37 U.S.C. § 551 (2) for uniformed Federal employees) or, in the case of other individuals, as determined by the State Department.

Because the hostages held in Iran were placed in a captive status during the hostage period, they could continue to exclude income under this provision so long as they remain in captive status even in the event that that status extended beyond December 31, 1981.

Death resulting from captive status

In the case of an individual who was at any time an American hostage and who dies as a result of injury or disease or physical or mental disability incurred or aggravated while that individual was in captive status, the bill provides that any income taxes imposed by the Code would not apply with respect to the taxable year in which the individual dies or any prior taxable year ending on or after the first day the individual was in captive status. Moreover, if there were any unpaid income tax liability of the individual from years prior to captivity, it would be forgiven. These provisions would not apply, however, unless death occurred within two years after the individual ceased to be in captive status.

[4] Joint returns

The bill provides that, during the period an American hostage is in captive status, the individual's spouse may elect to file a joint return for any taxable year which begins on or before the day which is 2 years after the date on which the hostage period ends, and for which that spouse is otherwise entitled to file a joint return.

Postponement of deadlines

In the case of any individual who was at any time an American hostage, any period during which he was in captive status (and any period during which he was outside the United States and hospitalized as a result of captive status), and the next 180 days thereafter, would be disregarded in determining in respect of any tax liability (including any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to the tax) of that individual, whether any of a variety of acts was performed within the time prescribed. These include the time for filing returns, paying tax, filing a refund claim, and filing suit in the Tax Court or other courts. Also, this time period is to be ignored in determining the amount of any credit or refund (including interest).

The relief afforded by this provision also will apply to the spouse of any individual entitled to its benefits. However, the relief to the spouse will not apply for any taxable year beginning more than 2 years after the date on which the hostage period ends.

Also, relief under this provision does not apply in certain limited situations, such as certain situations when collection is in jeopardy.

Special rules

The bill makes it clear that tax provisions apply to any citizen or resident alien of the United States who was held hostage in Tehran at any time during November 1979, whether or not the individual was in the civil or uniformed services of the United States or was performing similar services. If such an individual was not in the civil or uniformed services, he may exclude under section 201 of the bill his earned income while captive or hospitalized as a result of captivity, but not in excess of the monthly equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay for Level V of the Executive Schedule.

It is also provided that the tax portions of the bill will apply to Richard Starr, a Peace Corps volunteer, for the period from November 4, 1979, through February 10, 1980.

The bill provides that an individual is to be treated as hospitalized as a result of captive status if that individual is hospitalized as a result of injury or disease or physical or mental disability incurred or aggravated while that individual was in captive status. However, hospitalization would be taken into account for this purpose only if it occurs on or before the day which is 2 years after the date on which the individual's captive status ends (or, if earlier, the date on which the hostage period ends), or is part of a continuous period of hospitalization which began on or before the earlier of those dates. Thus, for example, if the hostage period ends on December 31, 1981, the hospitalization would have to begin prior to January 1, 1984.

It is also provided that "compensation" which may be excluded under section 201 of the bill does not include any amount received as an annuity or as retirement pay.

[5] Study by Joint Committee staff

The bill requires the Chief of Staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation to study all aspects of the tax treatment of citizens and resident aliens of the United States who are taken hostage or are otherwise placed in a missing status. The Chief of Staff is to report before July 1, 1981, the results of the study to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

Effective date

The tax provisions of the bill are effective for all years affected by the legislation.

Revenue effect

It is estimated that the tax provisions of the bill will decrease receipts by less than $1 million annually.

"(ii) the death of the person acquiring the property in the first disposition, and any transfer thereafter shall not be treated as a second disposition.

"(7) Exception where tax avoidance not a principal purpose.—This subsection shall not apply to a second disposition (and any transfer thereafter) if it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that neither the first disposition nor the second disposition had as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income tax.

"(8) Extension of statute of limitations.—The period for assessing a deficiency with respect to a first disposition (to the extent such deficiency is attributable to the application of this subsection) shall not expire before the day which is 2 years after the date on which the person making the first disposition furnishes (in such manner as the Secretary may be regulations prescribe) a notice that there was a second disposition of the property to which this subsection may have applied. Such deficiency may be assessed notwithstanding the provisions of any law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment.

"(f) Definitions and Special Rules.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) Related person. — Except for purpose of subsections (g) and (h), the term 'related person' means a person whose stock would be attributed under section 318(a) (other than paragraph (4) thereof) to the person first disposing of the property.

"(2) Exception where tax avoidance not a principal purpose.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply if it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the disposition did not have as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income tax.

"(h) Use of Installment Method by Shareholders in Section 337 Liquidations.—

"(1) Receipt of obligations not treated as receipt of payment.—

"(A) In general.—If, in connection with a liquidation to which section 337 applies, in a transaction to which section 331 applies the shareholder receives (in exchange for the shareholder's stock) an installment obligation acquired in respect of a sale or exchange by the corporation during the 12-month period set forth in section 337(a), then, for purposes of this section, the receipt of payments under such obligation (but not the receipt of such obligation) by the shareholder shall be treated as the receipt of payment for the stock.

"(B) Obligations attributable to sale of inventory must result from bulk sale.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to an installment obligation is also described in section 337 (b)(2)(B).

"(C) Special rule where obligor and shareholder are related persons.—If the obligor of any installment obligation and the shareholder are related persons (within the meaning of section 1239(b)), to the extent such installment obligation is attributable to the disposition by the corporation of depreciable property—

"(i) subparagraph (A) shall not apply to such obligation, and

"(ii) for purposes of this title, all payments to be received by the shareholder shall be deemed received in the year the shareholder receives the obligation.

"(D) Coordination with subsection (e)(1)(A).—For purposes of subsection (e)(1)(A), disposition of property by the corporation shall be treated also as disposition of such property by the shareholder.

"(E) Sales by liquidating subsidiary.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), in any case to which section 337(c)(3) applies, an obligation acquired in respect of a sale or exchange by the selling corporation shall be treated as so acquired by the corporation distributing the obligation to the shareholder.

"(2) Distributions received in more than 1 taxable year of shareholder.—If—

"(A) paragraph (1) applies with respect to any installment obligation received by a shareholder from a corporation, and

"(B) by reason of the liquidation such shareholder receives property in more than 1 taxable year, then, on completion of the liquidation, basis previously allocated to property so received shall be reallocated for all such taxable years so that the shareholder's basis in the stock of the corporation is properly allocated among all property received by such shareholder in such liquidation.

"(i) Regulations.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(2) Selling price not readily ascertainable.—The regulations prescribed under paragraph (1) shall include regulation providing for ratable basis recovery in transactions where the gross profit or the total contract price (or both) cannot be readily ascertained.

"Sec. 453A. Installment Method for Dealers in Personal Property

"(a) General Rule.—

"(1) In general.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, a person who regularly sells or otherwise disposes of personal property on the installment plan may return as income therefrom in any taxable year that proportion of the installment payments actually received in that year which the gross profit, realized or to be realized when payment is completed, bears to the total contract price.

"(2) Total contract price.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the total contract price of all sales of personal property on the installment plan includes the amount of carrying charges or interest which is determined with respect to such sales and is added on the books of account of the seller to the established cash selling price of such property. This paragraph shall not apply with respect to sales of personal property under a revolving credit type plan.

"(b) Carrying Charges Not Included in Total Contract Price.—If the carrying charges or interest with respect to sales of personal property, the income from which is returned under subsection (a)(1), is not included in the total contract price, payments received with respect to such sales shall be treated as applying first against such carrying charges or interest.

"Sec. 153B. Gain or Loss Disposition of Installment Obligations

"(a) General Rule.—If an installment obligation is satisfied at other than its face value or distributed, transmitted, sold, or otherwise disposed of, gain or loss shall result to the extent of the difference between the basis of the obligation and—

"(1) the amount realized, in the case of satisfaction at other than face value or a sale or exchange, or any gain or loss so resulting shall be considered as resulting from the sale or exchange of the property in respect of which the installment obligation was received.

"(2) the fair market value of the obligation at the time of distribution, transmission, or disposition otherwise than by sale or exchange.

"b) Basis of Obligation.—The basis of an installment obligation shall be the excess of the face value of the obligation over an amount equal to the income which would be returnable were the obligation satisfied in full.

"(c) Special Rule for Transmission at Death.—Except as provided in section 691 (relating to recipients of income in respect of decedents), this section shall not apply to the transmission of installment obligations at death.

"(d) Effect of Distribution in Certain Liquidations.—

"(1) Liquidations to which section 332 applies.—If—

"(A) an installment obligation is distributed in a liquidation to which section 332 (relating to complete liquidations of subsidiaries) applies, and

"(B) the basis of such obligation in the hands of the distributee is determined under section 334(b)(1), then no gain or loss with respect to the distribution of such obligation shall be recognized by the distributing corporation.

"(2) Liquidations to Which Section 337 Applies.—If—

"(A) an installment obligation is distributed by a corporation in the course of a liquidation, and

"(B) under section 337 (relating to gain or loss on sales or exchanges in connection with certain liquidations) no gain or the loss would have been recognized to the corporation if the corporation had sold or exchanged such installment obligation on the day of such distribution.

then no gain or loss shall be recognized to such corporation by reason of such distribution. The preceding sentence shall not apply to the extent that under paragraph (1) gain to the distributing corporation would be considered as gain to which section 341(f), 617(d)(1), 1245(a), 1250(a), 1251(c), 1252(a), or 1254(a) applies.

"(e) Life Insurance Companies.—

"(1) In general.—In the case of a disposition of an installment obligation by any person other than a life insurance company (as defined in section 801(a)) to such an insurance company or to a partnership of which such an insurance company is a partner, no provision of this subtitle providing for the nonrecognition of gain shall apply with respect to any gain resulting under subsection (a). If a corporation which is a life insurance company for the taxable year was (for the preceding taxable year) a corporation which was not a life insurance company, such corporation shall, for purposes of this subsection and subsection (a), be treated as having transferred to a life insurance company, on the last day of the preceding taxable year, all installment obligations which it held on such last day. A partnership of which a life insurance company becomes a partner shall, for purposes of this subsection and subsection (a), be treated as having transferred to a life insurance company, on the last day of the preceding taxable year of such partnership, all installment obligations which it holds at the time such insurance company becomes a partner.

"(2) Special rule where life insurance company elects to treat income as investment income.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any transfer or deemed transfer of an installment obligation if the life insurance company elects (at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe) to determine its life insurance company taxable income—

"(A) by returning the income on such installment obligation under the installment method prescribed in section 453, and

"(B) if such income would not otherwise be returnable as an item referred to in section 804(b) or as long-term capital gain, as if the income on such obligations were income specified in section 804(b).

"(f) Obligation Becomes Unenforceable.—For purposes of this section, if any installment obligation is canceled or otherwise becomes unenforceable—

"(1) the obligation shall be treated as if it were disposed of in a transaction other than a sale or exchange, and

"(2) if the obligor and obligee are related persons (within the meaning of section 453(f)(1)), the fair market value of the obligation shall be treated as not less than its face amount."

INSTALLMENT SALES REVISION ACT OF 1980

September 26 (legislative day, June 12), 1980.

Mr. Long, from the Committee on Finance, submitted the following report to accompany H.R. 6883.[1]

The Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 6883) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to revise the rules relates to certain installment sales, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon with an amendment and recommends that the bill as amended do pass.

The amendment is shown in the text of the bill in italic.

House bill.—H.R. 6883, as it passed the House, amends the rules for reporting gains under the installment method for sales of real property and casual sales of personal property. The bill would (1) make structural improvements to these provisions, (2) eliminate the 30-percent initial payment limitation, (3) eliminate the requirement that an eligible sale be for two or more payments, (4) eliminate the selling price requirement for nondealer sales of personal property, (5) provide that installment reporting automatically applies to a deferred payment sale unless the taxpayer elects otherwise, (6) prescribe special rules for sales to certain related parties, (7) provide that the receipt of like-kind property in connection with an installment sale will not accelerate recognition of gain, (8) provide nonrecognition treatment for distributions of installment obligations received in connection with a 12-month corporate liquidation, (9) permit installment method reporting for sales for a contingent selling price, (10) clarify the treatment of gift cancellations of an installment obligation, (11) clarify the treatment of an installment obligation which is cancelled at the death of the seller, and (12) permit an executor or beneficiary to succeed the decedent for purposes of qualifying for nonrecognition treatment if real property sold by the decedent is reacquired in cancellation of an installment obligation.

[2] Committee amendment. — The committee amended the bill to (1) clarify and coordinate the provisions relating to sales of depreciable property between closely related parties, (2) clarify that a third party guarantee (including a standby letter of credit) securing a deferred payment sale will not constitute payment to the seller, (3) eliminate any potential for double taxation when a dealer changes from an accrual method of accounting for sales to the installment method of reporting, (4) provide that existing special disposition rules for transfers of installment obligations to a life insurance company will not apply if the company reports any remaining gain as taxable investment income when it receives payments on the obligation, and (5) make the repeal of the 30-percent initial payment and two or more payment requirements effective for transactions occurring in taxable years ending after the date of enactment rather than for transactions occurring after that date.

[3] I. SUMMARY

The bill (H.R. 6883) amends the rules for reporting gain under the installment method for sales of real property and casual sales of personal property, the rules for electing the installment method by an accrual basis taxpayer, and the special disposition rules for obligations transferred to a life insurance company.

The bill makes the following changes:

(1) Structural improvements. — Under present law, a single provision (Code sec. 453) prescribes rules for installment method reporting for dealers in personal property, for sales of real property and nondealer personal property, and special disposition rules. Under the bill, the basic rules for nondealer transactions will be contained in one Code section (sec. 453), the rules for dealer transactions will be contained in another section (sec. 453A), and generally applicable installment obligation disposition rules will be contained in a third section (sec. 453B).

(2) Initial payment limitation. — The bill eliminates the requirement that no more than 30 percent of the selling price be received in the taxable year of sale to qualify for installment sale reporting for gains from sales of realty and nondealer personal property.

(3) Two-payment rule. — The bill eliminates the requirement that a deferred payment sale be for two or more payments. Thus, a sale will be eligible for installment reporting even if the purchase price is to be paid in a single lump sum amount in a year subsequent to the taxable year in which the sale is made.

(4) Selling price requirements. — The bill eliminates the requirement that the selling price for casual sales of personal property must exceed $1,000 to qualify for installment sale reporting.

(5) Election. — The bill eliminates the present law requirement that the installment method must be elected for reporting gains from sales of realty and nondealer personal property. Instead, the provision will automatically apply to a qualified sale unless the taxpayer elects not to have the provision apply with respect to a deferred payment sale.

(6) Related party sales. — The bill prescribes special rules for situations involving installment sales to certain related parties who also dispose of the property and for situations involving installment sales of depreciable property between a taxpayer and his spouse or certain 80-percent owned corporations or partnerships.

Sales other than sales of depreciable property between certain closely-related parties.—Under the bill, the amount realized upon a resale by the related party installment purchaser will trigger recognition of gain by the initial seller, based on his gross profit ratio, only to the extent the amount realized from the second disposition exceeds actual payments made under the installment sale. Thus, acceleration of recognition of the installment gain from the first sale will generally result only to the extent additional cash and other property [4] flows into the related group as a result of a second disposition of the property.

The excess of any amount realized from resales over payment received on the first sale as of the end of a taxable year will be taken into account. If, under these rules, a resale results in the recognition of gain to the initial seller, subsequent payments actually received by that seller will be recovered tax-free until they equal the amount realized from the resale which resulted in the acceleration of recognition of gain.

In the case of property other than marketable stock and securities, the resale rule will apply only with respect to second dispositions occurring within 2 years of the initial installment sale. In the case of marketable stock and securities, the resale rule will apply without a time limit for resales occurring before the installment obligation is satisfied.

The bill also contains several exceptions to the application of these rules. Since gain from the sale of a corporation's treasury stock is nontaxable and therefore its basis in the stock is irrelevant, the related party rule will not apply to any sale or exchange of stock to the issuing corporation. In addition, there generally will be no acceleration of recognition of gain as a result of a second disposition which is an involuntary conversion of the property or which occurs after the death of the installment seller or purchaser. Finally, the resale rules will not apply in any case where it is established to the satisfaction of the Internal Revenue Service that none of the dispositions had as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income taxes.

For purposes of the related party rules, the bill adopts a definition of related parties which will include spouses, children, grandchildren, and parents but will exclude brothers and sisters. It is to be understood that the Internal Revenue Service is not precluded from asserting the proper tax treatment to transactions that are shams. A corporation will be considered to be related to another taxpayer if stock of another corporation which is or might be owned by it would be treated as owned by the taxpayer under the general corporate attribution rules. Generally, a related corporation will be one in which a person directly or indirectly owned 50 percent or more in value of the stock in the corporation. Also for this purpose, the principles of the general corporate stock ownership attribution rules will apply in determining the related party status of partnerships, trusts, and estates.

Sales of depreciable property between certain closely-related parties.—Under the bill, the accrual method of accounting in effect is required for deferred payment sales of depreciable property between certain closely-related parties.

In general, this rule is intended to deter transactions which are structured in such a way as to give the related purchaser the benefit of depreciation deductions (measured from a stepped-up basis) prior to the time the seller is required to include in income the corresponding gain on the sale. For these transactions the deferred payments will be deemed to be received in the taxable year in which the sale occurs.

This special rule will apply only to deferred payment sales between a taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse, the taxpayer and a partnership [5] or corporation which is 80-percent owned by the taxpayer and/or the taxpayer's spouse, and between partnerships and corporations which are 80-percent owned by the taxpayer and/or the taxpayer's spouse.

The rule will not apply if it is established to the satisfaction of the Internal Revenue Service that the sale did not have as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income taxes. Thus, the rule will not apply with respect to a sale incident to a divorce or separation or generally when no significant tax deferral benefits will be derived from the sale.

(7) Treatment of third party guarantee.—Under the bill, a third party guarantee (including a standby letter of credit) used for security of a deferred payment sale will not be treated as payment received on an installment obligation.

(8) Like-kind exchanges.—The bill provides that the receipt of like-kind property in connection with a disposition will not be taken into account in determining gain recognized for installment sale reporting purposes. Under the present Internal Revenue Service position, the receipt of like-kind property results in the recognition of installment gain before cash is received by the taxpayer because the value of such property is treated as a payment received. The bill reverses this rule.

(9) Installment obligations distributed in a corporation liquidation.—In general, the bill provides nonrecognition of gain treatment for a shareholder who receives installment obligations as liquidating distributions from a corporation liquidating within 12 months of adoption of a plan of complete liquidation. In general, this rule will apply to obligations arising from sales by a corporation during the 12-month period. Obligations from the sale of inventory will qualify only if the inventory of that trade or business is sold in bulk. The gain realized by the shareholder on his stock will be recognized as payments are received on the installment obligation. Thus, in most significant aspects, the tax consequences to a shareholder will be essentially the same whether the corporation sells its assets and then distributes installment obligations in complete liquidation or the shareholder makes an installment sale of the stock.

Under the bill, nonrecognition treatment will not be available to the extent the obligation is attributable to sales of depreciable property by the corporation if the installment purchaser is either the shareholder-distributee's spouse, or a corporation or a partnership which is 80-percent owned by the shareholder-distributee and/or his spouse.

(10) Sales subject to a contingency.—The bill permits installment method reporting for sales for a contingent selling price. Under present law, these sales are not eligible for installment reporting. In extending eligibility, the bill does not prescribe specific rules which would apply to every conceivable transaction. Rather, the bill provides that the specific rules will be prescribed under regulations.

However, it is intended that, for sales under which there is a stated maximum selling price, the regulations will permit basis recovery on the basis of a gross profit ratio determined by reference to the stated maximum selling price. In cases where the sales price is indefinite but payable over a fixed period of time, it is generally intended that the basis of the property sold would be recovered ratably over that fixed period. In cases where the selling price and payment period are both indefinite, it is intended that the regulations would permit ratable [6] basis recovery over some reasonable period of time. Also, in appropriate cases, it is intended that basis recovery would be permitted under an income forecast type method.

(11) Election of installment method by accrual method dealer.—Under the bill, an election of installment method reporting by an accrual method dealer would apply only to payments received from sales made on or after the effective date of the election and thereby eliminate the possibility of double taxation which exists under present law.

(12) Transfers of installment obligations to life insurance companies.—Under the bill, the special disposition rules for triggering the recognition of gain for obligations transferred to a life insurance company in an otherwise tax-free transfer will not apply if the transferee company elects to report any remaining gain as investment income as payments are received.

(13) Cancellation of installment obligation.—The bill makes it clear that the cancellation of an installment obligation is treated as a disposition of the obligation by the holder of the obligation.

(14) Bequest of obligation to obligor.—The bill provides that the installment obligation disposition rules cannot be avoided by the bequest of an obligation to the obliger.

(15) Foreclosure of real property sold on installment method by deceased taxpayer.—The bill provides that an executor or beneficiary who receives a secured installment obligation from a decedent will succeed the decedent for purposes of qualifying for nonrecognition treatment if the real property sold by the decedent is reacquired in cancellation of the obligation.

(16) Treatment of gain from sales of depreciable property between related parties.—Under the bill, the ordinary income characterization rules for sales of depreciable property between related parties would be revised to generally apply the usual corporate constructive ownership rules and to prescribe new rules for transactions with entities which are 80 percent controlled by a taxpayer and his spouse. For purposes of this provision, the attribution rules would be narrowed to exclude attribution from a family member other than the taxpayer's spouse.

(17) Effective dates.—In general, the bill is effective for sales, dispositions, cancellations, bequests, and reacquisitions of real property, as the case may be, occurring after the date of enactment. The provisions which eliminate the 30-percent initial payment and the two or more payments requirements are effective for transactions occurring in taxable years ending after the date of enactment. However, the related party installment sale rules apply to installment sales after May 14, 1980. The provision relating to the distribution of installment obligations in connection with a 12-month corporate liquidation apply with respect to installment obligations distributed after March 31, 1980.

(18) Revenue effects.—Due to the interaction between the provisions of this bill, revenue effects for each specific provision cannot be determined independently. It is estimated that on balance the provisions of this bill (except related party sales) will not have a significant revenue effect on budget receipts.

Due to the extensive litigation and controversy concerning the treatment of related party sales under present law, the revenue gain for the related party provision of the bill is indeterminant.

[7] II. EXPLANATION OF THE BILL

A. Installment Sales Generally (sec. 2 of the bill and sec. 453 of the Code)

Present law

Generally, under present law (Code sec. 453), income from a sale of property on the installment basis may be reported as the payments are received. If the installment method is elected for qualifying sales, the gain reported for any taxable year is the proportion of the installment payment received in that year which the gross profit, realized or to be realized when payment is completed, bears to the total contract price. In general, the contract price is the amount which will be paid to the seller.

The function of the installment method of reporting income is to permit the spreading of the income tax over the period during which payments of the sales price are received. Thus, the installment method alleviates possible liquidity problems which might arise from the bunching of gain in the year of sale when a portion of the selling price has not been actually received.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that present law would be simplified by making structural improvements to existing law so that the basic rules relating to nondealer transactions would be contained in one section of the Code, the basic rules relating to dealer transactions in another section, and the special rules relating to dispositions of installment obligations in a third section.

Explanation of provision

In general

Although the bill makes structural revisions of existing law and makes the specific changes described below, most of the basic concepts of existing law are continued. As under present law, the provisions relate to installment reporting of gains and do not affect the time for recognizing losses from the sale or exchange of property for deferred payments.

Except as otherwise provided for sales subject to a contingency or for sales to certain related persons, gain from an installment sale would continue to be recognized for any taxable year with respect to the payments received in the year in the same proportion as the gross profit from the sale bears to the total contract price. The payments taken into account as being received in a taxable year would not include the purchaser's obligation of future payment, whether dischargeable in money or other property (including foreign currency), unless that obligation is a bond or other evidence of indebtedness which is either payable on demand or has been issued by a corporation or government and is readily tradable.

[8] Structural improvements

Under present law, a single provision (Code sec. 453) prescribes rules for installment method reporting for dealers in personal property, for sales of real property and nondealer personal property, and special disposition rules. Under the bill, the rules for nondealer transactions are contained in one Code section (sec. 453), the rules for personal property dealer transactions are contained in another section (sec. 453A), and generally applicable installment obligation disposition rules are contained in a third section (sec. 453B).

Generally, in making these structural changes and certain language changes are intended to be made by the bill with respect to the provisions relating to installment sales by dealers in personal property. Except for an amendment relating to the election of the installment method by an accrual basis dealer, the substantive changes under the bill relate only to sales of realty and casual sales of personal property.

Under the bill, gain from the sale of property which is not required to be inventories by a farmer under his method of accounting will be eligible for installment method reporting as gain from a casual sale of personal property even though such property is held for sale by the farmer. The committee also intends that deferred payment sales to farmer cooperatives are to be eligible for installment reporting as under present law (Rev. Rul. 73-210, 1973-1 C.B. 211).

B. INITIAL PAYMENT LIMITATION (SEC. 2 OF THE BILL AND SEC. 453(B)(2) OF THE CODE)

Present law

Under present law, gain from the sale of realty or nondealer personal property may not be reported under the installment method if the payments received in the taxable year of sale exceed 30 percent of the selling price.

Reasons for change

A number of problems have arisen in connection with the 30-percent initial payment requirement which was designed to limit installment sale reporting to transactions where hardships might result from current imposition of tax on uncollected amounts. Some have argued that it is an arbitrary limitation which has unduly complicated and interfered with normal business transactions. In addition, it has been argued that the limitation has operated as a trap for the unwary. If a taxpayer fails to secure competent advice and inadvertently exceeds the 30-percent limitation, however slightly, the entire gain must be recognized in the year of sale. The limitation has produced an inordinate amount of litigation and confusion.

In applying the 30-percent limitation, the problem areas generally involve interpretations of the terms "selling price" and "payment." Where the imputed interest provision applies (Code sec. 483), the limitation may not be satisfied if the selling price is reduced by the amount required to be treated as unstated interest (Treas. reg. § 1.453(b)(2)). Thus, after reduction of the selling price for unstated interest, the payments received in the year of sale may exceed 30 percent of the selling price although the limitation appeared to be satisfied on the basis of the written sales agreement. A similar disqualification [9] can arise when the installment obligation is a corporate obligation issued at a discount because the amount treated as original issue discount is not included as part of the selling price (Treas. reg. § 1.453-1(b)(3)).

Another problem arises under present law in connection with the sale of property which is subject to an existing mortgage which is assumed by the installment buyer. Generally, the amount of the mortgage is taken into account as part of the selling price but is not taken into account for purposes of determining the contract price or the amount of payments received by the seller. However, to the extent the mortgage exceeds the seller's basis in the property, the excess is considered as a payment received and correspondingly is included in the contract amount. (Treas. reg. § 1.453-4(c)). The problem arising from this treatment does not involve its correctness but rather the inadvertent disqualification of the sale for installment method reporting for failing to take the amount of the mortgage in excess of basis into account for the 30-percent initial payment requirement. Where the taxpayers are cognizant of problems of this type, the 30-percent requirement has fostered ingenious "wraparound" mortgage arrangements to qualify for installment method reporting.[1]

Under the wraparound arrangement, the buyer does not assume the mortgage and agrees not to make direct payments to the mortgagee but agrees to make the payments to the seller who will continue to pay the mortgage debt. In one case, the wraparound technique was used by having the seller retain title to the property for a period of years so there would be no transfer of property "subject to" the existing mortgage.[2] If title passes in the year of sale, the Internal Revenue Service will treat the mortgage debt in excess of basis as a payment received in the year of the sale.[3] This issue is said to be another instance of the 30-percent initial payment rule fostering uncertainty and litigation.

Another problem area relates to the treatment of selling expenses when determining whether the mortgage assumed by the buyer exceeds the adjusted basis of the property sold. Under the regulations, commissions and selling expenses are taken into account as an offset to selling price for purposes of determining the gross profit from a sale by a nondealer (Treas. reg. § 1.453-1(b)), but do not reduce the amount of the payments, the total contract price, or the selling price (Treas. reg. § 1.453-4(c)). However, the Ninth Circuit has held that selling expenses are to be added to basis for this purpose.[4] The Internal Revenue Service has announced that it will not follow the Ninth Circuit's decision on the treatment of selling expenses.[5] Thus, this is another area where the 30-percent initial payment requirement may foster litigation and confusion.

Another problem area involves the case where the buyer pays some of the seller's obligations in the year of sale. The Service has ruled that, in the case of a casual sale of personal property, the assumption [10] and payment of secured and general unsecured liabilities by the purchaser will not be considered as a payment to the seller for installment sale reporting qualification purposes if the seller establishes that the liabilities were incurred in the ordinary course of business and not for purposes of avoiding the 30-percent initial payment limitation.[6] The avoidance test under the ruling would involve a subjective determination of motive. Thus, this is another area where the initial payment rule may foster litigation and confusion.

For these reasons, the committee believes that the 30-percent initial payment limitation should be repealed.

Explanation of provision

The bill eliminates the 30-percent initial payment limitation for reporting gain on the installment method from the disposition of real property or nondealer personal property.

C. Two-Payment Rule (sec. 2 of the bill and sec. 453 of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, it is the position of the Internal Revenue Service that a taxpayer may not elect to report income from the sale of real property on the installment method if the total purchase price is payable in a lump sum in a taxable year subsequent to the year of sale.[7] The same issue may arise with respect to casual sales of personal property. The rationale for the ruling is that the installment concept generally calls for two or more payments of the purchase price in two or more taxable years and that a single payment sale cannot be considered to be payable in installments. The courts have agreed with the Service's interpretation.[8]

Reasons for change

The two-payment rule is a trap for the unwary and results in different tax results for transactions that are substantially similar. For example, installment method reporting would be available for a taxpayer who sells for a modest down payment with the balance due in 5 years but would not be available for a taxpayer who receives no down payment with the entire balance due in 5 years. In these situations, the ability to pay income taxes from the sales proceeds is essentially the same. Thus, to the extent the rationale for installment method reporting is based on ability to pay concepts, both sales should qualify for installment reporting.

Accordingly, the committee believes that the two-payment requirement should be repealed.

Explanation of provision

The bill eliminates the requirement that a sale must be for two or more payments to qualify for installment method reporting. Thus, under the bill, income from the sale of qualifying property for a purchase price payable in a lump sum in a taxable year subsequent to the year of sale may be reported in the year in which payment is received.

[11] It is anticipated that the Treasury Department will prescribe regulations to extend a similar rule to deferred payment sales by dealers in personal property.

D. Selling Price Limitation for Casual Sales of Personal Property (sec. 2 of the bill and sec. 453(b)(1)(B) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, a casual sale of personal property must be for a selling price in excess of $1,000 to qualify for installment reporting.

Reasons for change

In certain situations, the selling price requirement may be difficult to apply because questions may arise as to whether there is a single sale of several items for more than $1,000, which satisfies the requirement, or a number of sales of individual items for $1,000 or less for each item. In addition, the committee believes that taxpayer compliance will be facilitated by repealing this requirement.

Explanation of provision

The bill eliminates the selling price requirement to qualify for installment reporting.[9]

E. Election of Installment Reporting (sec. 2 of the bill and new sec. 453(d) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, an election may be made to report gain from an installment sale on a timely filed return, a delinquent return, or on an amended return for the year of sale not barred by the statute of limitations, if the facts indicate no position inconsistent with the installment election had been taken with respect to the sale (Rev. Rul. 65-297, 1965-2 C.B. 152). If a return is filed which includes in gross income the entire gain from an installment sale, an amended return or claim for refund cannot be used to elect installment sale reporting for the sale because the election to report the gain in full is treated as a binding election not to report on the installment method.[10]

Reasons for change

The committee believes that the present law requirements for electing installment reporting may represent a trap for taxpayers who attempt an election which is invalid because of technical deficiencies. Further, the committee believes that present law creates a whip-saw problem for the Internal Revenue Service, e.g., where the taxpayer does not report gain from a sale for the year of sale but later attempts to retroactively elect installment treatment if the omission is discovered on audit, or, if the statute of limitations has run, contends that the full amount of gain should have been reported for the year of sale.

Explanation of provision

The bill eliminates the present law requirement that the installment method must be elected for reporting gains from sales of realty and nondealer personal property. Instead, installment reporting would [12] automatically apply to a qualified sale unless the taxpayer elects not to have the provision apply with respect to a deferred payment sale. Generally, the election not to have installment method reporting apply to a deferred payment sale must be made in the manner prescribed by regulations on or before the due date (including extensions of time for filing) for filing the income tax return for the year in which the sale occurs. It is anticipated that reporting the entire gain in gross income for the taxable year in which the sale occurs will operate as an election not to have installment sale reporting apply. It is anticipated that, under regulations, late elections will be permitted in rare circumstances when the Internal Revenue Service finds that reasonable cause for failing to make a timely election exists under the particular circumstances of each case.

[9] If, for practical reasons, it is not feasible to report gain from sales for relatively small amounts, a taxpayer could elect not to report gain under the installment method and thereby eliminate compliance burdens. See the following discussion relating to installment sale elections under the bill.

Generally, an election made under this provision is to be irrevocable. However, an election may be revoked with the consent of the Internal Revenue Service. Generally, it is anticipated that consent would be given by the Internal Revenue Service in circumstances when a revocation does not have as one of its purposes the avoidance of income taxes. Also it is anticipated that consent to revocation will generally be granted in cases involving a contingent selling price if the election is made prior to adoption of final regulations under the provisions of the bill relating to contingent selling price sales and the request for revocation is filed within a reasonable time after the regulations are adopted.

It is anticipated that the regulations will prescribe election rules relating to the treatment of gains from deferred payments sales of property by a nonresident alien. Under the installment method rules of present law, these gains do not become taxable as payments are received after the seller becomes a resident or citizen subject to U.S. income tax for a taxable year subsequent to the year in which the sale was made. It is intended that the election regulations will continue this treatment in appropriate cases. Further, it is intended that similar treatment will be provided for a deferred payment sale made by a tax-exempt organization which later receives payments after losing its tax-exempt status.

F. Related Party Sales (sec. 2 of the bill and new sec. 453(e), (f), and (g) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, the installment sale statutory provision does not preclude installment sale reporting for sales between related parties. Further, the statutory provision does not preclude installment sale reporting for sales of marketable securities although the seller might readily obtain full cash proceeds by market sales.[11]

Under the existing statutory framework, taxpayers have used the installment sale provision as a tax planning device for intra-family transfers of appreciated property, including marketable securities.[12] [13] There are several tax advantages in making intra-family installment sales of appreciated property. The seller would achieve deferral of recognition of gain until the related buyer actually pays the installments to the seller, even if cash proceeds from the property are received within the related party group from a subsequent resale by the installment buyer shortly after making the initial purchase. In addition to spreading out the gain recognized by the seller over the term of the installment sale, the seller may achieve some estate planning benefits since the value of the installment obligation generally will be frozen for estate tax purposes. Any subsequent appreciation in value of the property sold, or in property acquired by reinvestment of the proceeds from the property sold on the installment basis, would not affect the seller's gross estate since the value of the property is no longer included in his gross estate.

With respect to the related buyer, there is usually no tax to be paid if the appreciated property is resold shortly after the installment purchase. Since the buyer's adjusted basis is a cost basis which includes the portion of the purchase price payable in the future, the gain or loss from the buyer's resale would represent only the fluctuation in value occurring after the installment purchase. Thus, after the related party's resale, all appreciation has been realized within the related group but the recognition of the gain for tax purposes may be deferred for along period of time.

In the leading case, Rushing v. Commissioner,[13] the test was held to be that, in order to receive the installment benefits, the "seller may not directly or indirectly have control over the proceeds or possess the economic benefit therefrom." In this case, a sale of corporate stock was made to the trustee of trusts for the benefit of the seller's children. Since the sales were made to trusts created after the corporations had adopted plans of liquidation, the Government made an assignment of income argument. The Court upheld installment sale treatment for the stock sold to the trustee under the "control or enjoyment" test because the trustee was independent of the taxpayer and owed a fiduciary duty to the children. The Court rejected the assignment of income argument because it found that no income was being assigned.

The Rushing case has been followed in another case where the stock sold to a family trust was that of a corporation which was to be liquidated after the sale.[14] The liquidation was formally authorized after the sale to the trust. In other cases, the Tax Court has rejected the Service's substance over form and constructive receipt arguments and held that sales to a family trust qualified for installment method reporting.[15] In the Pityo case, the taxpayer's wife was the beneficiary of one of the trusts to which the installment sale was made. In the Roberts case, the trustees were the seller's brother and personal accountant. In both cases, installment sale reporting was allowed because the Tax [14] Court held that the trustees were independent of the seller and satisfied the Rushing control or enjoyment test.

[11] The receipt of the buyers obligation payable on demand or a readily tradable evidence of indebtedness is treated as the receipt of payment by the seller. For this purpose, readily tradable items include bonds and notes issued by a corporation or governmental unit with interest coupons attached or in registered form or in any other form designed to make the bond or note readily tradable in an established securities market.

[12] Another technique used for intra-family transfers involves the so-called "private annuity" arrangement. The bill does not deal directly with this type of arrangement.

[14] Carl E. Weaver, 71 T.C. 443 (1978).

In another case, installment method reporting was allowed for a sale of marketable stock by a wife to her husband although a resale by the husband was contemplated.[16] In this case, the Court held that the husband could not be considered a mere conduit for the wife's sale of the stock since both were "very healthy economic entities" and the husband had an independent purpose for obtaining needed funds for an investment at a low rate of interest.

In the few cases in which the Service has prevailed, installment method reporting has been denied with respect to transactions involving a controlled corporation,[17] a sale to a son where the son was forced to resell the stock and invest the proceeds in other securities held in escrow,[18] and, in the case of a sale by a husband to his wife where the Court found there was no bona fide purpose for the transaction other than tax avoidance.[19]

Reasons for change

The committee appreciates the fact that denial of installment sale treatment may be harsh for a shareholder who receives liquidating distributions of the installment obligations received by the corporation from the sale of its assets. In that case, the shareholder may incur a substantial tax on the gain from the stock without having received current funds from the corporate liquidation with which to pay the tax. Accordingly, the committee's bill, as later described, includes a provision to deal with that potential hardship. However, the committee believes that the application of the judicial decisions, involving corporate liquidations, to intra-family transfers of appreciated property has led to unwarranted tax avoidance by allowing the realization of appreciation within a related group without the current payment of income tax.

Explanation of provision

The bill prescribes special rules for situations involving installment sales to certain related parties who also dispose of the property and for situations involving installment sales of depreciable property between a taxpayer and his spouse or certain trusts, and 80-percent owned corporations or partnerships.

Sales other than sales of depreciable property between certain closely-related parties

Under the bill, the amount realized upon certain resales by the related party installment purchaser will trigger recognition of gain by the initial seller, based on his gross profit ratio, only to the extent the amount realized from the second disposition exceeds actual pay- [15] ments made under the installment sale. Thus, acceleration of recognition of the installment gain from the first sale will generally result only to the extent additional cash and other property flows into the related group as a result of a second disposition of the property. In the case of a second disposition which is not a sale or exchange, the fair market value of the property disposed of is treated as the amount realized for this purpose. For these purposes, the portion of the amount realized from a second disposition will not be taken into account to the extent attributable to any improvements which had been made by the related installment purchaser.

The excess of any amount realized from resales over payments received on the first sale as of the end of a taxable year will be taken into account. Thus, the tax treatment would not turn on the strict chronological order in which resales or payments are made. If, under these rules, a resale results in the recognition of gain to the initial seller, subsequent payments actually received by that seller would be recovered tax-free until they have equaled the amount realized from the resale which resulted in the acceleration of recognition and gain.

In the case of property other than marketable securities, the resale rule will apply only with respect to second dispositions occurring within 2 years of the initial installment sale. For this purpose, the running of the 2-year period would be suspended for any period during which the related purchaser's risk of loss with respect to the property is substantially diminished. This rule will apply with respect to the holding of a put, the holding of an option by another person, a short sale, or any other transaction which has the effect of substantially diminishing the risk of loss. However, for this purpose, a typical close corporation shareholders' agreement is not intended to be taken into account. Further, the holding of an option is not to be considered to have the effect of substantially diminishing risk of loss if the option purchase price is to be determined by reference to the fair market value of the property at the time the option is exercised.

In the case of marketable securities, the resale rule would apply without a time limit for resales occurring before the installment obligation is satisfied. For this purpose, the term "marketable security" means any security for which, as of the date of disposition, there was a market on an established securities market, [or] otherwise.[20]

No. 53 (July 16 1980), a prearranged resale was made by the trustees of a family trust one day after the installment sale were made to the trusts of which the installment sellers were the trustees. The two-step installment sales were used because the taxpayers believed that "a cash sale was not attractive because of the income tax liability on such a sale."

This case involved the creation of a corporation to receive the assignment of a settlement owed to the taxpayer with the corporation agreeing to pay the money received from the settlement to the taxpayer over a 40-year term. The Court held that there had been an anticipatory assignment of income and therefore the income was taxable to the shareholder rather than the corporation.

[19] Phillip W. Wrenn, 67 T.C. 576 (1976).

The bill also contains several exceptions to the application of these rules. Since gain from the sale of a corporation's treasury stock is nontaxable and therefore its basis in the stock is irrelevant, this related party rule will not apply to any nonliquidating installment sale of stock to the issuing corporation. In addition, there would be no acceleration of recognition of gain as a result of a second disposition which is an involuntary conversion of the property if the first sale occurred before the threat or imminence of the conversion. Further [16] there would be no acceleration of recognition of gain from a second disposition which occurs after the death of the installment seller or purchaser. Generally, it is intended that this exception will apply after the death of either spouse when the spouses hold their interests in the installment obligation or the purchased property as community property or as equal undivided joint interests. Finally the resale rules will not apply in any case where it is established to the satisfaction of the Internal Revenue Service that none of the dispositions had as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income taxes.

In the exceptional cases to which the nonavoidance exception may apply, it is anticipated that regulations would provide definitive rules so that complicated legislation is not necessary to prescribe substituted property or taxpayer rules which would not be of general application. In appropriate cases, it is anticipated that the regulations and rulings under the nontax avoidance exception will deal with certain tax-free transfers which normally would not be treated as a second disposition of the property, e.g., charitable transfers, like-kind exchanges, gift transfers, and transfers to a controlled corporation or a partnership. Generally it is intended that a second disposition will qualify under the nontax avoidance exception when it is of an involuntary nature, e.g., foreclosure upon the property by a judgment lien creditor of the related purchaser or bankruptcy of the related purchaser. In addition it is intended that the exception will apply in the case of a second disposition which is also an installment sale if the terms of payment under the installment resale are substantially equivalent to, or longer than, those for the first installment sale. However, the exception would not apply if the resale terms would permit significant deferral of recognition of gain from the initial sale when proceeds from the resale are being collected sooner.

Under the bill, the period for assessing a deficiency in tax attributable to a second disposition by the related purchaser will not expire before the day which is 2 years after the date the initial installment seller furnishes a notice that there was a second disposition of the property. The notice is to be furnished in the manner prescribed by regulations. Under the bill, a protective notification may be filed to prevent the tolling of the period of limitations for assessing a deficiency in cases where there are questions as to whether a second disposition has occurred (e.g., a lease which might be characterized as a sale or exchange for tax purposes) or whether there is a principal purpose of Federal income tax avoidance.

For purposes of the related party rules, the bill adopts a definition of related parties which will include spouses, children, grandchildren, and parents but will exclude brothers and sisters.

In the case of a corporation, it will be considered to be related to another taxpayer if stock which is or might be owned by it is or would be treated as owned by the other taxpayer under the general corporate attribution rules (Codes sec. 318).. Generally, a related corporation will be one in which a person directly or indirectly owns 50 percent or more in value of the stock in the corporation. Also for this purpose, the principles of the general corporate stock ownership attribution rules (Codes sec. 318) will apply in determining the related party status of partnerships, trusts, and estates.

[17]It is to be understood that the provisions governing the use of the installment method to report sales between related parties, and the definition of such relationships, are not intended to preclude the Internal Revenue Service from asserting the proper tax treatment of transactions that are shams.

Sales of depreciable property between certain closely-related parties

Under the bill, the accrual method of accounting in effect is required for deferred payment sales of depreciable property between certain closely-related parties.[21] In general, this rule is intended to deter transactions which are structured in such a way as to give the related purchaser the benefit of depreciation deductions (measured from a stepped-up basis) prior to the time the seller is required to include in income the corresponding gain on the sale. For transactions to which the special rule will apply, the deferred payments will be deemed to be received in the taxable year in which the sale occurs. In the case of sales for contingent future payments, it is intended that, in general, the amount realized in the year of sale will be equal to the value of the property sold.

This special rule will apply only to deferred payment sales between a taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse; the taxpayer and a partnership or corporation which is 80-percent owned by the taxpayer and/or the taxpayer's spouse; and between partnerships and corporations which are 80-percent owned by the taxpayer and/or the taxpayer's spouse. The rule will not apply if it is established to the satisfaction of the Internal Revenue Service that the sale did not have as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income taxes.

[20] The term "marketable securities" includes securities which are listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, or any city or regional exchange in which quotations appear on a daily basis, including foreign securities listed on a recognized foreign national or regional exchange; securities regularly traded in the national or regional over-the-counter market, for which published quotations are available; securities locally traded for which quotations can readily be obtained from established brokerage firms; and units in a common trust fund. Mutual fund shares for which redemption prices are published would also be considered marketable securities.

[21] In the case of transfers which are treated as tax-free transfers to a controlled corporation or to a partnership. (Code secs. 351, 362, 721, and 723), the provisions of present law would continue to apply and would not be affected by the provision. Also, in the case of transactions which are governed by the doctrine of liquidation-reincorporation under present law, the tax treatment for those transactions would continue to be governed by present law and would not be effected by the provision.

Thus, the special rules will not apply if, at the time of the installment sale, the husband and wife are legally separated under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance. Also, they will not apply if the installment sale occurs pursuant to a settlement in a proceeding which culminates in a decree of divorce or separate maintenance. Further, the rule will not apply if no significant tax deferral benefits will be derived from the sale.

Statement of committee intention

The committee intends that no inference be drawn from these provisions as to the proper treatment of any related party installment sale occurring prior to the effective date provided under the bill.

The Committee on Finance believes that, as a principle of tax policy, a taxpayer should be permitted to contest on an equal footing in the appropriate courts matters in dispute with the government. The Committee recognizes that two sections of the pending legislation (new Code secs. 453 (e)(7) and (g)) put a taxpayer at a disadvantage if he or she should seek a court ruling on the merits of the issue.

The Committee accepts the pending legislation only with the specific understanding that—

[18] (1) The foregoing sections are designed to give an opportunity to taxpayers to qualify who might otherwise not be able to qualify under this legislation for the reporting of income on the installment method,

(2) Under the preceding sections in determining the question of tax avoidance, the Commissioner shall treat taxpayers fairly and equitably in light of all the facts and circumstances of each particular case in a manner consistent with the remedical intent of the preceding sections, and

(3) The preceding sections are not to be considered as a precedent for future legislation.

The Committee shall monitor closely the administration of the sections and the Commissioner shall report annually its actions to the appropriate Congressional committees. Further, the General Accounting Office shall not later than two years after the enactment of this legislation report to the Congress on the manner in which the preceding sections are being administered.

G. Treatment of Third Party Guarantee (sec. 2 of the bill and sec. 453(f)(3) of the Code)

Present law

Generally, under present law (Code sec. 453), income from a sale of property on the installment basis may be reported as the payments are received. If the installment method is elected for qualifying sales, the gain reported for any taxable year is the proportion of the installment payment received in that year which the gross profit, realized or to be realized when payment is completed, bears to the total contract price. In general, the contract price is the amount which will be paid to the seller. The payments taken into account as being received in a taxable year would not include the purchaser's obligation of future payment, whether dischargeable in money or other property (including foreign currency), unless that obligation is a bond or other evidence or indebtedness which is either payable on demand or has been issued by a corporation or government and is readily tradable.

In a recent case, the Tax Court held that, by reason of a standby letter of credit used to secure future payment for the sale of a cotton crop, the taxpayer had received full payment in the year of sale and could not report the transaction on the installment method.[22] However, the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals has recently held that a letter of credit used to secure payment for the sale of stock did not constitute payment for purposes of the installment sale provisions.[23]

Reasons for change

The committee believes that a third party guarantee (including a standby letter of credit) used as security for a deferred payment sale should not be treated as a payment received on an installment obligation.

Explanation of provision

Under the bill, a third party guarantee (including a standby letter of credit) will not be taken into account in determining if the [19] buyer's evidence of indebtedness constitutes payment to the seller. For this purpose, a guarantee which is not treated as payment would not include a third party note (or any other type of third party obligation which is transferable or marketable prior to default in payment by the installment purchaser).

H. Receipt of Like Kind Property (sec. 2 of the bill and new sec. 453(f)(7) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, the transfer of property for cash payments and like kind property may qualify both for installment method reporting and, with respect to the gain attributable to the like kind exchange, nonrecognition treatment (Code sec. 1031 and Rev. Rul. 65-155, 1965-1. C.B. 356). In this case, the gain to be recognized under installment method reporting is the total gain realized on the transaction less the gain eligible for nonrecognition under the like kind exchange provision. However, the value of the like kind property received by the seller is taken into account in determining the amount of the selling price, the contract price, and payments received for purposes of the installment sale provision.[24] The value of the like kind property received in the taxable year in which the sale or exchange is made.

A similar case under present law involves the treatment of an installment obligation received as "boot" in exchange by a shareholder under a plan of corporate reorganization (sec. 356(a)(1)). Present law is unclear whether the exchange qualifies for installment sale reporting.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that, when like kind property and an installment obligation are received, the like kind property should not be treated as payment in order to achieve the basic purpose of installment sale reporting, i.e., gain should be recognized as cash (and other property with respect to which gain is recognized) is received.

Explanation of provision

Under the bill, property permitted to be received without recognition of gain in an exchange described in Code section 1031(b)[25] will not be treated as payment for purposes of reporting income under the installment method.

Thus, in reporting the gain on the exchange under the installment method where an installment obligation is received in addition to the like kind property, the gross profit will be the amount of gain which will be recognized on the exchange if the installment obligation were satisfied in full at its face amount. Also, the total contract price will not include the value of the like kind property but instead will consist solely of the sum of the money and fair market value of other property received plus the face amount of the installment obligation.

The basis of the like kind property received, (determined under section 1031(d)) will be determined as if the obligation had been [20] satisfied at its face amount.[26] Thus, the taxpayer's basis in the property transferred will first be allocated to the like kind property received (but not in excess of its fair market value) and any remaining basis will be used to determine the gross profit ratio.

The bill also provides that similar treatment applies in the case of an exchange under a plan of corporate reorganization described in section 356 (a) which is not treated as a dividend.

These provisions may be illustrated by the following example. Assume that the taxpayer exchanges property with a basis of $400,000 for like kind property worth $200,000, and an installment obligation for $800,000 with $100,000 payable in the taxable year of the sale and the balance payable in the succeeding taxable year. The example compares present law, which takes like kind property into account as payment, with the bill which reverses this rule.

I. Installment Obligations Distributed in a 12-Month Corporate Liquidation (sec. 2 of the bill and new sec. 453(h) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, gain or loss is not generally recognized at the corporate level for sales and exchanges occurring during the 12-month [21] period after the corporation has elected a plan of complete liquidation (Code sec. 337). A special rule provides that in this situation gain or loss generally is not recognized to the liquidating corporation for distributions of installment obligations (Code sec. 453(d) (4)(B)). Gain or loss is recognized by the shareholders with respect to the liquidating distributions. No special exception applies for the distribution of installment obligations to shareholders so that the shareholders may defer reporting gain from the obligations.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that the treatment of a shareholder receiving installment obligations from a liquidating corporation should be generally similar to the treatment accorded a shareholder selling stock to an unrelated third party purchaser on the installment method. The bill is intended to facilitate the purchase of a corporate business by providing similar installment treatment to the seller whether or not the corporate assets or stock in the corporation is sold.

Explanation of provision

Under the bill, in the case of a corporate liquidation the receipt by a shareholder (under Code sec. 331) of an installment obligation which was received by the corporation during its 12-month liquidation period (under Code sec. 337) generally will not be treated as the receipt of payment by the shareholder.[27] Instead, the shareholder may report gain from the exchange of stock on the installation method, taking gain into account as payments are received on the installment obligation received as a liquidating distribution. Where a parent liquidating corporation had a subsidiary which received an obligation during the subsidiary's liquidation (to which sec. 337(c)(3) applied) that obligation also will qualify for installment reporting by the shareholders of the parent corporation. However, in no event will obligations received by the liquidating corporation from the sale of inventory, other than from the bulk sale, qualify for installment treatment by the shareholder.

[25] This provision includes like kind exchanges (sec. 1031), exchanges of certain insurance policies (sec. 1035), certain exchanges of stock of the same corporation (sec. 1036), and certain exchanges of United States obligations (sec. 1037).

[26] This is the same rule as presently set forth in Rev. Rul. 65-155, supra.

[27] This treatment will apply to the target company in an acquisition if it is treated as having liquidated under Code section 337 (Rev. Rul. 69-6, 1969-1 C.B. 104). Further, in the case of a corporate acquisition involving the use of a "transitory" or "phantom" company, the obligations issued by the acquiring parent company would be considered issued by the "purchaser", although the assets of the acquired company are technically transferred to the transitory company set up to effect the acquisition, if that company is disregarded for Federal tax purposes under present law.

Where liquidating distributions are received by a shareholder in more than one taxable year, the shareholder will be required to recompute the gain reported from the liquidation by allocating basis in the stock pro rata over all payments received (or to be received). This may require amended returns if all of the liquidating distributions are not received during the same taxable year of the shareholder.

The following example will illustrate the operation of this rule. Assume that the taxpayer is the sole shareholder of a corporation with an adjusted basis of $200,000 in the stock (all of the stock (all of the stock having been acquired in the same transaction at the same cost), and is a calendar year taxpayer. Also, assume that the corporation adopts a plan of liquidation in July 1982, that the corporation sells all of its assets in August 1982 to an unrelated purchaser for $1 million, consisting of [22] $250,000 in cash and an installment note for $750,000, that the entire gain qualifies for nonrecognition under section 337, that there is no imputed interest income or original issue discount, that the corporation distributes the cash in November 1982 and that the note is distributed in complete liquidation in June 1983. The taxpayer would initially report a gain of $50,000 in 1982 ($250,000 cash received less $200,000 basis in the stock).

After the distribution of the note in 1983, under the installment method, the taxpayer would recompute the gain reported in 1982 by allocating basis according to the installment sales rules. Thus, 75 percent ($750,000 (face amount of installment obligation) divided by $1 million (total distribution)) of the taxpayer's basis in the stock, or $150,000 (75 percent times $200,000) would be allocated to the installment obligation. Further, 25 percent ($250,000 divided by $1 million) of the taxpayer's basis in the stock or $50,000 (25 percent times $200,000) is allocated to the distribution of the cash. The taxpayer thus is required to file an amended return for 1982 to reflect an additional $150,000 of gain (cash received of $250,000 less the sum of $50,000 basis and $50,000 gain initially reported). Eighty percent of each payment on the note (other than interest) must be reported as gain by the taxpayer (gain of $600,000 ($750,000 face amount of obligation less basis of $150,000) divided by $750,000 (contract price)).

Under the bill, nonrecognition treatment will not be available to the extent the obligation is attributed to a sale of depreciable property by the corporation if the installment purchaser is either the shareholder-distributee's spouse, or a corporation or a partnership which is 80-percent owned by the shareholder-distributee and/or his spouse.[28] This provision applies if the property sold by the corporation is depreciable in the hands of the purchaser. Under the provision, gain will be recognized by the shareholder for his taxable year in which the installment obligation is distributed.

Finally, if another related party (a person who is not covered by the preceding special recognition rule but who is related within the meaning of new sec. 453(f)(1)) purchases the corporate assets and then disposes of them, the related party disposition rules (as previously described under part F of this report) will apply to the shareholder who received the related party's installment obligations as a liquidating distribution. In other words, in these cases, the shareholder-distributee will be substituted for the liquidated corporation for purposes of applying the related party resale rules provided under the bill.

J. Sales Subject to a Contingency (sec. 2 of the bill and new sec. 453(i) of the Code)

Present law

As a general rule, installment reporting of gain from deferred payments is not available where all or a portion of the selling price is subject to a contingency. The case law holds that the selling price must be fixed and determinable for section 453(b) to apply.[29] An agreement, however, to indemnify the purchaser for breach of certain [23] warranties and representations by offset against the purchase price will not disqualify an installment sale under section 453(b).[30] Exactly how broad such contingencies can be is unclear.

Where an installment sale is subject to a contingency with respect to the price and the installment method is not available, the taxpayer is required to recognize all of the gain in the year of the sale with respect to all of the payments to be made, even though such payments are payable in future taxable years. In the case of a cash-method taxpayer where the future payments have no readily ascertainable fair market value, the taxpayer may treat the transaction with respect to those payments as "open" and use the cost-recovery method under Burnet v. Logan, 2830 U.S. 404 (1931).

Reasons for change

The committee believes that a taxpayer should be permitted to report gain from a deferred payment sale under the installment method even if the selling price may be subject to some contingency.

Explanation of provision

The bill permits installment sale reporting for sales for a contingent selling price. In extending eligibility, the bill does not prescribe specific rules for every conceivable transaction. Rather, the bill provides that specific rules will be prescribed under regulations.

---

[28] In the case of transactions which are governed by the doctrine of liquidation-reincorporation under present law, the tax treatment for those transactions would continue to be governed by present law and would not be affected by this provision.

[29] Gralap v. United States, 458 F.2d 1158 (10th Cir. 1972); In re Steen, 509 F.2d 1398 (9th Cir. 1975).

[30] See Rev. Rul. 77-56, 1977-1 C.B. 135.

However, it is intended that, for sales under which there is a stated maximum selling price, the regulations will permit basis recovery on the basis of a gross profit ratio determined by reference to the stated maximum selling price. For purposes of this provision, incidental or remote contingencies are not to be taken into account in determining if there is a stated maximum selling price. In general, the maximum selling price would be determined from the "four corners" of the contract agreement as the largest price which could be paid to the taxpayer assuming all contingencies, formulas, etc., operate in the taxpayer's favor. Income from the sale would be reported on a pro rata basis with respect to each installment payment using the maximum selling price to determine the total contract price and gross profit ratio. If, pursuant to standards prescribed by regulations, it is subsequently determined that the contingency will not be satisfied in whole or in part, thus reducing the maximum selling price, the taxpayer's income from the sale would be recomputed. The taxpayer would then report reduced income, as adjusted, with respect to each installment payment received in the taxable year of adjustment and subsequent taxable years. If the maximum price is reduced in more than one taxable year, e.g., because of successive changes in the status of the contingency, each such year of reduction would constitute an adjustment year.

Where the taxpayer has reported more income from installment payments received in previous taxable years than the total recomputed income, the taxpayer would be permitted to deduct the excesses in the adjustment year as a loss.

In cases where the sales price is indefinite and no maximum selling price can be determined but the obligation is payable over a fixed period of time, it is generally intended that basis of the property sold would be recovered ratably over that fixed period. In a case where the selling price and payment period are both indefinite but a sale has in [24] fact occurred, it is intended that the regulations would permit ratable basis recovery over some reasonable period of time. Also, in appropriate cases, it is intended that basis recovery would be permitted under an income forecast type method.[31]

The creation of a statutory deferred payment option for all forms of deferred payment sales significantly expands the availability of installment reporting to include situations where it has not previously been permitted. By providing an expanded statutory installment reporting option, the Committee believes that in the future there should be little incentive to devise convoluted forms of deferred payment obligations to attempt to obtain deferred reporting. In any event, the effect of the new rules is to reduce substantially the justification for treating transactions as "open" and permitting the use of the cost-recovery method sanctioned by Burnet v. Logan, 283 U.S. 404 (1931). Accordingly, it is the Committee's intent that the cost-recovery method not be available in the case of sales for a fixed price (whether the seller's obligation is evidenced by a note, contractual promise, or otherwise), and that its use be limited to those rate and extraordinary cases involving sales for a contingent price where the fair market value of the purchaser's obligation cannot reasonably be ascertained.

K. ELECTION OF INSTALLMENT METHOD BY ACCRUAL METHOD DEALER (SEC. 2 OF THE BILL AND SECS. 453(C) AND 481(D) OF THE CODE)

Present law

Under present law (Code sec. 453 (c)), an accrual basis dealer in personal property who elects to change to the installment method of accounting must include in income the gain attributable to payments received with respect to sales which had been included in income for taxable years prior to electing the installment method. In mitigation for double inclusion of income from the sales, an adjustment to tax is permitted. However, the amount of the adjustment is limited to the lesser of the portion of income tax attributable to inclusion in income for the taxable year of sale or the portion of income tax attributable to inclusion of the gross profit for the taxable year in which installment payments are received. The formula for determining the tax "attributable to" the inclusion of the gain in income results in a higher total tax for both years taken together than if the gain had been reported only once.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that the mechansim for adjustment of tax under present law imposes unnecessary complexities upon dealers who [25] elect the installment method of reporting. Further, the committee believes that previously reported gains should not have to be reported for another taxable year because the second inclusion in income is a form of double taxation, notwithstanding the tax adjustments permitted under present law.

Explanation of provision

Under the bill, an accrual method dealer who elects the installment method of reporting will report gain as payments are received only for sales made on or after the effective date of the installment method election (Code sec. 481(a)).

It is intended that, under Treasury regulations, a failure to report the full amount of gain from sales may be treated as an election of the installment method. For example, it is intended that a dealer, who treats a transaction as a lease of personal property and only reports the payments received as rental income, may be eligible for installment reporting under the regulations if the transaction is recharacterized as a sale rather than a lease in an audit by the Internal Revenue Service. However, it is intended that no taxpayer who has reported sales under the accrual method will be required to change from that method under the regulations.

[31] In general, the income forecast method for basis recovery is considered appropriate for a transaction with respect to which it may be demonstrated that receipts will be greater for the earlier years of the payment period and then decline for the later years of the payment period. It is intended that the regulations will deal with the application of this method with respect to sales of property qualifying for depreciation under the income forecast method (e.g., movies), mineral rights when the selling price is based on production, a sale under which the amount payable to the seller is based on a declining percentage of the purchaser's revenues, and similar sales. In developing these regulations, the committee intends that the Treasury Department will prescribe rules for this method to avoid, whenever possible, leaving a seller with an unrecovered basis in the obligation, and thereby creating a capital loss, after the final payment is received. For qualifying transactions, a more rapid basis recovery under this method is to be allowed even if there is a fixed period over which payments are to be received.

L. Transfers of Installment Obligations to Life Insurance Companies (sec. 2 of the bill and new sec. 453B(e)(2) of the Code)

Present law

Generally, under present law, any unreported gain must be recognized when a taxpayer disposes of an installment obligation. However, in the case of certain tax-free transfers, disposition of an installment obligation will not trigger the recognition of gain. In these cases, the transferee succeeds to the basis of the installment seller and reports the remaining gain as payments are received. Under a special rule (Code sec. 453(d)(5)), transfers of installment obligations to a life insurance company are not eligible for nonrecognition treatment for otherwise tax-free transfers.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that transfers of installment obligations to life insurance companies should be eligible for the same nonrecognition treatment provided for transfers to other taxpayers if any remaining gain will be taken into account by the life insurance company as taxable investment income.

Explanation of provision

Under the bill, the special disposition rules for transfers of obligations to a life insurance company will not apply if the life insurance company elects to report any remaining gain as investment income (under Code sect. 804 (b)) as payments are received.

M. Cancellation of Installment Obligation (sec. 2 of the bill and new sec. 453B(f) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, some have argued that the installation obligation disposition rules can be avoided by making gift cancellations of the obligation or the installments as they come due. In other words, by making an installment sale and then cancelling the obligation or a [26] number of installment payments, it is argued that the seller will incur no income tax liability, but possibly some gift taxes, and the buyer will have a cost basis in the property sold although no income tax cost will have been incurred on the transaction. If a direct gift is made, the donee's basis is generally the same as the donor's basis rather than a "cost" basis which reflects future payments which will never be made.

This cancellation technique is based on a District Court's decision in Miller v. Usry.[32] In that case, the court held that the disposition rules for obligations disposed of other than by sale or exchange were directed at corporate transfers and should not be applied to a cancellation of the obligation where there has been no actual, real, or material gain to the taxpayer. The court did not consider the possible benefit to the donee from acquiring a cost basis through the installment sale. Next, the court held that the disposition rules for satisfaction at other than face value did apply to a cancellation but no tax was incurred because no amount was realized by the taxpayer.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that present law should be clarified to make it clear that the installment obligation disposition rules cannot be circumvented by cancelling the obligation.

Explanation of provision

The bill makes it clear that the cancellation of an installment obligation is treated as a disposition of the obligation. In the case where the obligor is a related party, the amount taken into account as a disposition triggering recognition of unreported gain attributable to the obligation is not to be less than the face amount of the installment obligation.

N. Bequest of Obligation to Obligor (sec. 3 of the bill and new sec. 691(a)(5) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, the installment obligation disposition rules do not apply to the transmission of installment obligations at death (Code secs. 453(d)(3) and 691(a)(4)). However, unreported gains, attributable to installment obligations are treated as items of gross income in respect of a decedent so that the recipient in taxed upon receipt of the installment payments in the same manner as the deceased seller would have been had he lived to receive the payments. A special rule allows a deduction for the estate taxes attributable to the unreported gain on the installment obligation (Code sec. 691(c)).

Another provision (Code sec. 691 (a)(2)) provides that the transfer of an installment obligation to the estate of the deceased seller will not be treated as a transfer requiring the reporting of gain. In addition, this rule applies to a transfer to a person pursuant to the right of such person to receive the installment obligation by reason of the death of the seller or by bequest, devise, or inheritance from the seller.

Reasons for change

Because of these rules, it has been argued that any unreported gain remaining at the death of the seller will never be taxed if the installment obligation is left to the obligor. In this case, it is argued that [27] there will never be a disposition or collection of the unpaid balance because there has been a merger of interests of obligor and obligee. In other words, the obligor will have acquired a cost basis for depreciation and resale purposes prior to the seller's death, but no income tax cost will have been incurred with respect to the gain unreported by the seller at the time of his death.

[32] 160 F. Supp. 368, 58-1 USTC ¶ 9393 (W.D. La. 1958).

The committee believes that present law should be clarified so that the installment obligation disposition rules apply with respect to a cancellation by reason of death of the holder of the obligation.

Explanation of provision

The bill provides that any previously unreported gain from an installment sale will be recognized by a deceased seller's estate if the obligation is transferred or transmitted by bequest, devise, or inheritance to the obligor or is cancelled by the executor.

In the absence of some act of cancelling the obligation by distribution or notation which results in cancellation under the Uniform Commercial Code or other local law, the disposition will be considered to occur no later than the time the period of administration of the estate is concluded.

If the cancellation occurs at the death of the holder of the obligation, the cancellation is to be treated as a transfer by the estate of the decedent. However, if the obligation were held by a person other than the decedent, such as a trust, the cancellation will be treated as a transfer immediately after the decedent's death by that person.

If the decedent and the obligor were related persons (within the meaning of new Code section 453(f)(1)), the fair market value of the obligation for disposition purposes is not to be treated as less than its face amount.

For purposes of this provision, if an installment obligation becomes unenforceable, it will be treated as if it were cancelled.

O. Foreclosure of Real Property Sold on Installment Method by Deceased Taxpayer (sec. 4 of the bill and sec. 1038 of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, the recognition of gain upon a reconveyance of real property to the seller in partial or full satisfaction of purchase money debt is limited (Code sec. 1038). Losses, including bad debt losses, are also not recognized upon a reconveyance of real property. With respect to gains, the amount of gain required to be recognized upon reconveyance of the real property sold generally is limited to the lesser of the amount of any remaining unreported portion of the original gain or the amount by which the sum of the money and fair market value of property received prior to the reacquisition exceeds the amount of gain previously reported. The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that this provision does not apply to a reconveyance to the estate of a deceased taxpayer who made the original sale (Rev. Rul. 69-83, 1969-1, C.B. 202). In other words, a decedent's estate is not permitted to succeed to the tax treatment which would have been available to the decedent had he lived to receive, the reconveyance because the estate is considered to be a separate taxable entity.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that a decedent's estate (or other person inheriting a decedent's installment obligation) should be entitled to [28] the same limitations on recognition of gain upon the reconveyance of real property in satisfaction of an obligation to which the decedent would have been entitled if the decedent had survived.

Explanation of provision

Under the bill, the estate or beneficiary of a deceased seller will be entitled to the same nonrecognition treatment upon the acquisition of real property in partial or full satisfaction of secured purchase money debt as the deceased seller would have been entitled.

The basis of the property acquired will be the same as if the property had been reacquired by the original seller, increased by an amount equal to the section 691(c) deduction for estate taxes which would have been allowable had the repossession been taxable.

The committee intends that no inference is to be drawn from this provisions as to the application of present law.

P. Character of Gain from Sales of Depreciable Property Between Related Parties

(Sec. 5 of the bill and sec. 1239 of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, gain from the sale or exchange of depreciable property between certain related parties is denied capital gains treatment (and is taxed as ordinary income). Related parties include husband and wife, an individual and an 80-percent controlled corporation, and two 80-percent controlled corporations. The attribution rules of Code section 318 are generally applied to determine ownership in a corporation.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that the same related party rules should apply with respect to the characterization of income from sales of depreciable property between a husband and wife or their controlled entity and to the special installment sale rules for sales of depreciable property between husband and wife, or their controlled entity. For these purposes, the committee also believes that the attribution of ownership rules should be narrowed to exclude family members other than husband and wife.

Explanation of provision

Under the bill, the provision of section 1239(a) denying capital gain treatment on the sale or exchange of depreciable property will apply to sales between husband and wife, between the taxpayer and a partnership or corporation which is 80-percent owned by the taxpayer and/or the taxpayer's spouse; and between partnerships and corporations which are 80-percent owned by the taxpayer and/or the taxpayer's spouse. For these purposes, the person treated as the owner of a trust under the grantor trust rules is to be treated as the owner of the assets in the trust.

Under the provision, ownership, is to be attributed in accordance with the principles under the general corporate ownership attribution rules (Code sec. 318) except that an individual's family will only include a spouse and the entity attribution rules will be applied without regard to the percentage of ownership limitations.

[29] Q. Effective Date (sec. 6 of the bill)

In general, the provisions of the bill are effective for dispositions of property, cancellations and reacquisitions of real property, as the case may be, occurring after the date of enactment. The provisions which eliminate the 30-percent initial payment and the two or more payments requirements are effective for transactions occurring in taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

However, the related party installment sale rules would apply to installment sales (first dispositions) after May 14, 1980. The provision relating to the distribution of installment obligations in connection with a 12-month corporate liquidation would apply with respect to installment obligations distributed after March 31, 1980. (A liquidating distribution made after March 31, 1980, will qualify for nonrecognition treatment to a shareholder even if the obligation is from a sale which is ineligible for installment reporting by the corporation because the sale occurred before the effective date of the other rules revised or eliminated under the bill.)

Rev. Proc. 80-58

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

In this revenue procedure, the Assistant Secretary (Tax Policy) of the Treasury prescribes certain changes in the Class Life Asset Depreciation Range System. The purpose is to delete existing asset guideline classes 15.1 (Contract Construction Other than Marine) and 15.2 (Marine Contract Construction), which also includes assets used in offshore oil and gas drilling, and to establish two new classes with new depreciation periods and ranges, and annual repair allowance percentages for assets used in construction and in offshore oil and gas drilling. These changes are adopted pursuant to section 1.167(a)-11 of the Income Tax Regulations.

The new asset guideline classes, and associated asset guideline depreciation periods, asset depreciation ranges, and annual asset guideline repair allowance percentages are set forth in Section 2 of this revenue procedure.

SEC. 2. ASSET GUIDELINE CLASSES, ASSET DEPRECIATION RANGES, AND ANNUAL ASSET GUIDELINE REPAIR ALLOWANCE PERCENTAGES

The asset guideline classes, asset guideline periods, asset depreciation ranges, and the annual asset guideline repair allowance percentages are prescribed as set forth below.

Asset Guideline Class	Description of Assets Included	Asset Depreciation Range (in years) Lower Limit	Asset Guideline Period	Upper Limit	Annual Asset Guideline Repair Allowance Percentage
13.0	Offshore Drilling: Includes assets used in offshore drilling for oil and gas such as floating, self-propelled and other drilling vessels, barges, platforms, and drilling equipment and support vessels such as tenders, barges, towboats and crew boats. Proc. 77-10, 1977-1 C.B. 548, as modified, is further modified by the deletion of existing asset guideline classes 15.1 (Contract Construction Other than Marine) and 15.2 (Marine Contract Construction) and the prescription of two new asset guideline classes 13.0 (Offshore Drilling) and 15.0 (Construction) with new asset guideline periods and asset depreciation ranges and annual asset guideline repair percentages. To be consistent with the aforementioned modifications, the reference to Class 15.2 in asset guideline class 13.2 should now read Class 13.0.

Rev. Proc. 80-59

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to establish the conditions under which a Presidential appointee who has an interest in a blind trust that meets the requirements of section 202(f)(4)(B) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, P.L. 95-521, 92 Stat. 1825 (1978), will be granted permission to have a trustee file the appointee's income tax return and to state the procedure that the trustee must follow in filing the appointee's income tax return.

SEC. 2. CHANGES

This revenue procedure modifies Rev. Proc. 79-43, 1979-2 C.B. 507, by setting forth the requirement that the letter granting permission for the trustee to make the appointee's return and a power of attorney both accompany the appointee's income tax return. It also sets forth the effect the Internal Revenue Service will give the power of attorney.

SEC. 3. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 202(f)(4)(B) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 provides that in the case of a trust created for the benefit of an individual appointed by the President, by and with the consent of the Senate, an asset placed in trust will not be considered a financial interest of the individual for purposes of section 208 of title 18, United States Code, and any other conflict of interest statutes or regulations if certain requirements are met including giving the trustee the power to prepare on behalf of the individual the personal income tax return and similar returns which may contain information relating to the trust.

.02 Section 1.6012-1(a)(5) of the Income Tax Regulations, concerning returns made by agents, permits a return to be made by an agent if the taxpayer requests permission, in writing, of the appropriate district director and the district director determines that good cause exists for permitting an agent to make the return. That section provides that whenever a return is made by an agent it must be accompanied by a power of attorney (or copy thereof) authorizing the agent to represent the principal in making the return.

.03 Section 601.502(c)(1) of the Statement of Procedural Rules provides that a power of attorney which specifies the specific act to be performed is required if a taxpayer wishes to authorize his or her representative to perform any of the following acts: (1) Receive (but not endorse or collect) a check in payment of any refund of taxes, penalties or interest; (2) Execute a waiver of restriction on assessment or collection of a deficiency in tax, or a waiver of notice of disallowance of a claim for credit or refund; (3) Execute a consent to extend the statutory period for assessment or collection of a tax; or (4) Execute a closing agreement under section 7121 of the Code.

.04 Section 601.506(a) of the Statement of Procedural Rules provides that any notice or communication (or a copy thereof) required or permitted to be given to a taxpayer in any matter before the Service shall be given to the taxpayer's recognized representative. However, if such notice or communication contains confidential information with respect to the taxpayer, the notice or communication will be given to the representative only if there is on file with the Service a power of attorney or a tax information authorization in the matter signed by the taxpayer.

SEC. 4. PROCEDURE

.01 A presidential appointee who has an interest in a blind trust that meets the requirements of section 202(f)(4)(B) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 and who requests permission, in writing, of the appropriate district director, for the taxpayer's federal income tax return to be filed by the trustee of the blind trust, will be considered to have shown good cause for receiving permission to have the return filed by the trustee, and will automatically be granted such permission. A separate request must be made for each taxable year.

.02 The trustee must submit with the return a copy of the letter from the Internal Revenue Service granting the trustee permission to sign the appointee's return. In addition, the return must be accompanied by a power of attorney (or copy thereof) that grants the trustee authority to sign the return, to receive (but not endorse or collect) a refund check, to execute a waiver of restriction on assessment or collection, to execute a waiver of notice of disallowance, to execute a consent to extend the period for assessment or collection, and to execute a closing agreement.

.03 All notices or other written communication required or permitted to be given to the appointee will be given to the trustee.

SEC. 5. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective as of December 29, 1980, the date of its publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

SEC. 6. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 79-43 is modified and superseded.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to bring up to date the procedure to be followed in computing reductions in the credit against the tax reportable on Form 940, Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment Tax Return, for 1980.

[1] Also released as News Release IR-80-131, dated December 17, 1980.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 3301 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes an excise tax on employers based on wages paid to employees. Section 3306(a) defines the term "employer" for purposes of the tax imposed by section 3301.

.02 Section 3302 of the Code provides for credits against the tax imposed by section 3301. Reductions in the amount of credit otherwise allowable are provided for in section 3302(c). Section 3302(c)(2) provides that reductions shall occur if an employer pays wages for services performed in a state that has not restored amounts that were advanced under title XII of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. sections 1321-1324(1976).

.03 Section 3302(c)(2)(A) of the Code, in conjunction with section 3302(d), provides that for each consecutive calendar year beginning with the second consecutive calendar year in which the advances have not been repaid, the reduction is equal to 0.3 percent of the wages (as defined in section 3306(b)) paid.

.04 Section 3302(c)(2)(B) of the Code provides for an additional reduction for the third or fourth consecutive year in which the advances have not been repaid if the average employer contribution rate for such state for the preceding year is less than 2.7 percent. Section 3302(d)(7) provides that the percentage of the additional reduction is determined by the Secretary of Labor.

.05 Section 3302(d)(3) of the Code provides that credit reductions for any year may be forestalled if a state restores to the United States Treasury, before November 10 of that year, the full amount of the advances.

.06 For purposes of the tax imposed by section 3301 of the Code, section 3306(j)(1) provides that the term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 3. CREDIT REDUCTIONS FOR 1980

.01 As of November 10, 1980, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the States of Illinois, Maine, and New Jersey had not repaid the advances for the second consecutive year, within the meaning of section 3302(c)(2) of the Code. Therefore, the credit reductions will take effect in the amount of 0.3 percent of the wages (as defined in section 3306(b)) paid by employers during 1980 that are attributable to those "States."

.02 As of November 10, 1980, the District of Columbia and the States of Delaware, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Vermont had not repaid the advances for the third consecutive year, within the meaning of section 3302(c)(2) of the Code. Therefore, the credit reductions will take effect in the amount of 0.6 percent of the wages (as defined in section 3306(b)) paid by employers during 1980 that are attributable to those "States."

.03 As of November 10, 1980, the State of Connecticut had not repaid the advances for the third consecutive year, within the meaning of section 3302(c)(2) of the Code. Also, the Secretary of Labor has timely certified to the Secretary of the Treasury that in accordance with the provisions of section 3302(c)(2)(B) an additional credit reduction will apply. Therefore, the credit reduction will take effect in the amount of 0.7 percent (0.6 percent for the two consecutive years plus an additional 0.1 percent) of the wages (as defined in section 3306(b)) paid by employers during 1980 that are attributable to the State of Connecticut.

SEC. 4. PROCEDURE

.01 If a credit reduction applies, it is computed on Part I, lines 6 and 7, of the Form 940 for 1980.

Social Security Contribution and Benefit Base

Under authority contained in the Social Security Act, the Secretary, Department of Health and Human Services, has determined and announced (F.R. 76252, dated November 18, 1980) that the contribution and benefit base for remuneration paid in 1981 and self-employment income earned in taxable years beginning in 1981 is $29,700.

It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

New Short Form Gift Tax Return

Announcement 80-161

A new Form 709-A, United States Short Form Gift Tax Return, will be available for filing in 1981 to cover gifts made in calendar year 1980. For many taxpayers, Form 709-A will be easier to complete than the longer Form 709. For example, the form may be used in situations where a gift tax return is required to elect gift splitting, but no gift tax is due because of the spouses' combined annual exclusions.

Revised Extension Forms 2350, 2688, and 4868

Announcement 80-162

Forms 2350, Application for Extension of Time to File, 2688, Application for Extension of Time to File, and 4868, Application for Automatic Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, have been revised to reflect the provisions of Pub. L. 96-167, 1980-1 C.B. 483, which amended section 6075(b) of the Code. That section, as amended, provides that any extension of time granted a taxpayer for filing a calendar year income tax return also extends the time granted the taxpayer for filing a gift tax return that is due by April 15th following the close of the fourth calendar quarter.

A line has been added to Form 4868 so the taxpayer can enter and pay any expected gift tax that will be due on the gift tax return.

Forms 2688 and 2350 have been changed from continuous-use forms to annual forms. They will therefore now have a year designation. Form 2688 (Revised October 1978) and Form 2350 (Revised January 1980) should not be used for tax years beginning in 1980.

The revised forms will be available at Internal Revenue Service offices after January 1, 1981.

Applications for recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(c)(22) of the Internal Revenue Code

Announcement 80-163

The Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980, Pub. L. 96-364, 1980-51 I.R.B. 14, provides tax exemption to trusts organized to accumulate funds in order to provide withdrawal liability payments to multiemployer pension plans.

To have tax exemption recognized by the Internal Revenue Service, a trust representative (an officer of the trust or a trustee) should write to the District Director of the Service key district for the trust's main office or place of business. No form has been provided for this purpose. The request should include a copy of the trust instrument and ask for a ruling under section 501(c)(22) of the Internal Revenue Code. The key District Directors and the areas they cover are listed in section 4 of Rev. Proc. 80-25, 1980-1 C.B. 667.

Separate Statement of Amount of Windfall Profit Tax Deductible No Longer Required

Announcement 80-165

Announcement 80-150, 1980-45 I.R.B. 31, listed new filing dates for annual statements and returns concerning the windfall profit tax. That announcement also required purchasers (or in some cases operators) to submit a separate statement of the amount deductible for income tax purposes to producers, operators, or partnerships by January 31, 1981.

The Service has received many comments from first purchasers and other windfall profit tax withholding agents concerning the difficulty encountered in providing the January 31, 1981, statement in a timely manner. Additionally, receipt of the separate statement showing this information in most instances will not provide royalty owners with the information needed to compute the new windfall profit tax credit. In fact, it may cause some royalty owners to attempt to complete the windfall profit tax credit Form 6249 prematurely. Accordingly, the separate statement cited in the above paragraph will not be required in the changes to the regulations mentioned in Announcement 80-150, but the information will be required to be furnished on Form 6248. Form 6248 will be due to royalty owners, producers, operators, or partnerships by March 31, 1981.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
H. Jim Uchida	Oakland, CA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective November 5, 1980
Stanley E. Galkin	Fort Worth, TX	Attorney	Indefinite effective November 17, 1980

Announcement of the Suspension, Termination, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension or Termination of Enrollment to Perform Actuarial Services Under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974

Under 20 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 901, an enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the initiation or conclusion of a suspension or termination proceeding, may offer his/her consent to suspension of enrollment. The Executive Director, Joint Board for the Enrollment of Actuaries, may suspend enrollment in accordance with the consent offered. An enrolled actuary whose enrollment is suspended is prohibited from performing actuarial services under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) during the period of suspension.

To enable employees of the Internal Revenue Service and others to identify enrolled actuaries under suspension, the Executive Director will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of enrolled actuaries who have been suspended. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date following suspension and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for at least three successive weeks for each enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

Mr. Charles L. Cormack, Birmingham, Alabama, has been placed under consent suspension from enrollment to perform actuarial services under ERISA. An announcement of his reinstatement will be placed in the Bulletin at the end of the period of suspension.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.
